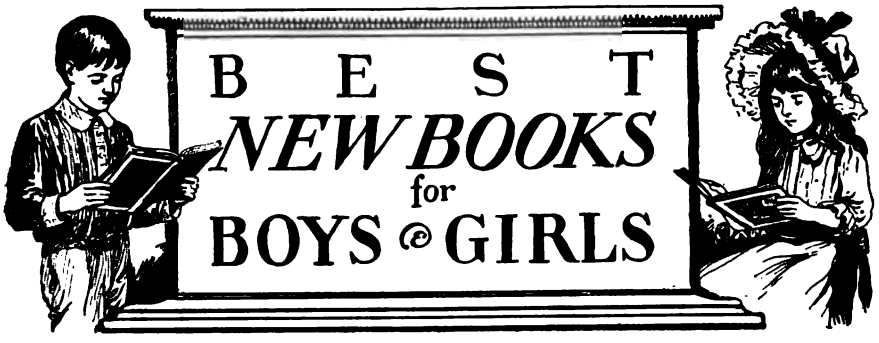
Terms of Payment on Both Regular and Special Offers

Terms are always subject to special agreement, but in general they are as follows:

On sale for 90 days: all copies sold at the end of that time to be paid for, cash in full, pro rata, the remainder to be returned to us at our expense immediately thereafter, either upon receipt of our request or at the option of the dealer. If further pictures are ordered before the end of the 90-day period, the first lot is to be paid for before the shipment of the new lot. Prices and terms on which new lot may be furnished are a matter for future agreement.

Packing: The pictures are regularly put up in flat pasteboard boxes of 100 pictures each, 95 Sepia and 5 black, or 100 in full original colors, besides two mounted pictures for display purposes.

Window-Display: Dealers are urged to give the pictures a prominent and continuous window-display.



$100 Orders: Dealers who are selling the pictures well are urged to let us ship them in lots of 1,000. We pack the 10 boxes of 100 pictures each in a neat wooden box with sliding cover. The whole occupies only two cubic feet of space. We prepay the express and all unsold pictures are returnable to us at our expense (as stated above). The profit is then 150% on every retail sale, instead of 66⅔%.

Sample Copies: A sample in sepia or black will be sent in a mailing-tube, to any address in the world, on receipt of 20 cents in stamps (of any country); in full original colors for $1.10.

STORIES FOR GIRLS

Betty Wales, Freshman

By MARGARET WARDE. Betty and her friends are typical American college girls, clever, jolly, high-spirited and lovable. They get all the fun and good possible out of their freshman year. Any one who meets them will wish to know them well. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

Betty Wales, Sophomore

By MARGARET WARDE. Those who knew Betty as a Freshman will be eager to follow her into Sophomore year. She and her friends are more interesting than ever. There is in every chapter the delightful atmosphere of the American College for girls. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

Polly the Gringo

By EVELYN RAYMOND. "Gringo" was a term applied by the Spanish natives of California to "Americanos" before California was in the Union. Polly Pancoast's father and brother went to California, and Polly followed them alone. Her experiences form a story of unusual charm in character and incident. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

An American Girl in Korea

By ANNIE M. BARNES. This very timely book offers a fascinating glimpse of the strange "Hermit Country." Margaret, although imprisoned in the underground dungeon of a monastery by Buddhist priests, whose mysterious rites she has witnessed, escapes and also frees a young artist. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

STORIES FOR BOYS

Winning His Way to West Point

By CAPT. PAUL B. MALONE, U. S. A. A thrilling story of a young recruit in the Philippines after the transfer to the United States. The scenes are those of camp, skirmish and battle. As a result of his bravery the hero wins an appointment to West Point. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

A Plebe at West Point

By CAPT. PAUL B. MALONE, U. S. A. Douglas Atwell won his cadetship by his bravery in the Philippines, and now appears at West Point. Capt Malone knows the cadet life at first hand, and his story will stir the blood of every reader. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

Fighting King George

By JOHN T. McINTYRE. Tom Deering was one of "Marion's Men," those fleet and daring riders who so baffled Tarleton and Clinton in the Carolinas. Tom sees lots of fighting and has the good fortune to be at Yorktown when Cornwallis gives up his sword. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

The Lost Expedition

By W. BERT FOSTER. This story, of how a professor and two young companions were lost on an Alaskan glacier, and how they escaped death in a dozen forms, has all the fascination of the old Arctic exploration narratives, with the zest of a stirring plot as well. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

STORIES FOR YOUNGER CHILDREN

Marjorie's Way

By ALICE TURNER CURTIS. Marjorie had two aims—to be like her aunt, and to help Luke Saunders. Luke turned out well and Marjorie did become like her aunt in a surprising way. A very wholesome and charming story. Cloth, illustrated, $1.00.

The Boynton Pluck

By HELEN WARD BANKS. Bob and Billy by mistake get into the hands of a mean old farmer, who overworks and half starves them. It takes pluck to stand it, but they pull through it, and are all the better for their experience. Cloth, illustrated, $1.00.

COMPLETION OF THE

American Catalog

The Second (or Supplementary Volume) nearly ready

We are now completing the printing of the second volume of the new "American Catalog, 1900–1905," which will be ready for delivery in November.

The first volume, issued in June last, is a complete record in itself, being a dictionary-catalog of all books recorded between January 1, 1900, and January 1, 1905. In its one alphabet every book is entered at least three times (by author, title and subject), with information as to size, price, publisher, year of issue, etc. It forms the latest addition to the old series of the "American Catalogue," published in quarto form, while the newest volume is an octavo, which is generally conceded to be a much handier shape. We can reasonably affirm that every dealer needs such a permanent catalog in his business, while every library of importance should have this standard bibliographical work on its shelves, since its usefulness in the world of books is on a par with a time-table in the railroad world.

The second, or supplementary volume, contains the full title entries, with annotations, given in the "Weekly Record" of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY during the five years 1900, '01, '02, '03, '04, cumulated into one alphabet for each year; that is, into five alphabets. This is planned to answer the demands of librarians, booksellers and others who wish this valuable material, in available shape, for classifying and describing and for permanent reference.

For the book dealer the second volume is a very useful record of book valuation. It gives in form for ready reference brief descriptive notices of the important books published during the period mentioned, describing concisely the contents of each work and explaining many titles which, in themselves, mean little or nothing or are misleading. For descriptive cataloging, a bibliographical work of this kind is almost priceless.

The two volumes are uniformly bound in half morocco. The price is $12.00 for both or $7.50 for either separately. The edition is limited, but 240 copies of the first volume and 145 of the second volume remain unsold. We reserve the right to advance the price when the balance of either is reduced to 100 copies.

The BOOKS FIRST

All Three Backed Up Strongly By Newspaper Advertising

"A MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE," by Gordon Holmes, was an unexpected "find." It was advertised first in a rather half-hearted fashion. Then it started to move faster and faster. Now it is in full swing, and the advertising is quadrupled.

"THE LOST VIOL," by M. P. Shiel, and "THE GREAT MOGUL," by Louis Tracy, make two more great stories for Fall trade.

The Wife of the Secretary of State

By

ELLA MIDDLETON TYBOUT

Author of

"POKETOWN PEOPLE"

A story of mystery, intrigue, and love; the scene is laid in Washington; the characters representing some of the best-known figures in Capital life. Miss Tybout's stories have made her widely known to thousands of people, and her book of last year, "Poketown People," was a big success. The new novel will entertain every one who likes to guess at a secret and who enjoys a thoroughly good love-story.

THE SECOND

FRENCH EMPIRE

By Dr. THOS. W. EVANS. Edited by Dr. E. A. CRANE. Illustrated. 8vo. Ornamental Cloth, $3.00 net. (In a box.)

Dr. Evans was the American dentist who aided the Empress Eugénie in her escape from Paris after Sedan. He was a personal friend of the Emperor, and paints an intensely vivid, human and touching picture of the fallen great people and of the times.

Dr. Evans was intimate not only with the Emperor and Empress, but with all the celebrities who came to the French court. He was always a guest of honor at all the grand functions, and describes everything with a minute faithfulness. The book is of great historical interest and value.

OUTSIDE THE LAW

By JAMES BARNES. Illustrated. 12mo. Ornamental Cloth, $1.50

This is a detective story written from a novel point of view. A great crime has been committed, bank robbery, forgery, and possibly murder. The detectives fail to see any of the evidence and give up the case. They even go so far as to state that no crime has been committed. The conduct of the whole affair is left to the man who is chiefly implicated. He endeavors to work it out with the aid of the daughter of the man who has been accused of the crime and the man himself.

HARPER'S NEW PUBLICATIONS

Land Ho!

By MORGAN ROBERTSON

In "Land Ho!" the reader will be delighted with Scotty, an original old salt fallen through force of circumstances to be deck-hand on a barge ignominiously towed in and out of New York harbor. Even in this limited sphere, many are the vicissitudes of Scotty's life, and every adventure is both exciting and mirth-provoking. Humor and pathos are mingled in pleasing measure in these refreshing stories of the sea, which bear out Mr. Robertson's reputation as a teller of capital sea-yarns.

The German Struggle for Liberty

By POULTNEY BIGELOW

Author of "The Borderland of Czar and Kaiser," etc.

A new volume (vol. IV.) of this notable history, giving a spirited narrative of the stirring events in Germany during the years 1844-1848, culminating in the declaration of Frederick William IV. and the meeting of the German National Assembly at Frankfort. The similar character of the revolutions in Vienna, Munich, and Berlin is shown, and the growth of the influence of the laboring classes, and of socialist doctrines under Engels and Marx. The volume is worthy of being the fourth in a series which has been so well received, and is now complete from the battle of Jena, in 1806, to the rebirth of the national spirit in 1848.

Vol. IV. (Uniform with Vols. I.-III.) Illustrated. $2.25 net.

The

Principles of Money and Banking

By CHARLES A. CONANT

Author of "A History of Modern Banks of Issue."

One of the creditable features of Mr. Conant's work is that he treats the progress of the gold standard as an evolution rather than a victory for a faction. The thread of evolution running from the beginnings of the use of cattle as money down to the perfected coin of modern times is one of the special themes. The fact that Mr. Conant has had a large part in framing the policies and measures which have established the gold standard in the Philippines and Panama, and confirmed it in the United States, applies to his work the touchstone of experience and should give to it an essentially practical character.—Bankers' Magazine.

MEREDITH NICHOLSON'S

The House of a Thousand Candles

BY the terms of his grandfather's will, Jack Glenarm, globe-trotter, was to spend one whole year in a strange candle-lighted palace by an Indiana lake. If he left his place of exile, all the money would revert to a beautiful girl, whom he had never heard of before. If he should marry the beautiful unknown, the estate would go to charity.

So Jack gave up his dreams of foreign travel and started west. Then things began to happen to him in a hurry. They did not cease happening for some time thereafter. And a girl in a red tam-o'-shanter led him the liveliest love-chase imaginable.

The House of a Thousand Candles is a novel of romance and adventure, of love and valor, of mystery and hidden treasure. It will set your pulse a-beating and hold you fast by its entrancing charm.

The HEART of LADY ANNE

By AGNES and EGERTON CASTLE

Authors of "Rose of the World," "The Pride of Jennico," etc.

Here is what "might be called 'A Tale in Porcelain' of a taming of a shrew."

"Shrew, no doubt, is too harsh a name for so dainty a piece as my young Lady Anne. Taming, again, is perhaps an overweighty word to paint the conflict of hearts and wit—full of anxiety at times, but always of courtesy."

With four full-page illustrations in color by ETHEL FRANKLIN BETTS, and decorative title-page, initial letters, chapter titles, and end papers by FREDERICK G. HALL.

Cloth, 12mo, $1.50. White cloth, full gilt, boxed, $2.50

The BLACK SPANIEL

By ROBERT HICHENS

Author of "The Garden of Allah," "Felix," etc.

"The Black Spaniel," the long story that with several shorter ones makes up this volume, is as unusual and original as the novels the author has given us previously. Aside from its compelling appeal against vivisection, the story has as its theme a most curious and realistic psychological motive growing out of the cruel treatment of a little dog, that baffles the reader and, even against his will, holds his attention to the last page.

The remaining stories are chiefly of The Desert—the fascinating background of Mr. Hichens's masterpiece, "The Garden of Allah."

NOTES IN SEASON

THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY have brought out a new book by Marion Harland, who for a third of a century has been an authority on domestic and social manners. The book is entitled "Everyday Etiquette," and is a simple, but thorough treatment of the subject of conduct.

THOMAS NELSON & SONS have just brought out in their New Century Library Shakespeare's works in six volumes. These books are printed from clear, readable type on India paper and compactly bound in cloth and limp leather, making a desirable edition in both styles. The New Century Library now includes the complete works of Dickens, Thackeray, Scott and Shakespeare, and selected works of the best authors all in uniform and convenient form.

LITTLE, BROWN & Co. publish to-day "American Railroad Rates," by Judge Walter C. Noyes, of New London, Conn., an important new book on a timely subject, which treats fully the subject of rate-making and suggests a plan for federal regulation; also, "The Florence of Landor," by Lilian Whiting, whose aim in this handsome book is to suggest the living drama that was set in the scenic enchantment of Florence during the period of Landor's life in that city from 1821 to 1864. They will publish next week George Wharton James's new book, "In and Out of the Old Missions of California," with about 150 illustrations.

JOHN LANE COMPANY have just ready a work entitled "The Singing of the Future," by D. Ffrangeon Davis, with an introduction by Sir Edward Elgar, the object of which is primarily to assist vocalists in their artistic studies, and enable them to understand and appreciate the influence of the brain upon vocal interpretation; "The Poems of William Watson," a collection made by the author of his poems to date, edited by J. A. Spender, a critic of the highest standing in England; also, "Jane Austen's Sailor Brothers," by J. H. and Edith C. Hubback, describing the adventures of Miss Austen's brothers, Sir Francis Austen, Admiral of the Fleet, and Rear-Admiral Charles Austen.

HARPER & BROTHERS have just brought out "The Principles of Money and Banking," in two volumes, by Charles A. Conant, a prominent New York banker and author. The scope of the present work carries the reader from the beginnings of exchange, when cattle and fragments of metal passed by tale or weight, down through the origin of coinage and the birth-throes of modern banking to the complete mechanism of money and credit as they exist to-day. The subject of banking principles is treated with a fulness based upon long study of the banking systems of the world, and Mr. Conant supports his abstract reasoning by many historical illustrations. Mr. Conant's work as member of the Philippine and Mexican monetary commissions has enabled him to give his book great practical as well as theoretical value. They have also just ready the fourth volume of Poultney Bigelow's "The German Struggle for Liberty," in which he gives a spirited narrative of the stirring events in Germany during the years 1844-48, which culminated in the declaration of Frederick William IV., and the meeting of the German National Assembly at Frankfort; and "Land Ho!," a new volume of sea tales by Morgan Robertson, himself for many years a sailor.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.

☞ The prices of net books published under the rules of the American Publishers' Association are preceded in this list by a double asterisk , and the word net follows the price. The prices of fiction (not net) published under the rules are preceded by a dagger †. Bronson, Walter Cochrane, comp. and ed. English essays; selected and ed. by Walter C. Bronson. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1905. c. 5+404 p. O. cl., $1.25.
"This book has been made with a definite, practical object in view, which has set certain limits to it and determined its nature and method. It is intended for use with college classes in introductory courses in literature; and the chief purpose of it is to cultivate in the undergraduate a liking for good English prose and to give him some knowledge of English thought as it has found expression in English essays of the last three hundred years, by putting into his hands a not too bulky collection of interesting texts by some of the greater essayists from Bacon to Stevenson."—Preface.

Brooks, W: Keith. The oyster: a popular summary of a scientific study. 2d ed., rev. Balt., Md., Johns Hopkins Press, 1905. c. 14+225 p. O. cl., *$1 net.
See notice P. W., "Weekly Record," May 16, 1903 [1007]. The new matter refers to minor points with one exception. A new chapter deals with the special fitness of the oyster for gathering up the germs of cholera and typhoid fever and transmitting them to man. The increasing danger of the pollution of the oyster districts by sewage near growing towns and cities is clearly and logically stated and forms a notable addition to the present edition.

Broughton, Rhoda. A waif's progress: [a novel.] N. Y., Macmillan, 1905. 402 p. 12°, cl., †$1.50.

Brown, Alice. Paradise. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1905. [O.] c. 3+388 p. D. cl., †$1.50.
The plot concerns few people. Malory Dwight, a fine specimen of country manhood in search of a nurse to tend his dying sister, meets Barbara, the heroine, escaping from a travelling circus where she has been a palmist and has done conjuring tricks for her adopted father. She wins the hearts of the most heterogeneous characters with most of whom religion is a very real thing. Barbara's reverent, religious mind and her old career as palmist war constantly and lead to many fine discussions with her neighbors. Several very amusing characters cheer the story.

Brown, Marcus Monroe. A study of John D. Rockefeller, the wealthiest man in the world; with his name left out, the history of education and religion could not be written: [with a chapter by Virgil P. Kline, answering Ida M. Tarbell's article in Mc-

Browning, Rob. Select poems of Robert Browning arranged in chronological order; with biographical and literary notes by A. J. George. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1905. [O.] c. 37+417 p. por. D. cl., $1.50.

The poems are arranged in chronological order; and the notes are biographical and literary, relating each poem to the events in the author's life out of which it grew, and to the characteristic forms of art in his own career and that of his great contemporaries, Wordsworth and Tennyson. This method of study has been tested for a long time by the editor in school and college classes, and with general readers, and has been found to be stimulating and rewarding. The only poems not given entire are "Pauline," "Paracelsus," and "Pippa passes."

Contents: Introductory remarks on the importance of othodoxy(!); On the negative spirit; On Mr. Rudyard Kipling and making the world small; Mr. Bernard Shaw; Mr. H. G. Wells and the giants; Christmas and the æsthetes; Omar and the sacred vine; The mildness of the yellow press; The moods of Mr. George Moore; On sandals and simplicity; Science and the savages; Paganism and Mr. Lowes Dickinson; Celts and Celtophiles; On certain modern writers and the institution of the family; On smart novelists and the smart set; On Mr. McCabe and a divine frivolity; On the wit of Whistler; The fallacy of the young nation; Slum novelists and the slums; Concluding remarks on the importance of orthodoxy.

Church, Rev. Alfred J: The crown of pine: a story of Corinth and the Isthmian games; il. by G: Morrow. N. Y., Scribner, 1906, [1905.] 5-309 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

The story is laid in the 50th year of the Christian era. The author has transferred to the Isthmian games some details of the proceedings at the great festival of Olympia. He keeps closely to what is known or at least probable although he pleads the license allowed to the exigencies of fiction. The chronology of St. Paul's life is uncertain, but the author thinks the date he has chosen is accepted by authoritative writers.

Cicero, Marcus Tullius. Select orations; with explanatory notes and a special dictionary, by Albert Harkness; adapted to the author's revised standard grammar.. N. Y., American Book Co., [1905.] c. 12+391+5 p. pls., 12°, cl., $1.40.

Dawson, Miles Menander. The business of life insurance. N. Y., A. S. Barnes & Co., 1905. [S.] c. 8+404 p. D. cl., $1.50 net.
The author is the actuary of the New York Legislative Committee for the Investigation of Life Insurance and an acknowledged expert in the science of insurance. His book is intended for all those who hold or contemplate life insurance. It speaks plain truths and does full justice to the merits of life insurance and it also deals unsparingly with the evils and defects of the system. The book is the result of twenty-five years of close and assiduous practical study and observation.

Day, Emily Foster. The Menehunes: their adventures with the fisherman and how they built the canoe; il. by Spencer Wright. San Francisco, Paul Elder & Co., [1905.] c. unp. S. cl., 75 c. net.
The Menehunes were tiny people of the forest and rivers, the ancient folk-lore of the Hawaiian Islands being full of tales of their wonderful works. A pretty Christmas book, printed in browns, having borders to the text pages, and a number of full-page pictures.

Dexter, H: Martyn, D.D., and Morton. The England and Holland of the pilgrims, by the late Henry Martyn Dexter, D.D., and his son, Morton Dexter. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1905. [O.] 12+673 p. il. O. cl., $3.50 net.
At his death in 1890 the author had collected the materials for a history of the Pilgrim movement, which resulted in the Plymouth Colony in 1620, and had nearly finished the first rough draft of the proposed work. It was completed by Prof. Franklin B. Dexter of Yale, and since then has been wholly re-written by the author's son who has added much material from his own researches. An appendix contains every recorded fact about each member of the Pilgrim Company during the eleven years' residence in Leyden.

Dickens, C: A Christmas carol and The cricket on the hearth; il. by G: Alfred Williams. N. Y., Baker & Taylor Co., [1905.] c. 3-198 p. sq. O. cl., $2.
The publishers have made these two favorites of the "Christmas stories" into a holiday gift book of large size with ten full-page illustrations, one in color. The text is set in red line borders and the cover is of dark green with rich gilt lettering and three little colored pictures that have the effect of miniatures in little gilt frames.

Dudley, Earl of, [J: W: Ward.] Letters to "Ivy," [Helen d'Arcy Stewart,] from the first Earl of Dudley, by S. H. Romilly. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1905. 6+395 p. pors. O. cl., *$5 net.

Fitzmaurice, Lord Edmond G. The life of Granville George Leveson Gower, second Earl Granville, K.G., 1815-1891. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1905. 2 v., 20+543; 14+53 p. pors. O. cl., *$10 net.
The times and events covered are about the same as those of Morley's "Gladstone." Lord Granville was also a Liberal and held many important offices under his great leader and this work brings out the close connection both political and personal between the two great statesmen. Extracts from the correspondence between Lord Granville and Lord Canning take up much of the first volume and the great Irish question, treated in correspondence with Gladstone, William Edward Forster and Lord Spencer, is of great importance and much of it published for the first time.

The final volume of the late author's series on the "Beginnings of the Christian church." In it this scholarly member of the Biblical Commission reviews the history of the church from the martyrdom of St. Paul to the death of St. John, with the intention "to furnish the reader with a picture of actual conditions at the close of the first century when St. John had outlived all his brethren in the Apostolate."

Freeman, Mrs. Mary Eleanor Wilkins. The debtor: a novel; il. by W. D. Stevens. N. Y., Harper, 1905. [O.] c. 5+563 p. D. +$1.50.
A story of every-day life in a New Jersey village. The Carrols, an impoverished, easy-going Southern family, have lately arrived and get all they want, living wholly on credit. The chief "debtor" is the handsome father who knows nothing with which to earn a penny except a song and dance learned from an old darkey. Unknown to his family he often disappears "on business," and always brings home a little much-needed money. How it all turns out is too good to tell. The love of one of his daughters saves the father and she is at last provided for by a tradesman on whom the family has looked down.

The scene is Richmond and environs as it was in the stormy days when the war closed in 1865. There are two heroines, one the dainty daughter of a courtly old father, and the other the daring daughter of a celebrated Confederate spy. The heroes also represent both sides of the struggle, and the rival courtships blend in very artistic manner.

O. cl., *$2.60 net; for set 12 v., *$28 net.

This is the first instalment of a work to consist of twelve volumes by twelve different writers, each of them chosen as being specially capable of dealing with the period which he undertakes. As its title imports this history will primarily deal with politics, with the history of England and after the date of the union with Scotland, Great Britain as a state or body politic—notices, however, of religious matters, and of intellectual, social and economic progress will also find a place in it. Each volume, while forming part of a complete history, will also in itself be a separate and complete book, will be sold separately, and will have its own index and two or more maps. This v. 10 is the first of the 12 vs. published.

This chapter of the "little colonel's" story has its scene in Madam Chartley's aristocratic school on the Potomac, known as Warwick Hall. Here Lloyd and Allison and the other Kentucky girls meet new friends, and have many good times. Lloyd Sherman has grown so beautiful that her title of "Little Colonel" has that of "Princess" substituted for it. The story ends with Lloyd's going home for the Christmas holiday, and the events of her vacation.

Michelson, Miriam. A yellow journalist. N. Y., Appleton, 1905. [O.] c. 5+315 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

The author of "In the bishop's carriage" has written a series of scenes in the life of a modern newspaper woman. The intense desire of an expert reporter to "cover" an "assignment" well and exhaustively is well described. The melodramatic atmosphere in which a searcher of secrets must live pervades the book, but mixed with the excitement there is humor and pathos and large knowledge of humanity at its best and worst.

The scene is old New York shortly after the Revolution. The historic sights, buildings, theatres, and views of the beauties of New Jersey are mixed with pure romance in which there is much humor and some pathos. The story is published as a gift-book with marginal decorations in tint of the many situations described. A good part of the love story plays among theatrical people, and the first scene is lighted with the candles of the Old Park Theatre.

Sturgis, Russell. The appreciation of pictures: a handbook. N. Y., Baker & Taylor Co., [1905. S.] c. 4-308 p. O. cl., $1.50 net.

The fourth volume in a series intended to show the independent artistical standard of judgment. The volumes on Sculpture and Architecture were simpler than this because the art of the picture maker is very much more elaborate than are the two arts already treated. Seventy-three pictures illustrate the author's thoughts and teachings, and make this a fine handbook with which to study some of the greatest pictures of the world.

This edition is limited to 489 copies. Printed for members only.

Thorpe, Francis Newton. The divining rod: a story of the oil regions. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1905. 5+356 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

A realistic story of the oil fields in their early days, dealing with the discovery, development and exploitations of oil, how it all led to lust for gain, unscrupulous methods to acquire money, the squeezing out of the small concerns by the larger one and by the "legitimate methods" so well described in the tale. A story of home life and family devotion lightens the sombreness of the pictures of man's love of money, which is here shown to be indeed the "root of all evil," revealed in the plot.

Thwing, Eugene. The man from Red Keg; il. by Walter H. Everett. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1905. 4+431 p. D. cl., †$1.50.
The scene is the same as that of the author's "The Red Keggers," somewhere in the farming and lumbering regions of Kentucky. A young printer comes to the little town of Midland and soon makes himself felt in the affairs of the town and in its social life. He soon comes into opposition with the talented but unprincipled "editor" who has been a power. The printer exposes some rascally swindles and begins a work of reform in the district.

Webster, Noah. Webster's imperial dictionary of the English language: being the authentic unabridged dictionary by Noah Webster, LL.D.; with an exhaustive appendix, including Scripture proper names, and pronouncing vocabulary of Greek and Latin proper names prepared under the direction of Noah Porter; thoroughly rev. and greatly enl. and improved by over one hundred educators, specialists and other scholars, under the editorial supervision of T: H. Russell, Albert C. Bean and L. B. Vaughan; with il., col. pls. and tables. Chic., G: W. Ogilvie, 1905. 24+1956+187 p. 4°, shp., $5; rus., $8.

Weyman, Stanley J: Starvecrow farm. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1905. c. '04. 6+429 p. 12°, cl., †$1.50.
The scene is rural England in the rugged North: the time a few years after the Battle of Waterloo. It is the story of an elopement, but the eloping heroine does not marry the man with whom she elopes, but the one from whom she flees. The reader's sympathies pass from one character to the other and the interest increases to the last unexpected surprise.

Whiting, Lilian. The joy that no man taketh from you. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., [1905. O.] c. 6+77 p. S. cl., 50 c. net.
In this little book Lilian Whiting discusses the problem as to whether, after all, here and now in our human life, the joy that the world cannot give nor take away may not be achieved by the soul "so that neither death nor privation, nor loss nor disappointment, nor trial in any of its innumerable forms, shall dim this radiance or diminish this energy."

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

NOVEMBER 4, 1905.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

Publishers are requested to furnish title page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers and librarians depend on the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalog," and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

LOYALTY IN SERVICE.

MUCH of the success of a merchant depends upon the loyalty of his assistants. By loyalty we do not understand so much a defense of the reputation and the standing of the house one works for as the service that is rendered to it. It must be sufficient for the employee that his employer conducts his business on business principles, fairly and honestly. To be loyal to such an employer is an easy matter. If the employee knows that his employer is dishonest, and that he expects him to condone and recognize his crooked methods, and his conscience troubles him, let him get out and seek employment elsewhere, unless he wishes to become an accessory to fraud. In either case it were politic not to advertise the actions of his employer either by open accusation or innuendo. Time will take care of the wrongdoer; and even if he be overlooked by fate, the employee who flings mud at his past or present employer will get little thanks for his efforts.

Everything else being equal, loyalty to one's firm consists in the faithful fulfilment of every duty that may arise in the day's task —in giving a full labor equivalent for what wages are expected. Much too often the employed strive to give as little as possible and get as much as they can in return. If such shirks could actually compare the services that produced what they received with the work they themselves did for it, it might bring a greater feeling of responsibility, and more desire to work as if they themselves were actually producing the good things or good work received in exchange.

Every clerk should feel his responsibility to this extent, namely, that he is acting in the place of his principal; that, inasmuch as he proves himself acceptable to the patrons of his house by attentive, courteous and intelligent service, he is bringing glory upon the house he represents as well as upon himself. If he is alive to his responsibilities he will be as alert to protect the interests of his co-workers as his own by advice and assistance in their duties and perplexities as well as by his example.

The faithful and loyal employee will stand at his post so long as duty claims him, will perform his duties conscientiously unwatched, and will take as much pride in what his firm achieves as he will in his own individual performance. Such a worker will not have worked in vain, whether recognition comes to him early or late—or never at all.

THE appointment of Mr. Charles A. Stillings as Public Printer is the result of a most thorough and painstaking endeavor by the President to obtain the best man available for the place. To fill a post which involves the oversight of business amounting to $7,000,000 a year and the handling of some of the most difficult problems in the country, at a salary within $5000, is an almost impossible task, but it is to be hoped that the result of this appointment will justify the President's expectations. Mr. Stillings, though still a man of middle age, has had wide experience in printing—his father being one of the best-known printers in Boston—and latterly he has had a wide range of experience as the secretary and executive of the Printers' Board of Trade, which is quite a different organization from the Typothetae and of different purpose. The President consulted men in different parts of the country as to possible candidates, absolutely independent of political consideration, in seeking a man who would be, first of all, an honest administrator of the affairs of the Government; and it is to be hoped that he has found in Mr. Stillings the right man in the right place. Mr. Stillings was cordially commended by the leading printing houses of New York for the post, and there is general belief here that he is certainly one of the best, if not the best man, who could be had for the money and the public service involved. It is to be hoped that, should Mr. Stillings succeed in a difficult task, Congress will make the compensation of the post adequate to its responsibilities and difficulties.

A NATIONAL PHILANTHROPIC PUBLICATION COMMITTEE.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the organization of a national publication committee in the field of practical philanthropy and social advance—a distinctly American idea. Its first work has been to merge Charities of New York, and The Commons of Chicago, and hereafter they will come out as a combined weekly publication, from the office of the Charity Organization at 105 East Twenty-Second Street, New York City,.

From its inception Charities has stood for progress in organized effort for bettering conditions, while The Commons has been an exponent of the settlement movement. Their editors, Edward T. Devine and Graham Taylor, will be associated in the editorship of the joint undertaking. Professor Taylor is head of the Chicago Commons, one of the foremost neighborhood centres of Chicago, and director of the Chicago Institute of Social Science and Arts of the University of Chicago, and a trenchant writer on economic problems. Dr. Devine is director of the New York School of Philanthropy, Professor of Social Economy at Columbia University, and President of the National Conference of Charities and Correction.

The Publication Committee has been organized along unique lines—similar to those which have crystallized reform movements in practical philanthropy—such as The National Child Labor Committee, the National Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, the National Consumers' League, and the like, and will co-operate closely with these bodies. Like the Tenement House Committee which brought about housing reform in New York, its appointment comes from the Central Council of the New York Charity Organization Society. Robert W. de Forest, president of the New York Charity Organization Society, is chairman of the committee. Other members are Jane Addams of Hull House, Chicago, author of "Democracy" and "Social Ethics;" Daniel G. Gilman of Baltimore, president emeritus of Johns Hopkins University; Joseph Lee, vice-president of the Massachusetts Civic League; Robert Treat Paine, president of the Associated Charities of Boston; Margaret Dreier Robins of Chicago, a leading member of the Women's Trade Union League and of the Inter-Municipal Committee on Household Research; S. W. Woodward, president of the Associated Charities of Washington, D. C.; Frank Tucker, vice-president and manager of the Provident Loan Society of New York; Arthur F. Estabrook, Boston, John F. Moors, Boston. and Robert S. Brewster, New York, men of affairs and broad philanthropic interests; Jacob A. Riis, author of "The Making of an American," and others equally well known in this field of work.

The working plan of the committee includes a much more broader field than the issuance of a journal. It includes the undertaking of important pieces of social investigation, the issuing of special numbers on some one social problem—such as the "Slav," "Italian," "Negro," "Juvenile Court," and "Smaller Cities" —the extension of the spirit of organized philanthropy to the smaller cities; the initiative, in the absence of other suitable agency, in bringing into practical realization the general interest in any special field; the correlation and publication of the results of investigations; and the general education of public opinion as to the needs and advance in the underlying conditions of American communities. The venture is more or less of a co-operative undertaking.

AN ART WORK AT $15,000 THE SET.

IN a suit brought October 31 in the New York Supreme Court by William A. Cooper, the fact developed that certain persons had arranged to publish photogravures of various paintings now in the galleries of New York's art collectors. There were to have been fifteen volumes, to be sold at $1000 a volume.

Cooper asked the court for a permanent injunction restraining William G. Gray and Maud Hegger from disposing of certain photographs or carbon copies of paintings made under the terms of a contract which Cooper had entered into with Merrill & Baker, the publishers.

Cooper asserts that he made a contract with Merrill & Baker to make photographic negatives of pictures which were to be reproduced in a work to be edited by John La Farge. Among the paintings so photographed, he declares, were paintings in the art galleries of George Vanderbilt, T. M. Davis, of Newport; Perry Belmont, George Gould, A. A. Pope, the late John Hay, Senator Lodge, Sir William Van Horne, Mrs. Jack Gardner, P. A. B. Widener, and the late William L. Elkins. The plaintiff adds that he employed Gray to make carbon prints from the negatives and that "Gray did appropriate to his own use carbon prints on glass."

Cooper also charges that Gray sold many carbon prints of Millet's "The Sower," a picture valued at $25,000, to the defendants, who did business under the name of "Hegger," at 288 Fifth Avenue, and to Fischel, Adler & Schwartz, of 313 Fifth Avenue, New York.

They, with the other persons named, were ordered by Justice McCall to show cause why a permanent injunction should not issue. In the meantime the court granted a temporary injunction.

HARMSWORTH INVADES AMERICA.

SIR ALFRED HARMSWORTH, the London publisher, has opened a New York office at 150 Nassau Street, in charge of C. Murray and N. H. Dubbs, and proposes to begin a campaign for a subscription book known as the "Harmsworth Self-Educator." Other lines of books are to be added to this publishing venture, we understand, should the proposed undertaking prove successful enough to warrant such an extension. A heavy advertising campaign will begin shortly, it is said. Incidentally, there is a belief that Sir Alfred intends to invade the American magazine field, either with a selection from his sixty-five British publications or new ones adapted to this country.

STILLINGS PUBLIC PRINTER.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made that the President has appointed Charles A. Stillings, of Boston, Public Printer of the United States, the appointment taking effect on November 1.

Mr. Stillings has resided in New York for a number of years as manager of the Printers' Board of Trade. He is thirty-two years old and has been engaged in the printing business for sixteen years, having entered the printing office of his father, the Griffith-Stillings Press, in Boston, when a boy. For a time he was employed as manager of the Washington Printers' Board of Trade, and while there devoted himself to a study of conditions in the Government Printing Office, of which he now becomes head.

Mr. Stillings, it is said, was appointed without regard to political influence, although the assent to his selection of the Massachusetts Senators, Lodge and Crane, was obtained by the President. He was also endorsed by numerous large printing houses, including Theodore L. DeVinne & Co., Rogers & Co., of Chicago and New York; the Methodist Book Concern, the Mudge Press of Boston, and others.

The father of Mr. Stillings is a well known citizen of Boston and was Adjutant-General on the staff of the late Gen. Blackmar when the latter was commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic.

GEORGE P. ROWELL RETIRES.

GEORGE P. ROWELL, the veteran advertising man of New York City, retired from active business on October 31, and on the evening of that day was the guest of honor at a dinner in the Astor Gallery of the Waldorf-Astoria, given by some two hundred of his friends among the advertising men.

Mr. Rowell is sixty-eight years old. He is the founder and publisher of Printer's Ink; president of George P. Rowell & Co., advertising agents at 10 Spruce Street; ex-president of the Sphinx Club, an organization of advertising and newspaper men, and publisher of "The American Newspaper Directory."

Five speeches were on the programme, but after they had been delivered impromptu speeches by friends were heard until far into the night. Artemas Ward spoke of Mr. Rowell as "The Sage of Spruce Street," Frank Presbrey as "An Advertising Agent," Frank B. Noyes as "A Publisher," H. B. Harding as "A Medicine Man," and Mr. Rowell spoke himself as the dean emeritus of his advertising brethren.

CHANGE IN THE ENGLISH RAILWAY BOOKSTALLS.

THE greatest change in the English book trade which has, perhaps, ever taken place will be the transfer shortly from W. H. Smith & Son to Wyman & Sons of the whole of the railway bookstalls on the London and North-Western Railway and the Great Western Railway—some 300 bookstalls. Travellers on these roads will no doubt miss the time-honored name of the great Strand firm, whose admirable system has been such a great convenience to the public for over half a century.

"It is impossible," says the London Publishers' Circular in noting the change, "not to recognize the very bold nature of the step taken by the Messrs. Wyman, and great interest, and not a little anxiety, is felt by booksellers generally as to what Messrs. Wyman's policy will be. Will they, for instance, give the public 3*d.* in the shilling discount on new books? We understand that, at any rate as far as the Great Western Railway goes, the Messrs. Wyman also take over the railway advertising, quite a great business in itself."

BOOKTRADE ASSOCIATION.

BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE will give a dinner on the evening of November 8 at the Aldine Association. Among the speakers will be Dr. W. A. P. Martin, for many years connected with educational matters in China. All who desire to attend must notify Francis Gilman at Charles Scribner's Sons, by November 7th at the latest, as no room at the tables can be reserved after that date. All members who have not yet received their copies of the "History of the Booksellers' League" are requested either to call for them at once or to send a ten-cent postage stamp to Charles A. Burkhardt at E. P. Dutton & Co.'s, 31 W. Twenty-third Street, New York.

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

PLAY PIRACY A CRIME.

THE first conviction made since the new copyright law was amended by Congress, to make plagiarism a crime, came in the United States District Court at Keokuk, Ia., on October 29, when the jury reported that it had found James L. Glass guilty of producing for profit a play called "Way Out West," on which Dick Ferris, theatrical manager of Minneapolis, holds the copyright.

Heretofore authors and playwrights have been unable to present evidence sufficiently strong to convict. The maximum penalty for conviction under the statute is one year, but the jury recommended clemency.

COMMUNICATIONS.

AS TO CHARLES F. AHLE.

To The Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: In your issue of the 28th inst., page 1109, you have headline "Smart Set Agent Forfeits Bail;" then follows "Charles F. Ahle, the solicitor for Fads and Fancies;" at the close of the article you say: "Counsel for Colonel W. D. Mann, publisher of Town Topics declared that Mr. Ahle was not a solicitor for that publication."

My counsel declared, and I have declared in my own columns and in interviews with the newspapers repeatedly, that Ahle was not only not an agent or in any way connected with Town Topics, but that he was not an agent or solicitor for "Fads and Fancies," a work produced by Town Topics. I can hardly understand how in fairness you could have published the head line and the statement at the beginning of your paragraph in view of this well-settled fact that the man who was arrested for an attempt to blackmail Mr. Post was representing some publication other than either Town Topics or "Fads and Fancies," and that he was not and never had been in any way connected with my publications and was not known to me, has never been seen by me or his name heard by me until his arrest. As an organ of publishers and necessarily taken as having force and influence your paper, I feel, should do me the justice of publishing this communication.

Respectfully yours,
W. D. MANN, Editor.

NEW YORK, October 31, 1905.

OBITUARY NOTES.

HENRY BAILLIÈRE, the well-known French publisher of medical books, died October 6, after a short illness, at the age of sixty-five. He was the youngest son of J. B. Baillière, who was president of the Committee on Organization of the Cercle de la Librairie in 1847, and he and his older brother, and, later, their sons continued until his death their important publications of medical work and works of natural science. He also had been a member of the Cercle de la Librairie since 1866. His funeral was attended by a notable gathering of professors, physicians, scientists and professional brethren of the publishing and bookselling trades.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

DODD, MEAD & Co. will publish this month the 1905 volume of "American Book Prices Current," recording the books sold at auction from September, 1904 to September, 1905, edited by Luther S. Livingston. The edition will be limited to approximately the number called for, and not more than 100 copies will be printed in excess of the number actually subscribed for by November 15.

THE BANKS LAW PUBLISHING COMPANY, 21 Murray Street, New York, has begun the publication of a semi-bibliographic publication entitled American Law Times. The first issue, dated September-October, 1905, contains four brief articles relating to some aspect of the law, comment by the editor, H. B. Bradbury, book news and reviews, etc. The journal, an octavo, will be brought out bi-monthly at one dollar the year.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE, London, have just brought out a helpful contribution to the bibliography of incunabula in a work entitled "Printing at Bresica in the Fifteenth Century—a list of the issues," prepared by Robert Alexander Peddie. The list is founded on that contained in Proctor's "Index of Early Printed Books," and is intended to contain a note of every book known or believed to have been printed at Bresica. Mr. Peddie notes 281 publications by twelve printers, three doubtful titles, and eight books heretofore wrongly attributed to the press of Bresica. An index of authors and their works is also appended. The work is opportune in view of the announcement of a new edition of Hain's great work. (30 p. fol. bds.)

BUSINESS NOTES.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS.—George H. Kent, for the past ten years the active member in the firm of Charles W. Sever & Co., has purchased from the estate of the late Charles W. Sever the entire interest in the business. The estate having requested that the use of the name of Charles W. Sever shall be discontinued, the business will hereafter be continued in the name of George H. Kent.

CHARLTON, IA.—Rea & Beem, booksellers, have been succeeded by Engelbretson & Manning.

HURON, S. D.—Lake & Bump, booksellers, are selling out.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—Stallman's Bookstore was burned to the ground in a fire which destroyed the entire business section of Springfield recently.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Jonathan G. Wynkoop died at his home here two weeks ago, aged eighty-one years. He was in the book business in Syracuse from 1845 until 1870.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—John H. Wills has been obliged, owing to continued poor health, to close out his Literary Shop at 506 Eleventh Street. The stock will be sold at auction. A catalogue is now in preparation.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE STITT COMPANY, New York, has just brought out "The Strange Story of the Quillmores," by A. L. Chatterton, with illustrations by Edgar J. Taylor.

"FRANKLIN IN HISTORY," by William Macdonald, announced by McClure-Phillips for publication this season, has been postponed, and will not be brought out until next spring.

THOMAS WHITTAKER will publish shortly a fully illustrated volume entitled "St. Helena, the Historic Island," by E. L. Jackson, who treats exhaustively of the island and its use as a place of detention and exile for notable state prisoners.

THE REILLY & BRITTON CO., Chicago, announce that the first edition of "Roasts," by W. M. Rhoads, a companion to "Toasts," was practically exhausted by advance orders. A second large edition is in press and may be expected shortly.

HURST & Co. have just brought out inexpensive reprints of "In School and Out," and "Rich and Humble," both by Oliver Optic. The book may be had in the Cambridge Classics, the Laurelhurst Series and in the Young America Library for Boys at prices ranging from twelve to eighteen cents net.

THE SMART SET PUBLISHING COMPANY, New York, has published a new historical novel by William Le Queux, entitled "The Czar's Spy," and deals with that side of Russia's methods which has always been considered her strongest side, and which has obtained for her so unenviable a reputation in subterranean diplomacy.

THE CENTURY COMPANY will publish shortly "Zal," subtitled "An International Romance." It is the story of a Polish pianist who comes to New York poor and a stranger and soon becomes the rage of musical America. Rupert Hughes, author of "The Love Affairs of Great Musicians" and "The Real New York," is the author.

L. C. PAGE & Co. have just brought out "Cathedrals of Northern Spain," by Charles Rudy, which completes this year's volumes in the Cathedral Series, one of the most popular series issued by this firm. Mr. Rudy is a resident of Madrid, and is corrrespondent for Paris and London papers, as well as for the well-known art magazine, The Studio.

JOHN MURRAY, the senior of the famous English publishing house, gave a few weeks ago a very interesting dinner at Prince's Restaurant, London, to celebrate the majority of his son, John Murray Jr., or John Murray v., as he may now be called. The whole of the staff of the Albemarle Street house were present, and many of the literary friends and connections of the firm.

D. APPLETON & Co. will publish on the 10th inst. Dr. Thomas W. Evans's interesting story of how he saved the Empress Eugenie, entitled "The Second French Empire," edited by Dr. E. A. Crane; "Outside the Law," a detective story by James Barnes, which made a sensation by the novelty of its plot when it appeared as a serial in McClure's Magazine; also "The Reptiles," by H. W. McVickar, a posthumous novel, illustrated by the author.

MRS. FRANCES ALEXANDER, who has translated from the Italian the more than 120 miracle stories and sacred legends which comprise the volume entitled "Il Libro d'Oro," (just brought out by Little, Brown & Co.,) is in her ninety-third year. She is the mother of Francesca Alexander, whose "Story of Ida" and collection of Italian legends published under the title of "The Hidden Servants," are widely known. Mrs. Alexander resides in Florence, Italy.

HENRY HOLT & Co. will publish at once "Loser's Luck," a novel by Charles Tenney Jackson, a new author from California, in which the "dagoes," who are proverbially pictured in literature and the drama as "foolish people," have their innings and become decidedly formidable, the result of which is, then, as the publishers' "readers" assure "some fighting that they think could hold its own with the best in literature." They will also bring out at once "The Peter Newell Mother Goose," a book originated by Miss Carolyn Sherwin Bailey, who has fitted these well loved rhymes of children into a clever setting, in which Mother Goose characters do amusing things never before chronicled.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & Co. will publish on the 10th inst., "The Tree Book," by Julia E. Rogers, with 350 photographs by A. Radclyffe Dugmore and sixteen colored plates. It will not only be a practical guide, but will deal comprehensively with the care, growth and protection of trees, the uses of wood, practical forestry, the life of trees and, what is more important for the layman, in short, tell how to know the trees. They will publish at the same time "New Games and Amusements," by Meredith Nugent; "Ferns and How to Grow Them," and "The Country House," by E. C. Holtzoper. Oliver Bronson Capen's sumptuous book, "Country Homes of Famous Americans," announced for publication last week, has been postponed a week on account of the inserting of the elaborate full-page half-tones.

MCLOUGHLIN BROTHERS have this year a veritable treasure in "McLoughlin's Christmas Annual," edited by Matilda Blair. The book is bright and cheerful in get-up, and generous in contents—infact it is made up of three or four books, the matter being classified under the headings of "Christmas in Story," "Christmas in Song," "Christmas Games" and "Historical Tales." They have also recently brought out three useful collections by the same compiler, entitled "Wee Pieces for Wee Speakers and Some Older Children," "The Ideal Speaker for Young People" and "The Nonpareil Reader and Speaker." These books will be welcomed by teachers and parents for their fresh material graded for all ages. Each volume is illustrated and attractively printed and bound.

TAYLOR & CARPENTER, booksellers of Ithaca, N. Y., have secured the exclusive sale of the few remaining copies of Mrs. Henry A. St. John's profusely illustrated volume of "Wordsworth for the Young," which was published several years ago, and is now practically out of print. "Wordsworth for the Young," with Mrs. St. John's introduction for parents and teachers, has received highly complimentary notices from foremost educators in this country and England. Letters commendatory, testifying to the usefulness of the book, and its attractiveness to the children, have been recieved from President Jacob G. Shurman, Professor Hiram Corson, Professor Edward Dowden, Professor William Knight, and other noted students of Wordsworth's poems. The few remaining copies are reduced in price to $1 a copy, net.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY have just ready a work entitled "In the Heart of the Canadian Rockies," by James Outram, which treats of those mountains for more than a hundred miles from Mt. Assiniboine to Mt. Columbia, embracing the highest peaks and the grandest scenery in North America; also, "Willy Wind and Jock and the Cheeses," real children's stories of the good old sort, by the Duchess of Buckingham and Chandos, with illustrations in color by J. S. Eland. They will publish shortly a work on the "Civil War and Reconstruction in Alabama," by Prof. Walter L. Fleming of the West Virginia University, a study of the political, social and economic effects of the war and reconstruction upon institutions that existed before the war; also, Miss Marie Van Vorst's new novel, "Miss Desmond," which is described as "a delicate, perceptive study of feminine human nature."

J. B. CARRINGTON, 14 West Twelfth Street, New York, for many years associated with the editorial department of Scribner's, and well known as an amateur photographer of exceptional skill and artistic judgment, has prepared several new illustrated lectures, among which are "American Illustrators and Their Work," including methods of reproduction in black and white and colors, illustrated with more than 100 lantern slides, many of them colored, from the work of famous illustrators; also "Days in the Open—Walks in the Fields and Woods," with upwards of 100 beautifully colored nature studies. All the slides used in these lectures are made and colored by Mr. Carrington from his own exclusive negatives. He has in preparation a lecture on the "Picturesque Aspects of a Great City," with some unusual views of New York, including a number of remarkable photographs taken at night.

MOFFAT, YARD & COMPANY have just ready "Drawings in Black and White," by Howard Chandler Christy; "The Story Bible," by Margaret E. Sangster; "The Ugly Duckling," Centenary edition, by Hans Christian Andersen; "Stork's Nest," by J. Breckenridge Ellis; "First Steps in a Child's Life," a series of five lithographs in ten printings, by Jessie Willcox Smith, and "Large Half Lengths," a set of colored lithographs by Howard Chandler Christy. Next week will come "A Corner in Women," by Tom Masson; "Aesop's Fables," a modern edition, with illustrations in colors by J. M. Condé; "The Christy Calendar;" "Pictures from Longfellow," four large lithographs in ten colors by W. L. Taylor; "The Penfield Calendar," an automobile calendar in rich striking colors and the new set of Cartoons in colors by Howard Chandler Christy. These will be followed by "Cameo Heads," a new set of color pictures. by C. Allan Gilbert.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have just ready "The Princess Priscilla's Fortnight," by the author of "Elizabeth and Her German Garden," the story of a princess who runs away from a little German court and takes refuge in an English village, told with much humor and graceful sentiment; "Mrs. Brookfield and Her Circle," by Charles and Frances Brookfield, a brilliant and amusing book of gossip and anecdote of some of the famous people in England in the middle of the eighteenth century, with twelve photogravure portraits; "The Crown of Pine," by A. J. Church, a spirited story of adventure based on historic fact and placed in the time of the Apostle Paul, with attractive illustrations in color; also, "Sir Joshua Reynolds, First President of the Royal Academy," by Sir Walter Armstrong, author of the admirable "Life of Gainsborough," published last year, and the greatest living authority on his subject, with 46 full-page illustrations in half-tone and four photogravures.

JOHN LANE COMPANY announce a collection of articles on theosophical subjects by Ethel M. Mallet, entitled "First Steps in Theosophy," an attempt to express some of the broad outlines of theosophical teaching in a simple manner; also, a sumptuous volume on Mohammedan architecture and decoration in Western Europe, by Albert F. Calvert, entitled "Moorish Remains in Spain," with 80 color plates, 200 black and white illustrations and 200 diagrams. They also announce two juveniles—"Lilliput Revels and Innocents' Island," by W. B. Rands, edited by R. Brimley Johnson, a dozen little plays in verse, with illustrations by Griselda Wedderburn; also, "A Year of Songs for a Baby in a Garden," by W. Graham Robertson, four collections of children's songs brought together for the four seasons, with illustrations by the author. The first edition of "Heretics," Gilbert K. Chesterton's original and entertaining criticism of his contemporaries, has been completely exhausted, and has gone into a new edition.

B. W. HUEBSCH, 150 Nassau Street, New York, will publish at once two books of interest to the music lover in "Beethoven, the Man and the Artist, as revealed in his own work," and "Mozart, the Man and the Artist, as revealed in his own work." Both books were compiled and annotated by Friedrich Kerst, a noted German musical writer, and have been translated into English with the consent of the author, and edited with new introductions and additional notes, by Henry Edward Krehbiel, the well-known writer and critic, who has verified all the references and amplified many of the annotations by means of the rare documents in his possession. In these volumes are gathered the utterances of Beethoven and Mozart on the important events of their lives, their views of their art, estimates of other composers and opinions of their own works, religious views, etc. These are classified under such chapter headings as "Concerning Art," "Chips from the Workshop" and "Love and Friendship," and each quotation is followed by a statement of the source whence it is taken and the circumstances under which it was said or written. These books are, in all but the sordid details of life, autobiographies.

THE ARTHUR H. CLARK COMPANY, Cleveland, O., announce two hitherto unpublished works. One of these is a "Personal Narrative of Travels in Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, and of a Residence in the Illinois Territory, 1817-1818," by Elias Pym Fordham, edited by Frederick Ogg, author of "The Opening of the Mississippi." The book is an interesting contribution to the literature of local and pioneer history. It is illustrated with facsimiles of the author's sketches and plans. The other work is entitled "Audubon's Western Journal, 1849-1850," and is an account of the experiences of John W. Audubon, son of the famous ornithologist, in the company of Colonel Webb's expedition to the gold fields of California. The work contains a biographical memoir by the author's daughter, Maria R. Audubon, and is edited by Professor Frank Heywood Hodder of the University of Kansas. There are also reproductions of original drawings, a portrait and folded maps. They also announce a reprint of the rare work entitled "The Present State of the European Settlements on the Mississippi," by Captain Philip Pittman, (London, 1770,) also edited, with introduction, notes and index, by Professor Hodder.

DODD, MEAD & COMPANY will soon publish "My Life: a Record of Events and Opinions," by Alfred Russell Wallace, who is recognized as one of the leading scientific men of the day. To him belongs the distinction of having separately formulated a theory of evolution which is substantially the same as Darwin's. The autobiography of a man who was prominent in the great scientific movement which brought to the front Darwin, Huxley and Spencer, who preceded these men and outlived them, is a notable addition to the biographical books of the season. Wallace's command of facts, his power of generalization, and the freedom of expression everywhere apparent will delight intelligent readers. They will also bring out shortly "Minutes of the Committee of Safety of the County of Tryon, from the First Meeting in the Palatine District, 24th of August, 1774, to the 24th of November, 1775," edited and annotated and illustrated with portraits, views and facsimiles; "The Cambridge Press, 1639-1692," a bibliographical account of the first printing press established in English America, together with a list of the Issues of the Press, by Robert F. Roden; also "The Declaration of Independence, its History," by J. H. Hazleton, who has based his work entirely upon original sources.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. bring out today one of the most humorous books of the year in E. Boyd Smith's "The Story of Noah's Ark," describing old Noah's experiences in building his great ship and his trials in getting its passengers aboard, in a series of twenty-six colored illustrations overflowing with humor, while the brief text, by its dry and solemn tone only serves to increase the fun; "Sidney Lanier," by Professor Edwin Mims, of Trinity College, Durham, N. C., and editor of the South Atlantic Quarterly, who presents the first complete and adequate life of the man who is fast coming into full recognition as one of the finest and truest of American poets; "Songs of America," by Edna Dean Proctor, author of "The Mountain Maid," a collection of upwards of thirty poems, many of which have not before been published; "The Chief American Poets," edited by Curtis Hidden Page, giving the best work of the greater American poets, with biographical and critical notes and a full reference list, planned primarily for college and university courses in American poetry or American literature; "Rhode Island, 1636-1905," by Irving B. Richman, formerly a member of the Iowa legislature and for five years U. S. Consul-General for Switzerland, author of "Rhode Island—its Making and its Meaning, 1636-1638"; "Cities of Paul—Beacons of the Past Rekindled for the Present," by Dr. William B. Wright, who gives descriptions of nine of the cities associated with the work and Epistles of St. Paul, such as Tarsus, Tyana, Ancyra, Philippi and others; "Etna and Kirkersville," by General Morris Schaff, an interesting history of two Ohio towns founded about seventy-five years ago, within a radius of twenty miles of which were born Sherman, Sheridan, Rosecrans, McDowell and five other generals, besides Senators Warner and Thurman; a revised edition of Carl Ploetz's "Epitome of Ancient, Mediæval and Modern History," translated and enlarged by William H. Tillinghast, with additions covering recent events; also "The Golden Goose, and other fairy tales," by Eva March Tappan, with numerous illustrations.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted" book-trade subscribers are given the privilege of a free advertisement for books out of print, of five nonpareil lines, exclusive of address, in any issue except special numbers, to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents a line, and amount should be inclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents a line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents a nonpareil line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents a nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

BOOKS WANTED.

☞ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

☞ Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly" does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

McClure's New Books

¶ Last Saturday we published five books, each of which will undoubtedly have a good sale just as soon as their merits are known. These five books are extremely varied in style.

¶ THE PANG YANGER, by Elma A. Travis, M.D. Cloth, 12mo. $1.50.

A strong novel with a cyclonic love story, brightened up by the grim humor of the Pang Yanger, Abijah Bead, the hero.

¶ I. N. R. I., by Peter Rosegger. Cloth, 12mo. Six illustrations in color. $1.50.

A reverential but daring life of Christ. Supposed to have been written by a carpenter in prison. This book created a great deal of talk in Germany and England.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is associated with two of our last Saturday's publications.

¶ TOLD BY UNCLE REMUS, by Joel Chandler Harris. Cloth. 80 illustrations. $2.00.

President Roosevelt commended the Uncle Remus books strongly in his recent speech at Atlanta, Georgia.

¶ THE MYSTERIOUS STRANGER and other Cartoons, by John T McCutcheon. Large size, paper boards. $1.50 net.

Some of the best and most amusing cartoons are upon our strenuous President. The cartoons of child-life are especially good.

¶ BIBLE HISTORY, by Prof. X. Koenig. Cloth. $1.00 net.

New and interesting facts in regard to the Old Testament, of especial interest to Sunday-school teachers, Bible students and ministers.

A little display of these books will insure a good sale, as they appeal to so many different people.

Important Announcement

FROM all over the country we have been getting special mail orders for Professor Northcote W. Thomas' two books, "THOUGHT TRANSFERENCE" and "CRYSTAL GAZING." These two books are of tremendous importance to every one interested in psychical research. Since the foundation of the Society for Psychical Research a great mass of material has been published on such subjects as Thought Transference, Crystal Gazing, Ghosts, Mediumship, Physical Phenomena and other so-called "occult" manifestations. There have—notwithstanding the great public interest in these subjects—been but few attempts to sum up the evidence and make it available for the ordinary citizen who cannot find time to read the whole of the thirty volumes published by the Society. These new volumes by Professor Thomas are of intense interest, dealing sympathetically with the evidence, and shows what any man without bias in either direction may regard as proved.

THOUGHT TRANSFERENCE. Cloth, 12mo, $1.25
CRYSTAL GAZING. Cloth, 12mo, $1.25

The Little Books on Art

This series forms an exquisitely artistic little library of art. Daintily bound, nicely printed and copiously illustrated, they are practically indispensable to the art lover.

These books are monographs in miniature, containing the complete outline of the subject under treatment and rejecting the minute details, the controversy, and the elaborate criticism which might justly find a place in a long book.

These books are produced with the greatest care. Their charm of form, their literary excellence, their many illustrations, and their low price have ensured their wide popularity. Each volume consists of about 200 pages, contains from 30 to 60 illustrations, including a frontispiece in photogravure, and is published at $1.50.

The following volumes are now ready :

REYNOLDS, by John Sime
BURNE-JONES, by F. de Lisle
REMBRANDT, by E. A. Sharp
TURNER, by Frances Tyrell-Gill

They all praise "Chronicles of the Little Tot"

EDMUND VANCE COOKE

WE are receiving more than a bushel of praise from critics, newspapers, literary men, and the public generally, about "The Chronicles of the Little Tot" by Edmund Vance Cooke. It is rare—as publishers well know—to have such a cordial reception given a volume of verse; but Mr. Cooke's quality of verse is rare and the public eagerly purchase and treasure his charmingly sympathetic child-talk and tales of the lovable "Little Tot."

Mr. Leigh Mitchell Hodges, the well-known author of "The Great Optimist," writes us as follows:

"I've just spent an hour with Mr. Cooke's 'Chronicles of the Little Tot'—about as enjoyable an hour as I ever spent in Modern Poetryland. I have laughed out loud and cried to myself. The delicious humor of 'An Arbiter of Titles' and 'The Moo Cow Moo;' the exquisite imagery of 'Throwing the Shoe' and the simple beauty of 'The Intruder' struck me immensely.

"But why didn't you put the last five poems in a book by themselves? Of all the present-day verse with which I'm familiar—and I've read a ream or two—I cannot recall five poems that approach these, and I am quite content to wrap 'The Little Boy Who Left Us' in the lavendar of love, and lay it away with 'The Dandelion,' 'The Chambered Nautilus' and 'Little Boy Blue'—my prime treasures—Americana. IT TOWERS ABOVE ADJECTIVES: IT PASSES WORDS IN ITS SURE JOURNEY TO THE HEART."

"After re-reading the whole book, and reading the last five poems probably six times, I AM EVEN MORE ENTHUSIASTIC THAN I WAS FIRST. Please send me two copies of the book at once. I want to make two friends happy."

LEIGH MITCHELL HODGES.

Free Press:

"There is in him something of Riley, something of Field, nor is there lacking the keenness of Twain, yet unlike them all, he is the original Cooke, the cordial and genial poet."

COMPLETION OF THE

American Catalog

The Second (or Supplementary Volume) nearly ready

We are now completing the printing of the second volume of the new "American Catalog, 1900–1905," which will be ready for delivery in November.

The first volume, issued in June last, is a complete record in itself, being a dictionary-catalog of all books recorded between January 1, 1900, and January 1, 1905. In its one alphabet every book is entered at least three times (by author, title and subject), with information as to size, price, publisher, year of issue, etc. It forms the latest addition to the old series of the "American Catalogue," published in quarto form, while the newest volume is an octavo, which is generally conceded to be a much handier shape. We can reasonably affirm that every dealer needs such a permanent catalog in his business, while every library of importance should have this standard bibliographical work on its shelves, since its usefulness in the world of books is on a par with a time-table in the railroad world.

The second, or supplementary volume, contains the full title entries, with annotations, given in the "Weekly Record" of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY during the five years 1900, '01, '02, '03, '04, cumulated into one alphabet for each year; that is, into five alphabets. This is planned to answer the demands of librarians, booksellers and others who wish this valuable material, in available shape, for classifying and describing and for permanent reference.

For the book dealer the second volume is a very useful record of book valuation. It gives in form for ready reference brief descriptive notices of the important books published during the period mentioned, describing concisely the contents of each work and explaining many titles which, in themselves, mean little or nothing or are misleading. For descriptive cataloging, a bibliographical work of this kind is almost priceless.

The two volumes are uniformly bound in half morocco. The price is $12.00 for both or $7.50 for either separately. The edition is limited, but 240 copies of the first volume and 145 of the second volume remain unsold. We reserve the right to advance the price when the balance of either is reduced to 100 copies.

Two Unusual Books

FOR CHILDREN

By LUCILE LOVELL

"ANDY"

THIS is the greatest book of its kind since "Fauntleroy," and appeals to children and grown-ups alike. No one can resist Andy. He is an unusual boy, and the account of how he won a place for himself is an unusual story, told with delicate pathos and rare humor.

"The WALCOTT TWINS"

THE funniest book about children since "Helen's Babies." The twins look just alike, and when they mischievously change clothes and the girl goes to the house of a bachelor uncle, while the boy visits a maiden aunt, there are side-splitting complications. A wholesome, jolly story, and a universal favorite.

READY NOVEMBER FOURTH

A SOLDIER'S TRIAL

AN EPISODE OF THE CANTEEN CRUSADE

BY GENERAL CHARLES KING

WE take pleasure in announcing the above for publication. The author has been engaged some time in the preparation of this new novel, resulting in one of the best of his many splendid stories. He has woven into the plot a very powerful argument in favor of the restoration of the "Army Canteen," illustrating same from actual scene and incident.

In view of the present widespread discussion of this vital question, the book will appeal to all who have the welfare of our army at heart.

It is a stirring tale of army life on the frontier, and General King, an officer who has served over forty years, draws a vivid picture of the contrast between the days of the Canteen and those that followed its abolition. Were there no other interest involved the book would merit careful reading and reflection on this one point alone that so deeply affects the happiness and contentment of our boys in blue, but the story is also exceptionally strong in character and life. General King has even surpassed his already high standard of literary merit in this, one of the few really readable "novels with a purpose."

Terms of Payment on Both Regular and Special Offers

Terms are always subject to special agreement, but in general they are as follows:

On sale for 90 days: all copies sold at the end of that time to be paid for, cash in full, pro rata, the remainder to be returned to us at our expense immediately thereafter, either upon receipt of our request or at the option of the dealer. If further pictures are ordered before the end of the 90-day period, the first lot is to be paid for before the shipment of the new lot. Prices and terms on which new lot may be furnished are a matter for future agreement.

Packing: The pictures are regularly put up in flat pasteboard boxes of 100 pictures each, 95 Sepia and 5 black, or 100 in full original colors, besides two mounted pictures for display purposes.

Window-Display: Dealers are urged to give the pictures a prominent and continuous window-display.

$100 Orders: Dealers who are selling the pictures well are urged to let us ship them in lots of 1,000. We pack the 10 boxes of 100 pictures each in a neat wooden box with sliding cover. The whole occupies only two cubic feet of space. We prepay the express and all unsold pictures are returnable to us at our expense (as stated above). The profit is then 150% on every retail sale, instead of 66⅔%.

Sample Copies: A sample in sepia or black will be sent in a mailing-tube, to any address in the world, on receipt of 20 cents in stamps (of any country); in full original colors for $1.10.

An invaluable work

Lippincott's New Gazetteer

Edited by ANGELO HEILPRIN and LOUIS HEILPRIN

This dictionary of universal geography now offered to the public is the successor to Lippincott's Pronouncing Gazetteer. It is a new publication, printed from new type from title-page to cover, and contains upward of 27,000 titles that do not appear in the former book. Only the framework of its predecessor has been retained, together with the system of pronunciation introduced by that great master, Dr. Joseph Thomas.

A work of inestimable value to all libraries, private and public.

A necessity for schools and colleges.

A compilation of industrial and allied facts, that no manufacturing business, jobber, or exporter can afford to be without.

Over 2000 pages. Quarto. Sheep, $10.00 net. Half russia, $12.50 net.
Patent index, 50 cents extra.

A thoroughly good love story

The WIFE of the SECRETARY OF STATE

By ELLA MIDDLETON TYBOUT

A story of mystery, intrigue, and love; the scene laid in Washington; the characters representing some of the best-known figures in Capital life. Miss Tybout's stories have made her widely known to thousands of people, and her book of last year, "Poketown People," was a big success.

Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

HARPER'S HOLIDAY BOOKS

The Island of Enchantment

By JUSTUS MILES FORMAN

The story of a great passion in the days when romance made its home among men. The love scenes are fascinating, and the book itself is exquisite in its holiday dress.

Illustrated in Color from Paintings by Howard Pyle. Marginal Decorations in Tint. Gilt Top, Uncut Edges. Specially Boxed. Price, $1.75.

The Line of Love

By JAMES BRANCH CABELL

Of this beautiful holiday book Mark Twain says: "It is the charmingest book I have read in a long time. Archaic speech in this case allures and bewitches, the art of it is so perfect."

Illustrated in Color by Howard Pyle. Marginal Decorations in Tint. Gilt Top, Uncut Edges. Specially Boxed. Price, $2.00.

Caroline of Courtlandt Street

By WEYMER JAY MILLS

Merrily, mirthfully, but with an undercurrent of tender sentiment, this romance presents an enchanting story of old New York. It is comedy of a delightful order, full of surprises and the glamour of golden days.

Illustrated in Color by Anna Whelan Betts. Marginal Decorations in Tint. Gilt Top, Uncut Edges. Specially Boxed. Price, $2.00 net.

Her Memory Book

By HELEN HAYES

A delightful improvement over the home-made memory book that every girl loves to keep. The pages are embellished with drawings appropriate to the events to be recorded, which include all sorts of social diversions, college events, the sports of the four seasons, etc. Specially Boxed. Price, $2.00.

The Pleasant Tragedies of Childhood

Drawings by F. Y. Cory. Verses by Burges Johnson

This series of drawings in black and tint represent typical mirthful phases in the lives of little tots, and each is accompanied by merry little rhymes. It is a captivating volume for the holiday season, and its humor in verse and picture is sure to be enjoyed by every one.

Thirty Full-Page Pictures in Black and Tint. Marginal Drawings in Pen and Ink. Ornamented Cloth Cover Stamped in Gold. Specially Boxed. Price, $1.50.

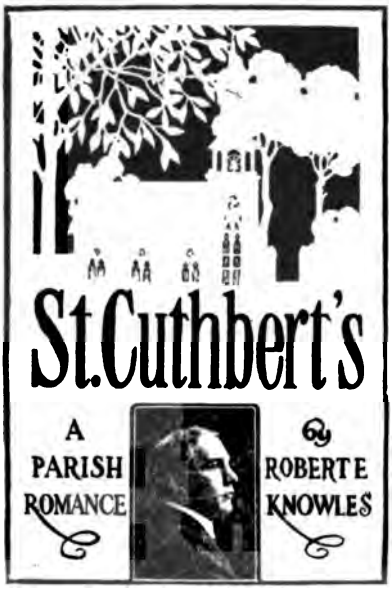
New York Sun: "A monumental romance with a colossal theme."

Book News: "A fragment right out of the book of life."



"Fleming H. Revell Company has during the three years just passed been extremely fortunate in its selection of manuscripts of fiction. We have had from this house half a dozen novels that were not only of absorbing interest, but of absolute cleanliness—a commendation extremely rare in these days of highly flavored or mawkishly sweet fiction. Henry Holt & Co.'s Newest Books

29 West 23d Street New York

Losers' Luck

By CHARLES TENNEY JACKSON. (Just published.) $1.50.

A good deal depends on how it's done, and love, imminent peril, and heroic sacrifice have figured in many books, but the publishers' readers believe that this new Californian author has so handled these themes as to make of them, with a good amount of humor, "The True Romance." His heroes are largely filibusters from Frisco; the heroine an appealing and often pathetic Central American girl.

The Professor's Legacy

By MRS. ALFRED SIDGWICK. (Just published.) $1.50.

A sympathetic love story, lifelike characters, humor, and vivid scenes of German university and English country life are among the attractive features of this interesting novel. Reorders are coming in.

The Peter Newell Mother Goose

By CAROLYN S. BAILEY. With 22 full-page illustrations by PETER NEWELL. (Just published.) $1.50.

A hundred or more original Mother Goose rhymes, with Mr. Newell's pictures introducing the favorite characters in a decidedly novel guise, and Miss Bailey's exciting story of a little girl's adventures in Gooseland, make a book which will surely be warmly welcomed.

The Wizards of Ryetown

By A. C. SMEDLEY and L. A. TALBOT. With 53 illustrations by Augusine Macgregor. (Just published.) $1.50.

A fairy story with a touch of drollery and clever nonsense verses. The plot is a clever variation of the good old story, with its little girl in fairy land, its lively and malicious witch, its lovely prince and its happily ever after. The illustrations are particularly appropriate.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY have just published "Finite and Infinite," by Thomas Curran Ryan, a prominent member of the Wisconsin bar. The author by original argument claims to prove the existence of a Supreme Being, and his book will no doubt be widely read and discussed by the public.

FOX, DUFFIELD & COMPANY have just ready "At the Sign of the Dollar," with words by Wallace Irwin and pictures by E. W. Kemble; "More Representative Men," by Captain Harry Graham, who brings out some telling new verses on celebrities, illustrated by Malcolm Strauss; and the fifth edition of "Misrepresentative Men," with illustrations by F. Strothman.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS issued yesterday "Captains All," by W. W. Jacobs, illustrated by Will Owen, telling stories of the longshoremen, the sailors and the people of a little English village: "Advanced Bridge," by J. B. Elwell, a new revised edition of this standard work; and "American Laws of Bridge," the official laws of "bridge" issued by a committee made up of representatives from the leading clubs of this country.

JOHN LANE COMPANY, The Bodley Head, have great successes in "The Morals of Marcus Ordeyne," by William J. Locke; and "Heretics," by G. K. Chesterton. Among their newest books are "Underneath the Bough," by Theodora Thompson; "Life of Peter Ilich Tchaikovsky, 1842-1853," by his brother; Alfred Stead's "Great Japan," a study of national efficiency; "The Poems of William Watson;" Vernon Lee's "Spirit of Rome," and Laurence Hope's "Last Poems."

THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY have just ready "Choosing a Career," by Orison Swett Marden, who treats his subject in a manner that will make the book helpful to every one seeking directions on this important question; also, "Radiant Motherhood," by Margaret E. Sangster, a book for the American mother of to-day, which contains the best and fullest expression of all the author has acquired in the years devoted to the study of the problems of motherhood and the care of children.

THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS call attention to a work of exceptional timely interest, entitled "The Far East," by Archibald Little, who speaks with authority upon Eastern subjects. The book treats of Japan, Siam, China, the Yellow River, the Yangtse River, the Province of Szechuan, the Chengtu Plateau, the lower Yangtse provinces, the intermediate provinces, Yunnan to Canton, Manchuria, Mongolia, Turkestan, Tibet, Indo-China and Korea, and is accompanied with nine maps and thirty-seven illustrations. The book has been highly recommended by competent authorities.

LITTLE, BROWN & Co. have just ready "Il Libro d'Oro," a collection of 120 miracle stories and sacred legends, translated from the Italian by Mrs. Francis Alexander; "Two in Italy," by Maud Howe, author of "Roma Beata," with six full-page illustrations from drawings by John Elliott; "The American Law Relating to Income and Principal," by Edwin A. Howes, Jr., of the Boston Bar; "The Brothers' War," by John C. Reed, an attorney of Atlanta, Ga., a dispassionate survey of the causes and consequences of the Rebellion; "The Oak Tree Fairy Book," edited by Clifton Johnson, with 85 illustrations by Willard Bonte; and "Men of Old Greece," by Jennie Hall, a book for young people.

Story of briskly moving adventure with the earlier scenes in France in the 16th century when the struggle between Catholics and Huguenots culminated in the siege of Rouen. The hero and his companion escape from France in an expedition sailing for Florida. Disaster meets the first settlement, and this Sir Galahad finds himself a wanderer in the South Carolina forests. Succored by a beautiful Indian maid, they live together as sister and brother until Etienne is unwillingly taken back to France. Complications arise, involved in his old promise of marriage with a French girl; but another expedition to Florida brings a reunion with the Indian girl and a happy ending in France.

"The big front door" was the name given by a neighbor to the house opposite, firstly because it had a big friendly looking front door, and secondly because it (the door) was always overflowing with children, boys and girls, apparently always bent upon some business or some expedition, in or out of the house that required great haste and energy. It is the story of these very interesting little groups that is told.

The author of "When knighthood was in flower" has written a story of when Louis XI. reigned over France, Edward IV. ruled in England, when Charles the Bold or the Rash was king of the fair land of Burgundy and Yolanda lived and suffered among the royal guests who were all bad enough, but are here turned into a readable tale.

Mallock, W: Hurrell. The reconstruction of religious belief. N. Y., Harper, 1905. [O.] c. 9+303 p. O. cl., $1.75 net.

The author treats of the necessity for finding some intellectual solution of the contradiction between science and religion. The reasoning proves that all scientific discoveries point to a monistic conclusion and that the more closely we follow scientific methods the more surely we are thrust into some region outside itself where its theories will not work. In a variety of detailed ways the book shows how integral a part of man religious feeling is.

The scene is again a typical, incongruous Indiana town and the action of the story is within recent memory. Joe Louden, the hero, is introduced as a town outcast, but he has daring and humor and soon gives indications of innate worth. His only friend is Ariel Tabor, a crude girl of seventeen, the daughter of an extremely poor artist, who herself cherishes artistic dreams. Ariel gets rich, Joe is forced to leave town. When they meet again much has happened and there is a good story of the triumph of character and circumstances.

So called from the connection of the Hero with Pang-Yang tannery in the Blue Ridge Mountains. Embittered by lack of sympathy in his own family, hardened by later Western experiences, Abijah Bead returns rich to his old home in Delaware; falls in love with and secretly marries a beautiful, soulless girl, who, thereafter, deserts their child and marries another man, trusting to her husband's reticence and to lack of proof of her first marriage. She is confronted by her boy whose resemblance to her is unmistakable to all eyes but those of her fatuous second husband. Political success comes to the Pang-Yanger; and he also falls in love with an emotional, fascinating Southerner. There seems to both no outcome save to choose between renunciation or known sin, when an insane negress solves the problem for all.

The story of a little girl who was twice as good and twice as beautiful as other children. She lived with her father and grandmother, and had a cousin Teddy, and a nice nurse named Jane. She is so fond of fairy tales her father buys her a "dreams primer," which hangs at the head of her bed, and puts her to sleep every night with a story.

Willard, C: A. Notes to the Spanish civil code, showing changes effected by American legislation; with citation of cases from Philippines supreme court. Manila, [C: A. Willard,] 1904. 11+106 p. 8°, cl., $5.
(Also translated into Spanish.)

Williams, Archibald. The romance of mining; containing interesting descriptions of the methods of mining for minerals in all parts of the world. Phil., Lippincott, 1905. 5-401 p. D. cl., *$1.50 net.
The history of mining is the history of civilization. The author first describes the stone, copper, bronze, iron, steel, and gold ages and he gives special prominence to descriptions of the mining of the precious metals because in their discovery and working have been enacted the most stirring scenes in mining life.

Young, Egerton Ryerson. Duck Lake. N. Y., Eaton & Mains, [1905.] c. 5-191 p. D. cl., $1.
Three stories having the same characters and the same background, the scenes being laid in Northern Ontario. The stories are called "A haunch of venison," "Chubb" and "Dave Dodge," and all have relation to hunting and the game laws of Canada.

Young, F: G: Tendencies in recent American road legislation; with appendix containing tabular digest of changes in road laws of the different American states and territories during the last fifteen years; by F. Zunser, Eliakum. A Jewish bard: being the biography of Eliakum Zunser; written by himself and rendered into English by Simon Hirsdansky; ed. by A. H. Fromenson. N. Y., Zunser Jubilee Committee, 1905. various paging, pap., gratis.
Autobiography of the first poet of prominence who wrote in Yiddish. Zunser, whose jubilee was celebrated in New York in March, 1905, not only wrote the words of his songs but composed the music as well. He was born in Vilna, Russia, in 1840, and continued to live in Russia till 1889 when he left Russia for America, so his story bears strangely on the attitude of the Russian government toward the Jews.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

NOVEMBER 11, 1905.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter for advertising pages should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers and librarians depend on the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalog," and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

COPYRIGHT IN AUSTRALIA.

AN attempt is being made in connection with the proposed copyright bill now under consideration by the Federal Parliament to shut out American books from the Australian market. The movement has been started by Angus & Robertson, of Sydney, possibly with the support of the English publishers who have interested themselves in the bill. The petitioners point out that the bill proposed to give copyright to books published in the United States, and they contrasted that proposal with the operation of the copyright law of America with respect to books published in other countries. The American law, they observe, compels publishers of other countries, in order to obtain copyright in America, to set up the book in type in the United States and publish it simultaneously there. It was practically impossible, petitioners said, for Australian publishers to fulfil these conditions, and they asked that the bill should deal with books published in the United States on the same terms as the American law dealt with books published in other countries.

The object of this movement is plainly to prevent direct dealings between the Commonwealth and America. To set up the type in Australia and publish simultaneously in America would be out of the question, as the sales would in no case warrant the expense. Consequently American publishers would be obliged to look to the London market for their only outlet, and there would then be an opportunity for the English publisher to retaliate upon their rivals in this country. The trouble about it all is that we can do little to mend matters in this direction, and must perhaps help to reap the whirlwind sown for us by our good friends in the allied trades.

THE Copyright Conference, which met for its second session at the City Club in New York last week, gave its attention from Wednesday morning until Saturday noon to a memorandum draft for a proposed bill prepared with great care and particularity by Thorvald Solberg, Register of Copyrights, discussing on the same plan as at the previous session both the general principles of the draft and the particular provisions. It is gratifying to note that the representatives of all the organizations united in desiring the fullest recognition and protection of the creator of copyright property, and that any differences of opinion were as to making plain just what are the rights of an author and just what the practical circumscriptions should be. It is understood that as the result of this session the proposed bill will be condensed and brought into more thoroughly legal form, and that a third session of the conference will be called at Washington for final consideration of the proposed measure, after the meeting of Congress, the intention being to obtain as early a place on the calendar as practicable.

A REACTION against the reprint is prophesied in England, where, the editor of the London Academy thinks, the business is being overdone. The same holds true also in this country. As the Academy truly says of the recent enormous output of this class of books, "the bad ones get in the way of the good ones," and simply because a good edition of a certain classic, at a reasonable price, has had a certain measure of success, this should not form an excuse for loading up the market with dozens of still cheaper and poorly made reproductions of the same work. While undoubtedly there is and will be a large demand in this country for well-made reprints of old-time favorites and classics, the reprinter of the future will invite ruin unless his selections are made with greater discrimination than has been exercised by his immediate predecessor.

THE NATIONAL ALUMNI, of 34 Union Square, New York, to whose soliciting methods reference has before been made in these columns, has issued a circular offering, as an entering wedge for other business, to send free of cost a "little known, but very great treasure, the 'First Letter of Columbus,' translated into English," which they claim to have secured through "the trustees of the New York Public Library—Lenox division." The fact is that the letter referred to is an English translation of the Latin translation of De Cosco, as shown in the first four Latin editions, and was translated anew into English by Wilberforce Eames in 1892. The Lenox Library since that time has had several editions of this letter for sale, one of them at twenty-five cents, together with a facsimile of the Basle illustrated Latin edition from the copy in the Lenox Library. It is well known that this Latin text and English translation of it, in one form or another, have been known for very many years, and there is therefore absolutely nothing in the claim made by the "National Alumni" that their publication is "a very great treasure," or that it "details in vivid and picturesque narrative some interesting incidents hitherto unknown." We leave unchallenged the statement made by this concern, that it has secured this book "through the courtesy of the trustees of the . . . Lenox division." There have been no trustees of the Lenox Library for ten years, and Mr. Eames, the translator of the work, is not aware that any privilege to bring out his work has been extended by him.

PETER ROSEGGER'S CAREER.

WERE it written as a romantic tale to show the wonder of a great genius struggling from darkness and ignorance into light, the story of the life of Peter Rosegger could scarcely be more remarkable. Born of the most simple and ignorant parents, in a remote valley of the Styrian Alps, where to be able to read print was remarkable and to be able to write almost unheard of, and himself practically ignorant until he was twenty-two years old, Peter Rosegger has come to be one of Germany's most adored authors; and his story of Christ's life, "I. N. R. I.—A Prisoner's Story of the Cross," has been one of the great literary successes of the last decade. Rosegger was born a great writer. He practically taught himself to read by the scraps of newspaper that were used for patterns by the tailor to whom he was apprenticed. He early began to write a people's calendar of stories, poems, etc., which he read to his simple peasant neighbors. One day he sent one of his poems, with a letter explaining that what he wanted most in the world was a chance to make money so that he could buy books and read more of the wonderful Schiller and Lessing and Goethe. He was so modest and simple about it that he did not even look for an answer. When he called at the distant post-office six months later this poor, simple, peasant writer found awaiting him German newspapers with broad headlines hailing him as the great Styrian folklore poet, and books upon books from people who had read his appealing letter and were eager to help him. Great success came to him almost immediately. He has produced many books of poetry, stories and novels, all pervaded by the directness, sincerity and naive simplicity that would be expected from one of so humble an origin. This quality is especially evident in his new book, "I. N. R. I.," in which a simple-minded carpenter tells the story of the Christ and His achievements as if he were an apostle living in modern times.

THE DEMAND FOR PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S BOOKS.

ANNOUNCEMENT of another book from President Roosevelt, despite the fact that he probably has more demands upon his time than any other man alive to-day, renews interest in his earlier writings, which, the publishers' figures show, continue steady sellers. "Ranch Life and the Hunting Trail," with nearly a hundred illustrations by Frederic Remington, was published first in a large book which sold at five dollars. Later it was made into a smaller volume, which proved a much more popular seller. "Ranch Life and the Hunting Trail" has been printed eight times; "The Strenuous Life" has been printed twelve times, and "Hero Tales from American History," which was written in collaboration with Henry Cabot Lodge, has fourteen editions to its credit.

MUSIC PIRATE TO GO TO JAIL.

SUPREME COURT JUSTICE STOVER on November 4 denied the application of Garret J. Cauchois for a certificate of reasonable doubt and a stay of sentence pending his appeal from his conviction on a charge of counterfeiting the trademark of Carl Fischer and publishing and selling copyright music under it.

He was to serve thirty days and pay a fine of $350. Justice Stover said that he could find nothing in the record of the trial to justify a stay.

NOON-HOUR BOOK AUCTIONS.

THE following description of a noon-hour book auction that appeared in a recent issue of the New York Sun may be witnessed any day in New York City. The Sun's writer followed a studious-looking chap to a store on Park Row, opposite the City Hall Park, whose unwashed windows are piled high with books. Big books and little books, red books and blue books, and books of every color in the rainbow and out of it; story books, and science books, books historical, books fictional, books etymological, and books statistical—all heaped in one incongruous mass.

In the entrance stands a sign:

> Book Auction.
> From 9 A.M. to 6 P.M.
> Books. Books. Books.

"We follow our friend inside. A motley audience is gathered there, made up of well-dressed men and ragged men, little boys and big boys. Not a woman in sight. They stand with uplifted faces, the common centre of vision being the auctioneer. He is standing on top of a wooden counter behind an auction block which, in private life, is nothing other than a discarded packing case. He is a broad-shouldered fellow, with a flowing mustache. A skull cap lends an air of learning to his otherwise unscholarly aspect.

"'What am I offered for this superb copy of Dant's "Inferno"? Dant Allegretti, gentlemen. It was published originally 600 years ago. The pictures are by Mr. Dore, one of the most famous illustrators that ever lived. The book is published at $10. Did I hear 30 cents? You make me and Mr. Dant feel like 30 cents, gentlemen. Think of Mr. Dant going for the price of three Deadwood Dicks! What would Mrs. Dant think of it if she heard? Thirty-five! Thank you. Forty! Thanks. Remember, this is the only copy we have left; when I have sold it you will be sorry that you didn't speak. It tells about the different parts of the human body in hell. Look at this pictures. Fifty-five! Thanks. Yours at fifty-five!'

"Presently our friend, the auctioneer, discovers that the only copy he has left isn't an only copy at all. He offers another at the same price. As soon as that is taken he sends out two more. A dozen follow. Evidently fifty-five is a good bid for the Dantes. He finds a Milton's 'Paradise Lost' in the same binding, which is offered at a like figure. Nobody wants Milton and the big yellow volume is sent back to its dusty shelf to await a more opportune moment of disposal.

"'George Eliot's "Middlemarch" in three volumes, gentlemen,' is the next offering.

"'A grand story. As interesting as anything Mr. Eliot ever wrote. Mr. Eliot's books are all prime as you know; worth fifty Deadwood Dicks any day.'

"'Five cents,' says our friend, the spare clerk.

"'What am I bid?' says the auctioneer, ignoring him.

"'Five cents,' says our friend, raising his tone.

"'I heard you,' says the auctioneer, suavely, 'only I did not want to.' Five cents. Ten cents. (No one has authorized this; he takes the chance.) Fifteen cents. (His own bid.) 'Twenty cents,' says a freckled-face boy over in the corner. Much to his surprise and evidently to his disgust, he gets them. He is game, however, and pays the price of his recklessness without a murmur. If he only knew it, he has secured a bargain. The unfailing proof is there. Despite the fact that Eliots galore are heaped on the shelf, there is no invitation to buy another copy, just discovered, at the same price. Mr. Eliot's books must await a later day and a larger bid.

"Now comes the 'Passing Show' by Mr. Wensdell. A. B. Wenzell would certainly feel complimented to hear himself disposed of in such a place by such a name. We hear that 'Mr. Wensdell's book' contains two of his masterpieces in full tone (a full tone probably including two half-tones) and is published at $1 for each picture. 'Mr. Wensdell' goes for 70 cents. 'An Indian book by Mr. Remington' fetches 90 cents—the high water mark of the sale.

"'Five volumes of detective stories by Mr. Collins' bring 30 cents. Mr. Collins seems to be an unknown both as far as auctioneer and audience are concerned. He proceeds to read from the back of the book: 'The Moonstone by Wilkens Collins.' Shades of Wilkie!"

More books are sold until a lot is reached that is described by the auctioneer as: "A Critic of Pure Reasons by E. Kent, Esquire," commands a single bid of ten cents and is disposed of at that low figure. Its purchaser is obviously disappointed as soon as he lays hands on the book. He is ashamed to "crawl" and goes out carrying his purchase limply.

"'Oliver Twist by Mr. Charles Dickens,' shouts the auctioneer.

"'Five cents,' says our friend, the spare clerk.

"'Yours,' says the auctioneer. 'We got that nickel of yours at last.' The spare clerk goes to the counter, hands over his coin, secures his purchase, and glides officeward through the front door and into the maelstrom of Park Row.

"We follow reluctantly. There is a charm about the auctioneer and the motley crowd that would bid one to stay in spite of one's self. As we go out we hear the auctioneer 'working off' a set of 'Chambers's Encyclopedia,' which cost heavens knows how much, and comes 'straight to us from a celebrated publisher up on Broadway.'

"We go not unrewarded. When we entered the auction room we carried on our person one large and valuable dollar. We retire minus most of the dollar. In its place we are encumbered with a literary burden, which includes the history of Japan, Mr. Wensdell's book, and 'The Critic of Pure Reasons,' by E. Kent.

"Shades of Spinoza!"

BOOKTRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

NOVEMBER DINNER OF THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE

The November dinner of The Booksellers' League was given on the evening of the 8th inst., at the Aldine Association, 111 Fifth Avenue. Upwards of fifty members and their friends were present. The guest of honor was the Rev. Dr. W. A. P. Martin, who, for nearly half a century has been identified with the educational and missionary work in China, and who is about to assist in the formation of a great Union College in Peking. Dr. Martin spoke particularly of the American influence upon China which, though for the moment dimned by ill-advised and unnecessarily severe restrictions of our immigrant laws, etc., is bound in the end to be in the ascendency and work for good. Among the speakers who succeeded Dr. Martin was R. T. Stevens, President of the Japan Paper Company, who spoke pleasantly of his connections with the booktrade in the employ of H. B. Nims & Co., of Troy, N. Y., and of his visit to the paper makers of Japan.

This dinner concludes the entertainments of the League for the year, there being no meeting in December. In the third week of January the League will give another Ladies'

Night, for which the entertainment committee promises great things. It is pleasant to note that the membership is steadily growing, new members being added each month. As an indication of this growth we note that at the October dinner two gold buttons were awarded to one member alone—Charles A. Burkhardt—for having gained ten new members for the League.

PRICELESS MANUSCRIPT STOLEN.

A VALUABLE manuscript, "Beda's Super Cantica Canticorum," of the thirteenth century, has been stolen from the library of Gray's Inn. The library of Gray's Inn was founded in 1497 and is the oldest in London. It contains 25,000 volumes and numerous valuable manuscripts. Most of the latter were bequeathed by Sir Matthew Hale, who was a judge under Cromwell and Charles II., and died in 1676. He was a member of the Inn.

OBITUARY NOTES.

LADY FLORENCE DIXIE, writer, explorer, and champion of women's rights, who acted as war correspondent for a London paper during the Boer War, died at her home, Dumfrieshire, Scotland, November 7. Lady Florence was born in London, May 24, 1857, and was the daughter of the seventh Marquis of Queensbury. She was married in 1875 to Sir Alexander Beaumont Churchill Dixie. Lady Dixie was the author of "Across Patagonia," "Defence of Zululand," "In the Land of Misfortune" (South Africa), "Gloriana," a novel; a volume of poems entitled "The Songs of a Child and Other Poems," written in childhood under the pseudonym of "Darling"; "The New Woman," published in 1896; "Aniwee, the Warrior Queen," "Little Cherie; or, the Trainer's Daughter," "Izra; or, Snapshots from a Life," and the dramas "Ellabelle; or, the Redeemed" and "Isola; or, the Disinherited."

WE note with regret the death, at Folkestone, Eng., on October 25, at the age of sixty-eight, of George Lillie Craik, for forty years an active partner in the firm of Macmillan & Company. "Though of a somewhat retiring disposition," according to the London Publishers' Circular, "Mr. Craik had many warm friends among the eminent authors with whom he was brought into relations, including the late Lord Tennyson, John Morley, Mrs. Oliphant, Thomas Hughes, Mrs. Molesworth and others. His kindly and sympathetic disposition had won the affectionate regard of all who were associated with him in his daily work, and he will be greatly missed by a large circle of friends. He was a lover of the best literature, and among poets specially devoted to the study of Wordsworth and Tennyson. His interest in art led him to act for a time as a director of the Fine Art Society, and among his most valued possessions were two of the earlier pictures of his old friend Holman Hunt." Mr. Craik was twice married, first to Miss Mulock, the author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," and some years after her death to Miss Anna Holme.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

IN the December World's Work Isaac F. Marcosson will inaugurate a notable series of labor articles with "The Fight for the Open Shop." It will show comprehensively the employers' status and the results achieved in the most important of all industrial struggles. Other articles will deal with the problem of restricted output, the human side, etc. They will be illustrated.

THE New York Metropolitan Museum of Art has just issued the first number of its quarterly Bulletin, a publication that has more than local value, inasmuch as it contains much information regarding the treasures described that is of interest to collectors generally. Among its notes is a reference to the museum's little-known library that is open to students and others interested in art, archæology and the industrial arts. In the quarter ending September 30, 411 volumes were added to the upward of 9000 volumes of the library, 241 of them purchased with income from the Rogers fund. The library has an exceptionally fine collection of photographs.

THE owners of Country Life in America and The Country Calendar authorize the interesting announcement that the two magazines, the most important in their field, have been consolidated. Doubleday, Page & Company will publish the magazine, and the first number under the new arrangement will be the January issue. The publishers believe that by working together they can serve the interest of country-living Americans better than by working apart. The owners of The Country Calendar will retain an interest in the consolidated periodical and will aid in its further exploitation and development. It is the intention of the publishers of the enlarged magazine to continue to make it the most beautiful, practical and completely representative journal of country life in the United States. Beginning with the February number the subscription price per year will be increased from $3 to $4, and beginning with the January issue the price of single copies will be raised from 25 cents to 35 cents. The price of double numbers will remain as before—50 cents.

BUSINESS NOTES.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—The book and stationery store of Beecher, Kymer & Patterson was damaged by fire a week ago.

LIMA, O.—B. Green & Son, booksellers, have sold out.

MCKEESPORT, PA.—R. W. Gordon, Jr., bookseller, has been succeeded by Gordon & Foster.

NEW YORK CITY.—Finn & Baker Co., medical booksellers, have been succeeded by the Imperial Publishing Company.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Short Stories Company have removed from 34 West 26th Street to 55 Liberty Street.

OMAHA, NEB.—The Antiquarian Book Concern, (successors to S. Shonfeld's,) has been removed to 1220 Farman Street. Since Mr. Shonfeld's death, on July 30, his family have sold out the business to J. P. O'Carroll, who has been connected with the business for upwards of ten years, and who will continue it under the old firm name.

PEORIA, ILL.—The store and stock of Richardson Brothers, booksellers, 119 South Adams Street, was badly damaged by fire a week ago.

SALEM, IND.—Spurgeon & Anderson, booksellers, have been succeeded by Havilla C. Hobbs.

WEST DERRY, N. H.—Benson Bros., booksellers, have dissolved partnership. The business is continued by W. H. Benson.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE WEBB PUBLISHING COMPANY, St. Paul, Minn., will publish December 1 a book on "Evergreens and How to Grow Them," by C. S. Harrison, of York, Neb., author of "The Gold Mine in the Front Yard."

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & Co. announce a second edition of "Auto Fun." This book is out of the usual run, being made up of cartoons and illustrated jokes at the expense of devotees of the motor car. The cartoons originally appeared in Life and are by well-known artists.

AMERICAN THERMO-WARE CO., 16 Warren Street, New York City, have just ready Dr. Minders' "Anatomical Manikins," with key and lecture, edited by William S. Furneaux. Some of these manikins are sexless, some of female anatomy; and all are in natural colors and positions.

CASSELL & Co. have issued the first volume of "Sir Weymyss Reid's Memoirs, 1842-1885," edited with introduction by Stuart J. Reid, the autobiography of one who was once a great journalist and man of affairs. The second volume cannot yet be published, as it contains political revelations which must for a time be withheld.

THE REPUBLICAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, Hamilton, O., will publish next January a "Graphic Arts and Crafts Year Book," to contain examples of the finest color and black and white work of the allied industries with specially written articles by experts. The work is to be published annually and is to become a "text-book of typographic standards."

THE HOBART COMPANY, New York, have just ready a new book by General Charles King, entitled "A Soldier's Trial, an Episode of the 'Canteen' Crusade." The author draws a vivid picture of the contrast between the days of the canteen and those that followed its abolition, which alone would recommend the book to readers, but the story is also strong in character and life.

THE GRAFTON PRESS have just ready a volume of blank verse entitled "My Lady of the Searchlight," by Mary Hall Leonard, the subject of which is womanhood in its relation to humanity. They have also brought out a cheaper edition of "Waes Hael," bound in tan buckram with a handsome design in four colors. Tied to the silk bookmarker is a miniature beer mug made of clay.

E. P. DUTTON & COMPANY have just ready "The War in the Far East," by the military correspondent of the London Times, in which appear the articles contributed day by day in revised form, supplemented by much new matter. There are several photogravure portraits, and an important feature of the book is its 34 maps, specially prepared for the work by Percy Fisher. It has already been translated and published in Japan.

UNDER the general title of "In Pursuit of Dreams" A. S. Barnes & Co. are issuing a uniform edition, boxed, of Arthur Henry's three volumes, telling the stories of the author's life, experiences and philosophy at the sea shore, in the mountains and in the city. The titles are "An Island Cabin, the Dream of Idleness," "The House in the Woods, the Dream of Country Life," and "Lodgings in Town, the Dream of Greatness."

L. C. PAGE & Co. have just brought out "Rambles in Normandy," by Francis Miltoun, author of "Cathedrals of Northern France," etc., with illustrations and decorations by Blanche McManus. Mr. Miltoun is a motor enthusiast and has a strong liking for by-paths and out-of-the-way corners, so that his car has traversed most of the paths not laid out in Baedeker. Its companion volume, "Rambles in Brittany," is also ready this week.

JOHN W. LUCE & COMPANY, Boston, have just ready a book on the Shaw dramas, by Henry L. Mencken, called "George Bernard Shaw: His Plays," which is designed for the use of theatre-goers who have no time to go through the long Shaw prefaces and appendices or to puzzle out the subtleties of "Man and Superman" and "You Never Can Tell" for themselves. Very few authors reach the dignity of having books written about them while they live.

HENRY HOLT & Co. will publish shortly a volume of "Lectures on Shakespeare," by Stopford Brooke, the famous and interesting English critic, covering the following ten plays: "Midsummer Night's Dream," "Winter's Tale," "Merchant of Venice," As You Like It," "Richard II.," Richard III.," "Macbeth," "Tempest," "Romeo and Juliet" and "Coriolanus." Mr. Brooke's work is more in the nature of an appreciation than an analysis of these dramas.

THE FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY are issuing this week a new edition of Norman Duncan's "Doctor Luke of the Labrador," which rounds out twenty-five thousand copies of this his first novel. An enviable record for a man who was new to the book world scarcely a year ago. Within the year he has also to his credit "Dr. Grenfell's Parish," of which the fourth edition is just announced; also, his novelette of New York life, "The Mother," the merit of which is being keenly discussed by the critics.

THE AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY will issue shortly "A Specimen Spinster," by Kate Westerleigh. The chief character is Mary Wogg, nicknamed Polly Wogg by her friends. She strove against the commonplace name, then made up her mind to make of herself what would not be suspected under her homely name. Other characters in the book also stand out, notably Dick Gray, handsome, strong and determined, and Maud MacGregor, with her wild, loving Irish heart responding to every influence brought to bear upon her.

C. M. CLARK PUBLISHING CO., Boston, have nearly ready "The Kentuckian," by James Ball Naylor, whose "Ralph Marlowe" was so great a success. The characters seem to be old acquaintances of the author, who spent his early life in southern Ohio and Kentucky. Startling facts about southern politics are revealed in Frederick Chamberlin's new novel entitled "In the Shoe-String Country," the scene laid in the "black-belt" of Alabama. This author is also preparing "Around the World in Ninety Days," to be illustrated with 300 photographs taken by the author.

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY, in danger of being fairly crowded out of their present quarters by their rapidly increasing business, have leased all the upper floors of the buildings at Fourth Avenue and Twenty-fifth Street—Nos. 333 to 341 Fourth Avenue and 102 East Twenty-fifth Street—to which they will remove about January 1 next year. They will have certain lofts or floors for rent to desirable tenants, who will find the Stokes Buildings well lighted, convenient to the Twenty-third Street and Twenty-eighth Street subway stations, to the surface lines, East and West, and within a few hundred feet of an important post-office station. Besides all these advantages the location is directly in touch with the whole publishing trade.

A. S. BARNES & Co. announce a new book by Henry C. Rowland, entitled "The Mountain of Fears," which pictures the strange adventures of Dr. Leyden, world traveller, naturalist and close observer of curious phases of human nature whose experiences show a mingling of seeming fantasy and truth and deal with elemental things in human nature. They will bring out at once "The Shakespeare Story Book," by Mary McLeod, with numerous full-page and text illustrations by Gordon Browne. The book is introduced by the distinguished Shakespearean scholar, Sidney Lee, who points out that Lamb's Tales offer a very fragmentary knowledge of the scope of the plots, and that the fuller and more accurate account given in "The Shakespeare Story Book" is therefore well justified.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have just ready volume 2 of the new History of England, edited by Prof. Oman, which consists of "England Under the Tudors," by A. D. Innes; "Tibet and Turkestan," by Oscar Terry Crosby; "Jane Austen and Her Times," by G. E. Milton, attractively illustrated from paintings and engravings; "Breaking the Wilderness," by F. S. Dellenbaugh, which grew out a series of lectures delivered before the Lowell Institute; and "Philippine Life in Town and Country," by James A. Le Roy. "The Evolution of Religion," by L. R. Farnell, is an anthropological study, the twelfth volume in Putnam's Crown Theological Library; and "The Romance of the French Abbeys," by Mrs. J. Champney, contains an astonishing number of tragic adventures and whimsical tales.

MCCLURE, PHILLIPS & Co. are just bringing out Charles Wagner's latest book, "The Gospel of Life," which contains half a dozen sermons on famous texts from the Bible, the Widow's Mite, etc. Mr. Wagner's main idea is best indicated by the following quotation from his preface: "If public worship, if preaching has any aim, it is to blend into one all prayer and toil. It is to help us to live by casting light upon our way, by interpreting our experiences, by teaching us to unravel the divine woof in the rude stuff of the way of this world. For this, it is enough to bring together these two things, the gospel and life. Life would be very obscure without the gospel; and how the gospel grows in strength and stature in contact with life." They will publish shortly "Irish History and the Irish Movement," by the noted publicist, Goldwin Smith. Professor Smith's earlier work along this same line, "Irish Character and Irish History," will give in advance an unusual authority and interest to this volume.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY publish this week the following books: "A Self-Supporting Home," by Mrs. Kate V. Saint Maur; "Jesus Christ and the Christian Character," by Professor Francis Greenwood Peabody: "Miss Desmond," by Miss Marie Van Vorst: "The Dwarf's Spectacles, and Other Fairy Tales," by Dr. Max Nordau; "The Life of Oliver Ellsworth," by William Garrott Brown; "Economic Geology of the United States," by Heinrich Ries, Ph.D.; "Graded City Speller, Eighth Year Grade," edited by William E. Chancellor; "Bacon's Essays," in Macmillan's Pocket Classics, (new series,) edited by Professor George Herbert Clarke; "Memorable Passages from the Bible," by Professor Fred. Newton Scott; Spalding & Moore's "Language Speller, II."; the second edition of Charles Major's "Yolanda: Maid of Burgundy;" "Interludes in Verse and Prose," by the Right Hon. Sir George Otto Trevelyan, and a new edition of Rutherford's "Radio-Activity," revised and greatly enlarged.

FOX, DUFFIELD & Co. will publish on the 25th inst. the "Letters of Henryk Ibsen." The work of translation, done directly from the Norwegian, has presented unusual difficulties, and met with untoward delays, beginning with the messenger boy who dropped overboard a goodly portion of it from a North River ferryboat last spring. The correspondence in the forthcoming volume begins with letters written in 1849, and continues down to the year 1900. There is an introduction by the editors, Halvdan Koht and Dr. Julius Elias, two distinguished Norwegian savants, who also contribute valuable biographical notes. A large number of letters are addressed to George Brandes, and there are others to Hans Christian Andersen, Frederick Hegel, William Archer, Edmund Gosse, Grieg, Bjornstjerne Bjornson and King Charles of Sweden. William Archer, reviewing the original publication, declares that the volume constitutes the best possible substitute for that autobiography which the great dramatist again and again thought of writing, but always put aside until now, in his seventy-sixth year, stricken with great illness, it is too late.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. will publish on November 15 "The Endless Life," an essay on immortality; and "The Pardoner's Wallet," a collection of essays, both by Samuel M. Crothers, author of "The Gentle Reader;" "A Javelin of Fate," a novel of Civil War times, by Mrs. Jeanie Gould Lincoln; "A Short History of Italy," by Henry D. Sedgwick; "A Memoir of Dr. James Jackson," by Dr. James J. Putnam; "Poems of Trumbull Stickney," collected in one volume; a study of "The Development of Religious Liberty in Connecticut," by Miss M. Louise Greene; and a revised edition of Miss Josephine Preston Peabody's tragedy, "Marlowe." A little later will be ready "In the March and Borderland of Wales," by A. G. Bradley, with sketches of the country by W. M. Meredith; "A Memoir of Dr. James Jackson," by James J. Putnam; "The Farce of Master Pierre Patelin," composed by an unknown author about 1469 and now put into English by Richard Holbrook; "Northland Heroes," by Florence Holbrook; "The Proceedings of the International Congress of Arts and Sciences at St. Louis, 1904," of which the first of the eight volumes is nearly ready; and "Sailors' Narratives of Voyages Along the New England Coast, 1524-1624."

A. S. BARNES & Co. have just ready for publication "The Spanish Explorers" in a uniform four-volume set, boxed, including "First Across the Continent," the journey of Alvar Nunez Cabeza de Vaca from Florida to the Pacific, 1528-1536, edited by Ad. F. Bandelier; "The First Explorer of the South, Narratives of the Career of Hernando de Soto, 1539-1542," edited by Edward Gaylord Bourne, Professor of History in Yale University, in two volumes; and "The First Explorer of the West: the Journey of Coronado, 1540-1542," translated and edited by George Parker Winship. They will also have ready "The Journeys of La Salle and His Companions, 1668-1687," as related by himself and his followers, which will take its place in the Trail Makers series. In this complete story of La Salle's dramatic adventures there is given one of the most important chapters of the history of the French in North America. The original narratives of Tonty and others are presented under careful editorship and furnish a history of intense interest in itself and of peculiar consequence, showing both the new discoveries and the origin of the French claim to the West. George Cary Eggleston's "Life in the Eighteenth Century" sketches the building and furnishing of more luxurious homes in the past century, and all the illustrations are remarkably well selected.

PICK-UPS.

SPECIES OF BOOK COLLECTORS.—In this age of specialization even so simple a subject as book collecting is subdivided in a complex, scientific way.

Book collectors of the twentieth century fall naturally into these classes:

Bibliomane—An indiscriminate, emotional collector.

Bibliognoste—A learned collector, very expert in imprints, first editions and the technicalities.

Bibliograph—A collector who writes about his collections.

Bibliotaphe—A cautious collector who keeps his books always under lock and key in glass cases.

Bibliophile—A real lover of books; one who buys books only for the pleasure of reading them.—Minneapolis Journal.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted" book-trade subscribers are given the privilege of a free advertisement for books out of print, of five nonpareil lines, exclusive of address, in any issue except special numbers, to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents a line, and amount should be inclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents a line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents a nonpareil line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents a nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

BOOKS WANTED.

☞ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

☞ Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly" does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

¶ Told by Uncle Remus

A new Uncle Remus book with Br'er Fox, Br'er Rabbit and all the rest of them, has just been published. 81 illustration by A. B. Frost, Frank Verbeck and J. M. Condé. Price, $2.00.

President Roosevelt, while at Atlanta, Georgia, took occasion to say a good deal about Uncle Remus and his creator, Joel Chandler Harris. Among other things he said:

"I am very fond of Uncle Remus. Presidents may come, and presidents may go, but Uncle Remus stays put. Georgia has done a great many things for the Union, but she has never done more than when she gave Mr. Joel Chandler Harris to American Literature."

¶ The Mysterious Stranger

and Other Cartoons

By John T. McCutcheon. Postpaid, $1.70; net, $1.50.

John T. McCutcheon, who, most people think, comes about as near the popular idea of a good cartoonist as any man presenting current events in this way, has one hundred and sixty of his best comments on the passing show in this book. They are about equally divided between public events and inimitable pictures of child life. In the public events President Roosevelt figures prominently and amusingly, and yet without offense. Mr. McCutcheon receives twenty thousand dollars a year to draw cartoons for the "Chicago Tribune."

"The President has been on the trail of a grizzly for four days."

STORIES FOR GIRLS

Betty Wales, Freshman

By MARGARET WARDE. Betty and her friends are typical American college girls, clever, jolly, high-spirited and lovable. They get all the fun and good possible out of their freshman year. Any one who meets them will wish to know them well. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

Betty Wales, Sophomore

By MARGARET WARDE. Those who knew Betty as a Freshman will be eager to follow her into Sophomore year. She and her friends are more interesting than ever. There is in every chapter the delightful atmosphere of the American College for girls. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

Polly the Gringo

By EVELYN RAYMOND. "Gringo" was a term applied by the Spanish natives of California to "Americanos" before California was in the Union. Polly Pancoast's father and brother went to California, and Polly followed them alone. Her experiences form a story of unusual charm in character and incident. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

An American Girl in Korea

By ANNIE M. BARNES. This very timely book offers a fascinating glimpse of the strange "Hermit Country." Margaret, although imprisoned in the underground dungeon of a monastery by Buddhist priests, whose mysterious rites she has witnessed, escapes and also frees a young artist. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

STORIES FOR BOYS

Winning His Way to West Point

By CAPT. PAUL B. MALONE, U. S. A. A thrilling story of a young recruit in the Philippines after the transfer to the United States. The scenes are those of camp, skirmish and battle. As a result of his bravery the hero wins an appointment to West Point. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

A Plebe at West Point

By CAPT. PAUL B. MALONE, U. S. A. Douglas Atwell won his cadetship by his bravery in the Philippines, and now appears at West Point. Capt Malone knows the cadet life at first hand, and his story will stir the blood of every reader. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

Fighting King George

By JOHN T. McINTYRE. Tom Deering was one of "Marion's Men," those fleet and daring riders who so baffled Tarleton and Clinton in the Carolinas. Tom sees lots of fighting and has the good fortune to be at Yorktown when Cornwallis gives up his sword. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

The Lost Expedition

By W. BERT FOSTER. This story, of how a professor and two young companions were lost on an Alaskan glacier, and how they escaped death in a dozen forms, has all the fascination of the old Arctic exploration narratives, with the zest of a stirring plot as well. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

STORIES FOR YOUNGER CHILDREN

Marjorie's Way

By ALICE TURNER CURTIS. Marjorie had two aims—to be like her aunt, and to help Luke Saunders. Luke turned out well and Marjorie did become like her aunt in a surprising way. A very wholesome and charming story. Cloth, illustrated, $1.00.

The Boynton Pluck

By HELEN WARD BANKS. Bob and Billy by mistake get into the hands of a mean old farmer, who overworks and half starves them. It takes pluck to stand it, but they pull through it, and are all the better for their experience. Cloth, illustrated, $1.00.

General Sociology — ALBION W. SMALL

Professor Small's main proposition is that the traditional sciences relating to the spiritual sides of life are sterile, unless they are carried out to a point at which they blend in one system of knowledge. The book is an exposition of the development of social theory from Spencer to Ratzenhofer, and a plea for the completion of the general structure of social science. 753 pp.; 8vo, cloth; net $4.00, postpaid $4.23.

A Decade of Civic Development — CHARLES ZUEBLIN

The author gives a concise and spirited account of certain definite measures—political, economic, social, and artistic—for the betterment of American cities. Professor Zueblin was formerly president of the American League for Civic Improvement. He is the author of American Municipal Progress and other volumes. 200 pp.; 12mo, cloth; net $1 25, postpaid $1.39.

Primary Facts in Religious Thought — ALFRED W. WISHART

Seven short essays intended to state, in a simple and practical manner, the essential principles of religion, and to clear them from the confusion arising from theoretical changes and historical criticism. 125 pp.; 12mo, cloth; net 75c., postpaid 85c.

Egoism: A Study in the Social Premises of Religion — LOUIS WALLIS

In this essay the author first sets forth the proposition that "egoism is the only 'force' propelling the social machine." This thesis he then proceeds to demonstrate by evidence drawn from biblical history. Lastly he shows its practical bearing on the present social problem. 137 pp.; 16mo, cloth; net 75c., postpaid 82 cts.

Methods in Plant Histology — CHARLES J. CHAMBERLAIN

An indispensable book for students of Botany. The volume contains directions for collecting and preparing plant material for microscopic investigation. It is the first complete manual to be published on this subject. Second edition, illustrated. 272 pp.; 8vo, cloth; net $2 25, postpaid $2.39.

Prophetic Element in the Old Testament — WILLIAM R. HARPER

A scholarly handbook for advanced students. This volume is the latest in the series of Constructive Bible Studies. 150 pp.; 8vo, cloth; postpaid $1.00.

Russia and Its Crisis
PAUL MILYOUKOV

The New York Times, under date of August 26, says: "It is not often that an author is so forcibly reminded of the truth of his own printed words as Professor Paul Milyoukov has been. His book on Russia, which we review this week, describes the 'attempt at welding autocracy and liberalism,' now under way in his native land. The last few days have given a striking exemplification of both the liberalism and the autocracy. The Czar has issued his rescript instituting a National Assembly, and within a fortnight of it his Government has arrested Professor Milyoukov for his activity in promoting agitation for reform in the empire."

602 pp.; 8vo, cloth; net $3.00; postpaid $3.20.

Place of Industries in Elementary Education — KATHARINE E. DOPP

EVE'S DAUGHTERS

Epigrams About Women From World-Wide Sources

Compiled by A MERE MAN and portrayed by A. G. LEARNED.

"Eve's Daughters" flashes like a case of jewels. It borrows from the wit, wisdom, and brilliancy of many literatures.

The subject is one of perennial fascination.

The authors are the greatest of all lands—including Euripides, Shakespeare, Goethe, Hugo, Balzac, Cervantes, Tolstoy, and Emerson. The great French stylists, who are the masters alike of good-natured raillery at the expense of women, and of the most graceful worship at the feminine altar, are represented liberally. But the standard English and American writers are by no means neglected, and Addison, Ruskin, Byron, Thackeray, Holmes and many others hold their own valiantly by the side of Rabelais, La Rochefoucauld, La Bruyère, Ninon de Lenclos, Michelet, Maupassant, and Bourget.

Unusual taste has been shown in the selection of material. A gentle tone of satire adds pungency to many of the aphorisms, but the note of contempt for women which has marred most of the witty writings about them in all ages is carefully avoided; so also is the note of coarseness. What has been allowed to stand is graceful, spicy, and delightfully humorous. Epigrams are included about coquettes, flirts, widows, the débutante, the prude, the summer girl, and the noblest types of wife and mother. Foibles and shams are exposed with genial banter, and the highest ideals of womanhood are also held up for admiration. The book is well fitted for a holiday and anniversary gift, and is at once educational and amusing, provocative of thought, and adapted to the idlest mood of mental recreation. The illustrations are the most original feature. Every page has an artistic and exquisite line illustration. The delicate marginal drawings, as well as the full-page designs, are made with rare skill by the celebrated American artist, A. G. Learned, whose covers for the Ladies' Home Journal and other high-class magazines are well known, and whose heads of pretty girls have led many to predict for the young artist a fame as brilliant as that of Gibson, Allan Gilbert, or Christy. His work is never imitative, and his sense of the value of the line in figure drawing is masterly. It is hardly too much to say that this book will prove to any lover of things artistic "a joy forever." It is one of the most unique gift books which has appeared from any American press in a number of years. Crown octavo, cloth, gilt top, cover design white and gold. $1.75

NEW BOOKS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

LONDON FILMS

By W. D. Howells

From "London Films"

The record of Mr. Howells's recent sojourn in London shows this admirable writer in his happiest vein. His delightful talk about London is most engaging. He draws illuminating and humorous contrasts between New York and the English metropolis, chatting delightfully of London weather, the street sights and noises, his rambles about town, the parks and churches, and his adventures with English lodgings and hansoms. The commentary is enlivened with much humor and agreeable bits of gossip.

THE PRINCIPLES OF MONEY AND BANKING

By Charles A. Conant

A systematic treatise on money and banking. The scope of the book carries the reader from the beginnings of exchange, when cattle and bits of metal passed by tale or weight, down through the origin of coinage to the method of modern banking and credit. The author, who has had a part in framing the monetary policies in various coutnries, brings the touchstone of experience to bear upon his work.

The Literary Biography of the Season

The Life of Charles Lamb

By E. V. LUCAS

Editor of "The Works and Letters of Charles and Mary Lamb," etc.

2 Volumes. 8°, with 50 Illustrations, net $6.00

Mr. Lucas has succeeded in this biography in reconstructing the Lamb circle, welding together autobiographical passages from Lamb's Essays and letters and references to Lamb by other writers, such as Hazlitt, Talfourd, Procter, Wainwright, DeQuincey, Coleridge, Wordsworth, and others, in such a way as to show in every light the most fascinating and the most lovable figure in English Literature. He has had the good fortune, as a result of painstaking researches, to secure much new information and material and an important group of new Lamb letters.

"The first really complete and adequate life of that singularly delightful writer and most lovable man. Mr. Lucas, whose patient and affectionate labor has done so much to elucidate the charming pages of Lamb has now placed the crown upon his work. One of the best pieces of literary work produced for many years."—London Spectator.

"For all the happiest things that have ever been said about Lamb, the enthusiasts will find in these two volumes a happy hunting-ground. We finished the book not with a note of admiration after a brilliant display of rhetoric, but with a quiet sigh of unfeigned sorrow at a forced parting from a very dear friend. . . . "—London Times.

NOTES IN SEASON.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. have just ready an account of "The War in the Far East," by the military correspondent of the London Times, one of the keenest observers of the conflict between the Russians and Japanese.

THE FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY publish this week a practical book on "Childhood," by Mrs. Theodore W. Birney, the founder and honorary president of the Mothers' Congress. The book has been highly recommended by Professor G. Stanley Hall, the great authority on child psychology, and others.

GEORGE W. JACOBS & Co. make an announcement of particular interest in the beginnings of American literature, printing and bookselling. The work is to be entitled "A Literary History of Philadelphia and Its Neighborhood," and is being prepared by Dr. Ellis Paxson Oberholzer, who, as the author of "Robert Morris, Patriot and Financier," the editor of the "American Crisis Biographies," etc., is amply qualified to deal with the subject. The author will give a particularly full account of the development of the publishing trade in Philadelphia.

MOFFAT, YARD & Co. will publish immediately a modern edition of "Æsop's Fables," with an introduction by Elisabeth Luther Cary, and sixteen colored and nineteen line illustrations by J. M. Condé. They also announce the publication, in full color, of W. L. Taylor's celebrated "Pictures from Longfellow." The set, now nearly ready, shows four pictures, "Home Keeping Hearts Are Happiest," "Maidenhood," "The Skeleton in Armor" and "The Golden Legend." The delicacy and beauty of Mr. Taylor's superb color are admirably reproduced in these fine lithographs.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & Co. will publish on the 16th inst. "The Country House," by C. E. Hooper, who gives special advice on the site, planning and building of the house, on its outside finish, the style of doors, windows and fireplaces, on plumbing, heating, lighting and ventilation, water supply and drainage, and the style, size and equipment of every room, together with a chapter on contracts and specifications. On the 20th inst. they will publish the authorized edition of Dr. C. C. Schilling's book, "Flashlights in the Jungle," which will contain all the original text and the 320 original illustrations.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have brought out this week "The Life of James Anthony Froude," by Herbert Paul, one of the most important biographies to be published this year. A great amount of new and interesting material in regard to Froude's life and career has been gathered for this new book. Mr. Paul, who is one of the most brilliant writers of the day in England, has had the personal assistance in the preparation of the biography of Miss Froude and of Ashley Froude, the historian's only son, and has had access to the Froude family papers. For the first time Froude's relationshop to the Oxford movement and the real motives and influences that affected his career have been made public. They have also just ready "In the Name of the Bodleian, and Other Essays," by Augustine Birrell, a pleasant and interesting volume on such subjects as "Book Worms," Old Pleasure Gardens," "Lawyers at Play," "Gossip in a Library," etc.; also, "The Fairy Godmother-in-Law," by Oliver Herford, illustrated by the author, considered to be the most whimsical, original and unexpected verses and drawings Mr. Herford has ever created.

This first volume of the "Life of Goethe" by the foremost authority of recent times was published in 1895. The author died in 1902. For the last ten years of his life the government relieved him of all his duties as Professor in the Berlin University in order that he might devote himself entirely to his great life of Goethe. A chronic illness had made it impossible for him to accomplish his regular work besides his great work of research. The second volume was finished by others and appeared in 1903. It is far larger than the first, and it was thought better to make the English translation in three volumes. All the verses quoted in book are given in German, but translations that have been furnished regard accuracy of thought beyond the highest literary finish. The translator is professor of German at the Leland Stanford University.

This fourth volume gives the stirring events in Germany during the years 1844-1848, culminating in the declaration of Frederick William IV. and the meeting of the German National Assembly at Frankfort. Special attention is given to the growth of the influence of the laboring classes and of socialist doctrines under Marx and Engels, and comparison is made between the revolutions in Vienna, Munich and Berlin. A fifth volume is promised. Bibliography (4 p.).

The author is associate professor of Egyptology and Semitic languages in the University of Chicago. Entirely based on recent original research. A mission to the museums of Europe to collect their Egyptian monuments for a commission of the four Royal academies of Germany (Berlin, Leipzig, Goettingen and Munich) in order to make these documents available for a great Egyptian dictionary endowed by the German Emperor enabled the author to copy from the originals practically all the historical monuments of Egypt in Europe. And then he has spent years in Egypt in preparation. As an up-to-date criticism of works on Egypt the work is invaluable. Designed for layman as well as scholar.

Collection of letters written by or to Mr. William Henry Brookfield, the English clergyman, and his wife. They were friends of Thackeray, Tennyson, the Hallams, Carlyle, Edward Fitzgerald, Monckton Milnes, and others of the brilliant men and women of Mid-Victorian literary life. The majority of these letters, which have been collected by a son and daughter of the Brookfields, are written by either husband or wife, though there are many from Thackeray, who considered Brookfield as one of his two dearest friends. Mrs. Brookfield was the original of Lady Castlewood in "Henry Esmond."

Fair Margaret is studying singing in Paris at the age of twenty-two. She lives at Versailles with an American countrywoman of the old school. Margaret is told by a great singer that she has a marvellous voice and an engagement is secured. She is booked to begin her career with "Faust," but later this is changed to "Rigoletto." The plot hinges on the last act when the "sack scene" is to be given. Two men play a part in Margaret's life. She flirts desperately with both. The end points to a continuation. The life of singers and the nature of artists are skillfully drawn.

The author, who has been an officer in the U. S. Army, corps of engineers, and is also a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, accomplished this journey in the latter half of 1903, in the company of a French army officer. They travelled from the Caspian Sea east through Russian and Chinese Turkestan to the Tibetan plateau; thence to Bombay. Unhampered by any political obligations, Mr. Crosby could examine and judge the conflicting influences at work in this part of Asia. This volume is not a transcript of a journal, but the summing up of experiences and observations. He made a special study of the effect of climate and religion upon human society. There are numerous illustrations, a good map and an index.

Life of the great Pope, born about 546, of a noble Roman family. He was "for many years the foremost personage in Europe, and did more, perhaps, than any other single man to shape the course of European development." Strange as it may seem, inasmuch as Pope Gregory was the means of introducing Christianity among the English, no comprehensive biography of him, in English, has appeared until the present work. The author, who is a Fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, has divided his two-volume work into three sections, the first two dealing with the history of Gregory, the third exclusively with his theology. A full general index, an index of Gregory's life, work and doctrines, and a table of dates complete the volumes.

The title is a Polish word meaning a hopeless sorrow. A young Pole, a pianist, electrifies the musical world of the United States, but does not reach the full development of his genius until a certain quality has entered into his music which is only produced by the "Zal." A girl of a rich New York family representing herself as a professional is accepted as his pupil and through her comes the Zal. The picture of the endless work of a professional musician is worked into the plot. A happy ending follows much "Zal."

Composed of sixteen papers, all dated, which have apeared during the last thirty years in various periodicals and in a volume entitled "Portraits of places." They represent in most part Mr. James's earliest impressions of England. Mr. Pennell's numerous illustrations enhance the charm of the descriptions. Some of the chapter headings are London, Chester, An English Easter, North Devon, In Warwickshire, Abbeys and castles, Old Suffolk, etc.

James, Mrs. Florence Alice Price, ["Florence Warden," pseud.] The house by the river. N. Y., J: S. Ogilvie Publishing Co., [1905.] 311 p. D. cl., $1.

Alison Clevely was a stenographer and typewriter girl, fresh from Lancashire to a London office, when she was sent by the firm to the house by the river to do some work for a man laid up after an accident. Three sets of children made the house interesting. On the first evening some mysterious events happened, and the story first makes and then solves many mysteries.

Jespersen, Otto. Growth and structure of the English language. N. Y., G. E. Stechert & Co., [1905.] 4+260 p. D. cl., $1.

Prof. Jesperson of the University of Copenhagen, says: "It will be my endeavor in this volume to characterize the chief peculiarities of the English language and to explain the growth and significance of those features in its structure which have been of permanent importance. The older stages of the language, interesting as their study is, will be considered only in so far as they throw light directly or by way of contrast on the main characteristics of present-day English, and an attempt will be made to connect the teaching of linguistic history with the chief events in the general history of the English people so as to show their mutual bearings on each other and the relation of language to national character."

Johnston, Alex. American political history, 1763-1876, by Alex. Johnston; ed. and supplemented by Ja. Albert Woodburn. In 2 pts. pt. 1, The Revolution, the Constitution and the growth of nationality, 1763-

1832. N. Y., Putnam, 1905. c. 10+446 p. O. cl., $2 net.

Made up of a series of articles relating to the various divisions of the political history of the United States, contributed by Professor Johnston to Lalor's "Cyclopædia of political science, political economy and political history," published twenty-five years ago. These articles have been considered as a most valuable compendium of information, and it has been the desire to present them in more convenient form that has impelled Professor Woodburn to prepare these volumes. He has tried to arrange, connect, supplement Professor Johnston's papers so as to form a consecutive political history of the United States from the opening of the American Revolution to the close of the period of Reconstruction. The editor has also contributed the introductory chapter and one on the Monroe doctrine, while an article on Tariffs in the United States, by Worthington C. Ford, has been included in the chapter on the American system.

McFadyen, J: Edgar. Introduction to the Old Testament. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1905. 12+356 p. D. cl., $1.75.

"This introduction," says the author, "does not pretend to offer anything to specialists. It is written for theological students, ministers, and laymen, who desire to understand the modern attitude to the old Testament as a whole, but who either do not have the time or the inclination to follow the details on which all thorough study of it must ultimately rest."

MacGrath, Harold. Hearts and masks; il. by Harrison Fisher; decorations by Ralph Fletcher Seymour. Indianapolis, Ind., Bobbs-Merrill Co., [1905. O.] c. 4+187 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

While sitting in Mouquin's down-town restaurant, New York City, a young man overhears a conversation, then picks up a paper and in the "society news" reads of a masquerade to be held at the Blankshire Hunt Club, New Jersey. He plans to go. Getting his disguise he hears more news. At the ball it is discovered there is a stranger present; jewels are stolen, detective work comes in. After a most involved plot the hero falls in love for life with a girl unknown when he entered Mouquin's.

McVickar, H: W. Reptiles, by H: W. McVickar; il. by his own hand. N. Y., Appleton, 1905. [N.] 5+208 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

Three young men meet in a Paris restaurant. One is a clergyman, one a man very much in love, the third a hardened cynic. The latter shows how all human beings have reptile qualities and sooner or later show their fangs and sting. He bets that five years hence they will all be married and all disgusted with their bargains. Much happens. When five years are up the cynic is the only happy married man. But the plot is ingenious. Illustrated by the author and printed with red trimmings.

After receiving a fine education and spending much of her time in luxury Vivien, when a girl of twenty, is turned upon the world of London to earn a living. Her mother has died and her father is a spendthrift and gambler who has reached the end of his resources. She finds a place in a shop where she works herself sick. Her doctor procures her a situation as secretary to a very eccentric old descendant of the aristocracy. Later Vivien again works in shops, but the end finds her among her own class after a brave, instructive career.

May, Florence. The life of Johannes Brahms. London, E: Arnold. [N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co.,] 1905. 2 v., 14+306; 8+318 p. O. cl., $7.

The materials for this work have been gathered in most part at first hand in the course of several Continental journeys. The author first met Brahms in 1871 when she took lessons from him at Lichtenthal, a suburb of Baden-Baden. Her recollections of her intercourse with the musician during this time and on several succeeding occasions are contained in an introductory chapter. The biography proper covers each detail of his career with some technical account of his compositions. Appendices of the first volume contain notes on musical form, Programme music, Rules of the Hamburg Ladies' Choir, etc., while those of vol. 2 contain a chronological catalogue of Brahms' works, Works edited by him, and an arranged catalogue, and index.

Mead, C: Marsh. Irenic theology: a study of some antitheses in religious thought. N. Y., Putnam, 1905. c. 11+375 p. O. cl., $1.50.

Written to promote the spirit of harmony in religious discussions. "Its main purpose is to illustrate the fact that antithetic, and even apparently irreconcilable, religious conceptions are often to be regarded as needing to be combined in order to express the fulness of the body of truth that is to be found in the oracles of God and in the Christian life." The author does not formulate a system, he merely pleads for a broader and more sympathetic judgment of the conflicting views which only divide instead of further cultivating the knowledge of the Christian world.

Peabody, Francis Greenwood. Jesus Christ and the Christian character: an examination of the teaching of Jesus in its relation to some of the moral problems of personal life. N. Y., Macmillan, 1905. 7+304 p. D. (Lyman Beecher lectures at Yale University, 1904.) cl., $1.50.
In his previous book, "Jesus Christ and the social question," Prof. Peabody has considered the teaching of Jesus in relation to some of the problems of modern life. Here, however, it is applied to the personal character, by the upbuilding of which the greatest good will come to the world at large. Taking the character of Christ as the perfect type, the author examines the roots of Christian character, its growth, its personal and social consequences and the ascent of ethics and descent of faith. In short, this is a study of Christian ethics.

Thanksgiving-Day, November 30, is the 250th anniversary of the settling of the Jews in America. In "Justice to the Jew," and "The Jew as a patriot" the author has shown his conviction that the Jews should rank among the better element of citizenship. He considers the faults of the Jews can be traced to his fellow citizens. Jews are healthy, long-lived and law-abiding and their family life is exemplary.

Princess (The) Priscilla's fortnight; by the author of "Elizabeth and her German garden." N. Y., Scribner, 1905. [N.] c. 3+329 p. D. cl., †$1.50.
Her Grand Ducal Highness the Princess Priscilla of Lothen-Kunitz, a stupid little German court, at twenty-one is so tired of her life that she determines to run away. She takes with her the old court librarian, and they travel over to England and settle down in a cottage in a little English village. As the Princess is young and beautiful, she attracts much attention, and finds many admirers. The ending to her escapade is quite amusing.

Richards, W: Rogers. God's choice of men: a study of scripture. N. Y., Scribner, 1905. c. 4+231 p. O. cl., $1.50 net.
The author is pastor of the Brick Presbylterian Church, New York City. In his ethical and practical rather than doctrinal treatment he maintains that in the conflicts attending and following the Protestant Reformation those men who made much of God's sovereignty were also the successful champions of human freedom. He shows that the same forces still battle and that the like faith may be needed again. He traces to the Calvinistic faith of Holland and Scotland that Europe and America are free today to make their own laws and worship God in their own thoughts and their own prayers.

The author of "the life of Napoleon I." here discusses those events which had a distinct formative influence upon the development of European states during the latter part of the 19th century. This first volume deals with the causes of the Franco-German War and the history of the war, with the founding of the French Republic, the welding of the German Empire, the Eastern Question, the Russo-Turkish War, the Balkan settlement, the making of Bulgaria, and Nihilism and absolutism in Russia.

Rosegger, Petri Kettenfeier. I. N. R. I.: a prisoner's story of the cross; 6 il. in col. painted by Corwin Knapp Linson in the Holy Land. N. Y., McClure, Phillips & Co., 1905. [O.] 3+340 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

A young carpenter joined a German socialist society and was selected to fire the shot at the Chancellor. He was condemned to death. A priest tried to comfort him, but the poor condemned man thought only of his mother's history of the Savior and comforted himself by writing it out as he remembered it. After six weeks it was done, then came the end. The book has been a literary sensation in Germany. The author is peasant born, a sort of modern apostle.

Rowland, H: Cottrell. The mountain of fears. N. Y., A. S. Barnes & Co., 1905. [O.] c. 6+301 p. il. D. cl., †$1.50.

Author's collection of his poems to date. Introduction, by J. A. Spender, explains that the poems have throughout been subjected to a careful revision and considerable alterations were made in "The dream of man;" "The hope of the world;" Domine, quo vadis;" "Lakeland once more;" the last part of "Lacrimæ musarum;" and the first part of "The prince's guest." He also says there are a considerable number of new poems included, some of which he judges the author's best work.

Webster, Dan. Webster's first Bunker Hill oration and Washington's farewell address; ed., with notes and an introd., by Fred Newton Scott. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1905. c. 53+107 p. por. 12°, (Longmans' English classics.) cl., 40 c.

Wertheimer, E: de., comp. The Duke of Reichstadt (Napoleon the second): a biography compiled from new sources of information. N. Y., J: Lane Co., 1905. 16+462 p. il. por. O. cl., *$5 net.
The hero of Rostand's l'Aiglon was the ill-starred son of Napoleon I. and Marie Louise of Austria, By the succession of historical events he was known as King of Rome, Prince of Parma, Napoleon II. and Duke of Reichstadt. He was born March 20, 1811 and died July 22, 1832. He died too young to find scope for his capacity to rule which seems to have been of a high order. His death was a severe blow to those Frenchmen who thought that with him they had lost the guarantee against the aggression of foreign powers. The author has made exhaustive search among the archives of France and Austria and has found much new material.

Wilson, Bingham Thoburn. The village of Hide and Seek; il. by W. Herbert Dunton. N. Y., Consolidated Retail Booksellers, 1905. c. 190 p. O. cl., †$1.25.
Two children, who have been driven away from the village inn by a cross grandfather, are led by an old woman, a reputed witch, up the mountainside to the village of Hide and Seek. It is a village of tiny play houses, lived in by dolls and ruled over by this witch, who is a sister of Santa Claus and Queen of the dolls. The story tells all that befell the children in this delightful place.

Wood, W. Birkbeck, and Edmonds, J. E. A history of the civil war in the United States, 1861-65; with an introd. by Spenser Wilkinson. N. Y., Putnam, 1905. 17+549 p. maps, plans, O. cl., $3.50 net.
A compilation from authentic American works by two English army officers. The subject is treated mainly from a strategetical standpoint. The political and diplomatic side of the war is only alluded to when it exercised a direct influence upon the military course of events. The naval operations are dealt with in a separate chapter, and to the accounts of the more important battles are added appendices emphasizing the chief points of controversy. Detailed maps illustrate the various campaigns, and tactical plans accompany the account of the chief battles.

Worley, G: Southwark Cathedral, formerly the Collegiate Church of St. Saviour, otherwise St. Mary Overie: a short history and description of the fabric; with some account of the college and the see. N. Y., Macmillan, 1905. 117 p. il. 12°, (Bell's cathedral ser.) cl., 60 c.

PICK-UPS.

A HUMBLE HUSBAND.—Mrs. Julia Ward Howe was having an afternoon at home, and the reception rooms were filled with those whose names are well known in the literary and artistic world. A young granddaughter was pouring tea, and late in the afternoon was asked for a cup by a man unknown to her, who said as he took it:

"Every one here seems to be somebody or doing something. What do you do?"

"Oh, I'm only Mrs. Howe's granddaughter," the girl told him.

"You are content to shine in a reflected light," he said in a manner she thought so patronizing that she retaliated by asking him what he did.

"Oh, I shine in a reflected light, too," he said amiably. "I'm Mr. Humphry Ward."—New York Telegram.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

NOVEMBER 18, 1905.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter for advertising pages should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers and librarians depend on the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalog," and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

POST-OFFICE REORGANIZATION.

THE Postmaster-General has taken a first step, and a long one, in the reorganization of the Post-Office Department along business lines. Without waiting for any amendment of the law by Congress he has acted within the law by readjusting the several divisions of the department into logical relation with each other. It is evident that he has in mind such a reorganization of the department as will bring it into line with the modern business methods of a successful corporation. One of the weaknesses of the department was the absurd manner in which divisions having no relations with each other were jumbled together under one of the Assistant Postmasters-General, while cognate divisions were separated under other jurisdictions. This resulted, on the one hand, in serious confusion and cross-current of authority, and on the other, in absurd rivalries, so to speak, as between the registry and money order divisions of the Department.

The new order brings into the office of the Postmaster-General himself what may be called the staff official proper; groups under the jurisdiction of the First Assistant Postmaster-General the appointment and control of postmasters and the administration of post-offices; gives to the Second Assistant Postmaster-General the charge of transportation and relieves him of certain incongruous divisions; charges the Third Assistant Postmaster-General with care for the financial relations of the Department, including the money order and registry systems, and the sale and redemption of stamps, retaining the division of classification in that office; and entrusts the rural free delivery, the cognate division of topography, and like relations, to the Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General. We have from time to time pointed out, in THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, the desirability of such grouping as a sine qua non of good administration, and we hail the present change as an evidence both of the Postmaster-General's intention to do and his ability to plan the right thing.

THE Harper reorganization committee gives notice that the holders of $1,000,000 of the income bonds out of the total of $1,778,773.32 outstanding have assented to the proposed exchange of these securities for the preferred stock, at the rate of fifty cents on the dollar, as proposed by the committee, and fixes December 1, 1905, as the date by which others desiring to participate should signify their assent. No further information has been given, however, on which to form a judgment as to why this course is desirable, and it is not easy to see that any holder of income bonds will gain by the change or suffer any harm by failing to participate; nor has it been stated whether those assenting to the change are those in whose interest such a change would be. There is evident an indisposition on the part of some holders of income bonds to make the change without further information.

COPYRIGHT CONVENTION WITH JAPAN.

THE announcement that a copyright convention between Japan and the United States has been satisfactorily concluded, and is on the eve of being signed, is confirmed by the State Department. There has been diplomatic correspondence relative to this treaty for a number of years. The official text of the agreement is expected shortly and will be printed by us in a forthcoming issue.

VALUABLE MANUSCRIPT RETURNED.

THE copy of Bede's "Super Cantica Canticorum," a priceless illuminated manuscript of the thirteenth century, which was reported last week to have been stolen from the library of Gray's Inn, has been recovered. A workman engaged on the building on the 10th inst. found the book wrapped in a newspaper and conveyed it to the authorities of the Inn.

REORGANIZING THE POST-OFFICE.

POSTMASTER-GENERAL CORTELYOU, according to a special despatch to the New York Tribune, "has quietly completed a thorough reorganization of the entire Post-office Department, which will go into effect December 1. Notable in the new organization are the following: The grouping of everything affecting post-offices, from the appointment of the postmaster to the control of the movement of the mails within the jurisdiction of the larger offices, under the First Assistant; the confining of the duties of the Second Assistant to all transportation of the mails other than that which comes within the jurisdiction of the larger offices; the transfer of the Money Order Division to the Third Assistant, who already controls the registry system and all other revenue producing sources of the department: the transfer to the Fourth Assistant of the topographic division, which is chiefly engaged in making maps for the rural free delivery service, already under the control of the Fourth Assistant, and the centralization of all supply divisions under his control.

"While the abolition of the somewhat ludicrous spectacle of the registry and money order divisions resorting to a species of competition more suitable to petty business competitors than to branches of the government service, and the centralization of all supplies under a single head responsible to the Fourth Assistant, will constitute the most noticeable improvement which will immediately follow the reorganization, numerous others, less obvious, are regarded as certain to be effected by the new arrangement.

"The new arrangement will be put in operation by the following order, which will be issued by the Postmaster-General on November 14:

"It is hereby ordered that the Division of Appointments, Division of Bonds and Commissions, and the Division of City Free Delivery, heretofore under the supervision of the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, be transferred and assigned to the First Assistant Postmaster General; that the Division of Money Orders, heretofore under the supervision of the First Assistant Postmaster General, be transferred and assigned to the Third Assistant Postmaster General; that the Division of Files and Records, under the supervision of the Third Assistant Postmaster General, be abolished and its personnel and work assigned to the office of Chief Clerk of that Bureau; that the office of the Topographer, heretofore under the supervision of the Postmaster General, and the Division of Dead Letters and the Division of Postoffice Supplies, heretofore under the supervision of the First Assistant Postmaster General, be transferred and assigned to the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, that the division superintendents, the rural agents, and the clerks at Division Headquarters, Rural Free Delivery Service, heretofore under the supervision of the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, be transferred and assigned to the Postmaster General (Division of Postoffice Inspectors and Mail Depredations); and that all clerks in the Department engaged in handling supplies and in the work incident thereto be transferred and assigned to duty in the Division of Supplies, office of the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General; and that the organization of the Postoffice Department shall be as follows:

Office of the Postmaster General—Chief clerk, private secretary, Assistant Attorney General, purchasing agent, chief inspector (Division of Postoffice Inspectors), appointment clerk, disbursing clerk.

Office of the First Assistant Postmaster General.—Division of Appointments, Division of Bonds and Salaries and Allowances, Division of City Delivery, Division of Correspondence.

Office of the Second Assistant Postmaster General Division of Railway Mail Service, Division of Foreign Mails, Division of Railway Adjustments, Division of Contracts, Division of Inspection, Division of Equipment

Office of the Third Assistant Postmaster General—Division of Finance, Division of Stamps, Division of Money Orders, Division of Registered Mails, Division of Classification, Division of Redemption.

Office of the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General—Division of Rural Delivery, Division of Supplies, Division of Dead Letters, Division of Topography.

The regulations of the Postoffice Department are hereby amended in conformity with the foregoing transfers and designations.

This order is to take effect December 1, 1905.

GEORGE B. CORTELYOU, Postmaster General."

Under the reorganization secured by the Postmaster-General's order the broad plan upon which the department's work is now allotted may be summarized as follows:

Postmaster-General—Direction and supervision of the postal service.

First Assistant Postmaster-General—Postoffice personnel and management.

Second Assistant Postmaster-General—Transportation of the mails.

Third Assistant Postmaster-General—Postal finance.

Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General—Rural free delivery and miscellaneous postal business.

MODERN BOOK ILLUSTRATION.

AT a meeting of the New York Library Club, at the Library of the General Theological Seminary, on the afternoon of the 9th inst., the subject of "Book Illustration" was discussed, particularly in relation to historical and scientific books and current publications. George Hawes Whittle, of the art department of the Century, spoke of the principles of simplicity and unity that must underlie the illustrator's work, and the thorough sympathy with the text that is necessary if it is to be properly interpreted. Victor H. Paltsits, of the Lenox Library, said that bogus illustrations were a common characteristic of historical books. Publishers did not discriminate between actual portraits or bonafide drawings and purely imaginative pictures in the illustration of histories. For example, he said that there is no known portrait of Columbus, the existing pictures being simply different types created by early chroniclers; yet, nevertheless, these are used in most school and standard histories with no statement of the fact. No known portrait of Jacques Cartier exists; yet what purports to be such appears in many histories, though it is merely a creative picture taken from an old painting by a French artist. One of the most popular manuals of the history of old New York, he said, was supplied largely with bogus illustrations, such, for instance, as the familiar picture of Peter Stuyvesant's house on the old Bouwerie, which he characterized as an unauthentic picture, "faked" or altered in minor details by successive publishers in order to present a slightly different appearance in different books. Frank Weitenkampf, curator of the Print Department of the New York Public Library, spoke briefly upon the formation of print departments in public libraries, the collection of material and its varied uses. Mr. Bostwick spoke of bogus scientific pictures, instancing the picture in so many encyclopædias showing the funnel-shaped cloud of a tornado, which he said was wholly imaginary, as until recently at least no photograph or actual sketch of this existed. He referred also to the practice of having text prepared, often of a valueless character, to fit a given series of pictures, as being the raison d'être of many illustrated books. In the discussion the inartistic character of many so-called art gift-books was pointed out, and it was said that the greatest banes of modern book illustration were "the girl"—of the Gibson, Christy and kindred varieties—and the half-tone. An exhibition of examples of illustrative work was shown after the meeting in the Bible room of the seminary.

ENGLISH BOOKS IN DEMAND.

THE following books, according to the London Book Monthly, were most in demand in England during October:

Captains All. W. W. Jacobs.
Ayesha. H. Rider Haggard.
On Company's Service. W. Pett Ridge.
A Maker of History. E. Phillips Oppenheim.
For Richer or Poorer. Edith H. Fowler.
The Red Reaper. John A. Steuart.
The Parson's Wood. Violet A. Simpson.
My Life. Alfred Russel Wallace.
Autobiography of Samuel Smiles. Edited by T. Mackay.
Life of the late Edward Granville. Lord Edmund Fitzmaurice.

THE SCRIBNER EXHIBIT OF FIRST EDITIONS.

THE usual fall exhibition held by Charles Scribner's Sons is this year devoted to an extraordinary collection of the first editions of one hundred famous books. This gathering begins with a sumptuous folio of St. Thomas Aquinas, printed by Mentelin at Augsburg in 1463—eleven years before Caxton began his famous press at Westminster—and extends through more than three centuries, almost to the modern era, in Goethe's "Wilhelm Meister" of 1795. The most important and valuable book in the exhibition is a superb copy of Pliny's "Historia Naturalis" from John de Spira's press at Venice in 1469. This, the masterpiece of Spira's famous press, is a magnificent specimen of book making even at a time when books were works of art. This copy has been illuminated by Girolamo di Cremona. Of popular interest is a copy of the editio princeps of the "Imitatio Christi" printed about 1471. Among the rarer items are the Augustine's "Civitate Dei" of 1466; the Herodotus of 1474; the Euclid of 1482; the Plato of 1513, besides the first editions of Sophocles, Euripides, Thucydides and Aristophanes. Here may be seen also the first editions of Froissart Chronicles, of Holinshed's Chronicles, of Gerarde's fascinating Herball, with its quaint and beautiful wood-cuts, of the first complete Chaucer in its original vellum binding, of Montaigne's "Essais," and Sidney's "Arcadia." For the bibliographical expert here are such choice rarities as Coryat's "Crudites," 1611 (John Davies's of Hereford copy), Baxter's "Saints' Everlasting Rest," the first (Latin) edition of Fox's "Book of Martyrs," Watt's "Hymns and Songs" (1707), of which but three copies are known, and George Fox's curious and extremely rare "A Battle-Door" (in defence of the Quaker Thou). French literature is amply represented by totally uncut copies of the first editions of Molière's "Les Femmes Sçavantes," and Racine's "Mithradate," the latter enriched by the addition of his autograph signature, and the four exquisite little volumes of Fénelon's "Les Aventures de Telemaque. A copy of Boileau's "Œuvres Diverses" contains a three-page autograph letter of Boileau to Racine, and some satiric verses on a mezzotint portrait of himself. Lessing's "Fabeln" and Goethe's "Wilhelm Meister" may be mentioned among the masterpieces of German literature, while of the English literature of the eighteenth century here are to be found almost all the famous books of that century famous in literature, many in unique state and all enriched by manuscript material of great interest and value. The exhibition opened on November 15 and will continue for one week.

$1000 FOR A TEXT-BOOK.

THE EMMA WILLARD ASSOCIATION has decided to offer a prize of not less than $1000 for the best text-book on law and business adapted to the needs of women and for use in girls' schools. A committee has been appointed to arrange the details of the contest, and is expected to report at an early date.

BUSINESS NOTES.

CRESTON, IND.—Beecher & Miller, booksellers, have closed out.

HARTFORD, CONN.—Smith & McDonough, booksellers, have dissolved partnership. W. J. McDonough will continue the business.

NEW YORK CITY.—A creditor's petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Hudson Publishing Company of 11 East Sixteenth Street, which was a sub-company of Merrill & Baker and was incorporated under Maine laws with a capital stock of $100,000.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

THE Chicago Bookseller has absorbed Latest Literature, and will hereafter be known as The Bookseller and Latest Literature, and be published by C. A. Huling and a staff of assistants from Downer's Grove, Ill., with an editorial office at 88 Washington Street, Chicago.

THE Chicago Record-Herald will publish its seventh annual book number on December 2, of which issue an extra number will be sent to the booksellers in the West and Northwest. A feature of this number will be a review of recent publications suitable for holiday gifts, the résumé being accompanied with illustrations.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & COMPANY announce a new magazine, to be called "Farming," with the sub-title of "An Illustrated Home Magazine Devoted to the Living and Growing Things on the Farm." It will make its appearance early during the coming year. It is expected that this magazine will do for the real farmer what the Garden Magazine does for the gardener. It is planned to make it a live, practical magazine, covering every interest of the intelligent and progressive farmer. The subscription price will be one dollar the year and ten cents the single number.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

DODD, MEAD & Co. have just ready the fourth and concluding volume of "Auction Prices of Books," edited by Luther S. Livingston. Aside from its intrinsic value as a work of reference, the work deserves also distinction for having been brought out within a remarkably short period of time after its first announcement. Only the few who have been engaged in similar work will be able to appreciate this promptness which in the issue of such a work is a boon for which its subscribers cannot be too grateful. With these four volumes of "Auction Prices of Books," and the annual issues of "American Book Prices Current," and the English "Book Prices Current," the bookseller will be better equipped to do business than ever.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

HURST & Co. have brought out a reprint of Longfellow's "Tales of a Wayside Inn" in ten of their series at prices ranging from twelve cents to 75 cents trade prices. Stock is now ready for shipment.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS announce the first volume of "The Royal Collections of Paintings at Buckingham Palace and Windsor Castle;" and Howard Pyle's new book, "The Story of the Champions of the Round Table," fully illustrated by the author.

AT the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Stationers' Board of Trade, held on the 14th inst., its was voted to give the usual dinner early next year. The following committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements: William B. Boorum, Jr., James C. Aikin, Robert Ansley, Eberhard Faber, Lyman B. Sturgis and David A. Tower.

E. P. DUTTON & COMPANY announce the "Life of Mary of Modena, Queen of James II.," by Martin Haile. Shortly after the death of his first wife James married Princess Mary of the house of Este. She was the only Italian queen who ever shared the English throne. The author draws freely on contemporary letters and despatches, and illustrated his volume with thirteen photogravures from contemporary letters.

D. C. HEATH & Co. will publish shortly a volume of "Deutsche Reden," prepared by Dr. Rudolf Tombo and Professor Rudolf Tombo, Jr., of Columbia University. It will furnish representative speeches by Bismarck, Bülow, Moltke, Schurz and others, together with suitable biographies, explanatory notes, maps and portraits. It will offer interesting and instructive reading for the general reader or for advanced college classes.

A. WESSELS COMPANY have secured the first long novel written by Edgar Saltus since 1903 and are the fortunate publishers of "The Perfume of Eros: a Fifth Avenue Incident." New York society with characters that are living, logical men and women, will enter into the new work of the author of "The Pace That Kills;" "The Anatomy of Negation," and the many other works that always show the author's great talent, although they sometimes make his readers regret his lack of repose and self restraint.

L. C. PAGE & Co. have just brought out Bliss Carman's third volume of prose essays, entitled "The Poetry of Life." The author's keynote is "the poetry of beauty, sincerity and elation," and with this as a central theme he has written sixteen essays on such significant subjects as "The Purpose of Poetry," "How to Judge Poetry," "Defense of Poetry," "Cheerful Pessimism," etc. He has also included his essay on the poetry of Swinburne, and appreciative and sympathetic articles on the poetry of Ralph Waldo Emerson, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and James Whitcomb Riley.

MCCLURE, PHILLIPS & Co. will publish the latter part of this month, the Rev. Washington Gladden's book, "The New Idolatry." It is in spirit a protest against the commercializing of government, of education and of religion; against the growing tendency in church and state to worship power and forget the interests of justice and freedom; against the dethronement of God and the enthronement of Mammon. Several of the papers were called out in the recent controversy respecting the relations of the church to ill-gotten wealth. The others deal with the larger relations and obligations of citizenship.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. will have ready November 20 "A Memoir of Dr. James Jackson," by James J. Putnam, including a sketch of the father, brothers and ancestry of this founder of the McLean Asylum and the Massachusetts General Hospital, of which Dr. Jackson was first physician until he resigned in 1825; "The Farce of Master Pierre Patelin," composed by an unknown author about 1469 and Englished by Richard Holbrook, illustrated with facsimiles of seven woodcuts in the only known copy of the edition published by Pierre Levett, Paris, about 1489; and "Northland Heroes," by Florence Holbrook, containing the stories of Fridtjof and Beowulf, the most famous of the Northland heroes.

GEORGE W. JACOBS & Co. have a very dainty book in "Shakespeare's Sweetheart," by Sara Hawks Sterling, purporting to be the love story of Anna Hathaway, written by herself and entrusted to Ben Jonson, which has just been found among old archives. There is a third printing ready of "Bright Ideas for Entertaining," by Mrs. Herbert B. Linscott; a fifth printing of "The Girl and the Deal," by Karl Edwin Harriman; and a large second printing of "Knocks, Witty, Wise and —," by Minna Thomas Antrim. Other books making rapid strides to popularity are "Phases, Mazes and Crazes of Love," a companion to the "Knocks"; and "Dolly's Theatricals," by D. Gwyn Jeffreys, a very clever juvenile for clever children.

THE CONSOLIDATED RETAIL BOOKSELLERS, having withdrawn from the jobbing business —selling most of their stock to the Baker & Taylor Company and to A. C. McClurg & Co. —are devoting their energies now to developing their publishing business, in which direction they have already accumulated a number of titles. They will bring out on November 25 a new work of fiction entitled "Minna, Wife of the Young Rabbi," by Wilhelmina Wittigschlager, with illustrations by W. Herbert Dunton. The story is woven around a beautiful girl from among the Russian Jews, but not of them, and carries her along through exciting periods to a climax that culminates in the assassination of Alexander II. of Russia.

THE JOHN C. WINSTON COMPANY will publish shortly a work by Col. A. K. McClure of the first importance to Pennsylvanians and of national interest to many who are not sons of the Keystone State. Colonel McClure is one of the few conspicuous men living who took an active part in making the history of the last century. As editor of a great newspaper, his acquaintance included every prominent man of his time, and no one else could write so intimately and well these "Old Time Notes of Pennsylvania." The work will be issued in two large 8vo volumes, illustrated with rare portraits and pictures. A special limited edition will be signed by the author. They will bring out in January "Andiron Tales," an inimitable new book, by John Kendrick Bangs. Clare Victor Dwiggins has illustrated the text profusely, and it will be published with a number of full-page color plates.

A. S. BARNES & Co. announce for immediate publication "Sea Shore Life," by Dr. Alfred Goldsborough Mayer, an elaborately illustrated and popular description of the invertebrates of the New York and adjacent coast. This is the first volume of the New York Aquarium Nature Series prepared under the auspices of the New York Zoological Society, with an introductory note by Charles H. Townsend, Director of the New York Aquarium. The author, Dr. Mayer, is the director of the Marine Biological Laboratory of the Carnegie Institution at Tortugas, Florida. His descriptions of sea anemones, star fish, crabs, lobsters, shrimps, sand bugs, oysters, scallops, squid, and the many forms of invertebrate shore life in the North Atlantic are written in popular form and furnish means of identification as well as entertaining accounts of the anatomy and physiology of the various species and their habits. Mr. Townsend points out that while the book is prepared by a zoologist of the highest standing it is thoroughly popular in character and presents the facts of modern zoological investigation so clearly that it is peculiarly attractive to the general reader as well as to the nature student and teacher. The illustrations which are mostly from the author's photographs of living specimens in the New York Aquarium and elsewhere form in themselves an exceptionally fine representation of sea shore life.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY have just brought out "The Menace of Privilege: a Study of the Dangers to the Republic from the Existence of a Favored Class," by Henry George, Jr., a brief plain presentation of the problems that are arising in this country and ominously pressing for solution; "Little Novels of Italy," the third volume of the edition de luxe of "The Works of Maurice Hewlett; "The System of the Stars," by Agnes M. Clerke, extensively recast from the original edition of fifteen years ago, and with a large number of new illustrations; "A General View of the History of the English Bible," by the late Brooke Foss Westcott, revised by William Aldis Wright; "The Prevention of Senility and a Sanitary Outlook," which consists in two addresses by Sir James Crichton-Browne; and "Science of Common Life," consisting in a large number of interesting experiments, showing the scientific principles underlying every-day phenomena, by A. T. Simmons and E. Stenhouse. They will publish shortly a new "Dictionary of German Quotations," said to be notably full, inclusive and informing; five of Clyde Fitch's plays in separate volumes, the first of which will be "The Climbers"; the "Young Germany," sixth and concluding volume of Professor Brandes's "Main Currents in Nineteenth Century Literature;" also, a new book by Professor Erastus Palmer, of the College of the City of New York, and L. Walter Sammis, on the "Principles of Oral English."

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted" book-trade subscribers are given the privilege of a free advertisement for books out of print, of five nonpareil lines, exclusive of address, in any issue except special numbers, to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents a line, and amount should be inclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents a line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents a nonpareil line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents a nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

BOOKS WANTED.

☞ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

☞ Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly" does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

30 days more of Christmas trade—a hint to booksellers of your customers' Christmas book list

¶ Back Home

By EUGENE WOOD

Illustrated by A. B. Frost
Cloth, 12*mo*, $1.50

Back home! Back to the good old country village where you passed your childhood. No one knows how many memories he has in common with his neighbors, from Maine to California, till these papers wake him up, shake him up with laughter, and now and again bring a touch of tears along with the merriment.

¶ My Friend the Chauffeur

By C. N. and A. M. WILLIAMSON

With Sixteen Illustrations
Cloth, 12*mo*, $1.50

Sunny romance is the keynote of this new automobile story by the authors of "The Lightning Conductor." A young English nobleman takes a trip with a motor-car through the Italian lake region, Venice, and into Dalmatia, with the skittish widow of an American millionaire, her precocious daughter, and her charming niece.

¶ The Work of Our Hands

By H. A. MITCHELL KEAYS

Author of "He that Eateth Bread With Me."
Cloth, 12*mo*, $1.50

A young woman brought up in somewhat straightened circumstances marries the millionaire son of a great mill owner of her town. She values money for the power it gives her to better the condition of other people. When she begins to practice her belief, with the aid of her husband's money, among his downtrodden, mill employes she invites his opposition and brings on a tragic struggle.

¶ The Pang-Yanger

By ELMA A. TRAVIS, M.D.

Cloth, 12*mo*, $1.50

An extraordinary tale of primitive love and passion, of hate and revenge, the scene of which is laid in the Catskills, and the protagonists of which, Abijah Bead, the hardy mountaineer, and Barbara Hurst, the passionate Southern girl, are contrasted types of American manhood and womanhood.

¶ The Fortunes of the Landrays

By VAUGHAN KESTER

Five Illustrations by The Kinneys. Cloth, 12*mo*, $1.50

Never has so much of the life of our country been put between the covers of a novel—the frontier days of Ohio, the gold excitement of '49, the trail of the pioneers and their prairie schooners to the West across the plains and Mormon Utah, with its Indian massacres and white man's treacheries, the Civil War, the boom town period of the Middle West, and the beginning of the industrial period in the Ohio valley.

¶ Told by Uncle Remus

By JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS

Illustrated by A. B. Frost
$2.00

"Br'er Rabbit, Br'er Fox, Mr. Dog, Sis Cow"—do you know them? of course you do. Then you will be glad to know that there is another Uncle Remus book, with more stories by that wonderful story teller, Uncle Remus. If there is a child in your home, gladden its heart with the new Uncle Remus stories. If there are no children, read it yourself, and be young once more.

¶ The Ancient Landmark

By ELIZABETH CHERRY WALTZ

Cloth, 12*mo*, $1.50

A young, beautiful and sensitive woman married to a drug fiend believes that nothing can justify divorce, and her friends and the social circle to which she belongs agree with her. The entire book is occupied in telling how she gradually came to believe in her right to her own life, in which she was helped by a real love for a man whom she could also respect.

Two Unusual Books

FOR CHILDREN

By LUCILE LOVELL

"ANDY"

THIS is the greatest book of its kind since "Fauntleroy," and appeals to children and grown-ups alike. No one can resist Andy. He is an unusual boy, and the account of how he won a place for himself is an unusual story, told with delicate pathos and rare humor.

"The WALCOTT TWINS"

THE funniest book about children since "Helen's Babies." The twins look just alike, and when they mischievously change clothes and the girl goes to the house of a bachelor uncle, while the boy visits a maiden aunt, there are side-splitting complications. A wholesome, jolly story, and a universal favorite.

MINNA

Wife of the Young Rabbi

By WILHELMINA WITTIGSCHLAGER

Drawings by W. HERBERT DUNTON

Handsomely bound in red cloth. Embossed with the Russian National Arms

Price $1.50

This story will prove a sensation in fiction. It is woven around a beautiful girl born among the Russian Jews, but not of them, and carries her along through exciting periods to a climax that culminates in the assassination of Alexander II. of Russia. ¶ From the time when this beautiful girl runs away from her bridegroom of but a few hours (whom she is forced to marry) to the end, the reader is fascinated with this story of love, intrigue, action, and pathos. It is a powerful book, for the author writes with feeling and delicacy, and with her knowledge and accuracy has given the work coloring both vivid and unique.

Think This Over

THE PERFUME of EROS

A Fifth Avenue Incident

By EDGAR SALTUS

12mo, Cloth, Decorative, $1.25

The publishers confidently believe that "THE PERFUME OF EROS," the first long novel since 1903 by the author of "The Pace That Kills" and "The Anatomy of Negation," will add materially to the already large number of Mr. Saltus' admirers.

A vivid picture of New York society, and a plot that will hold the reader's attention, while its outcome is unexpected.

The characters are logical living men and women, such men as one expects to meet in the society which the author portrays.

COMPLETION OF THE

American Catalog
1900-1905

The Second (or Supplementary Volume) nearly ready

We are now completing the printing of the second volume of the new "American Catalog, 1900–1905," which will be ready for delivery in November.

The first volume, issued in June last, is a complete record in itself, being a dictionary-catalog of all books recorded between January 1, 1900, and January 1, 1905. In its one alphabet every book is entered at least three times (by author, title and subject), with information as to size, price, publisher, year of issue, etc. It forms the latest addition to the old series of the "American Catalogue," published in quarto form, while the newest volume is an octavo, which is generally conceded to be a much handier shape. We can reasonably affirm that every dealer needs such a permanent catalog in his business, while every library of importance should have this standard bibliographical work on its shelves, since its usefulness in the world of books is on a par with a time-table in the railroad world.

The second, or supplementary volume, contains the full title entries, with annotations, given in the "Weekly Record" of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY during the five years 1900, '01, '02, '03, '04, cumulated into one alphabet for each year; that is, into five alphabets. This is planned to answer the demands of librarians, booksellers and others who wish this valuable material, in available shape, for classifying and describing and for permanent reference.

For the book dealer the second volume is a very useful record of book valuation. It gives in form for ready reference brief descriptive notices of the important books published during the period mentioned, describing concisely the contents of each work and explaining many titles which, in themselves, mean little or nothing or are misleading. For descriptive cataloging, a bibliographical work of this kind is almost priceless.

The two volumes are uniformly bound in half morocco. The price is $12.00 for both or $7.50 for either separately. The edition is limited, but 240 copies of the first volume and 145 of the second volume remain unsold. We reserve the right to advance the price when the balance of either is reduced to 100 copies.

THE WHITETAIL DEER
THE MULE DEER OR ROCKY MOUNTAIN BLACKTAIL
THE WAPITI OR ROUND-HORNED ELK
WILDERNESS RESERVES; THE YELLOWSTONE PARK
BOOKS ON BIG GAME
AT HOME

He has hunted the prongbuck, miscalled the "antelope," the mountain sheep, the whitetail deer, the mule deer, the wapiti, or round-horned elk; bruin, black, brown and grizzly; the bobcat, the cougar and the wolf. Whatever animal he hunted he studied, and there is as much fresh, first-hand information as adventure in the volume.

AFTER FOUR YEARS' WORK

the publishers of Lippincott's Gazetteer of the World, for the past fifty years the standard dictionary of universal geography, announce the publication of an entirely new book, rewritten and reset from cover to cover. Only the framework or skeleton of the old book has been retained, together with the system of pronunciation introduced by that high authority, Dr. Joseph Thomas.

THERE ARE UPWARDS OF

27,000 ADDITIONAL TITLES IN THE

NEW LIPPINCOTT'S GAZETTEER

It is a detailed picture of every corner of the world in the 20th Century, with statistics of population, productions, mining, manufacture, physical geography, explorations, and general history accurately up-to-date. The exceptional qualifications of the editors, Angelo Heilprin, of Yale University, and Louis Heilprin, the experienced lexicographer, and their corps of expert assistants, assure the highest standard of accuracy. It is the business man's geographical reference book of the globe; it is an indispensable adjunct to the library of every newspaper editor, and merits a position in every school and home library. Christmas Books

You can express a great deal of Christmas in the right book. A book that you yourself like, and which you know your friend will like, expresses care and thoughtfulness, and is within the reach of all persons. Here are four of our new books, all different, but all good:

MY FRIEND THE CHAUFFEUR by C. N. and A. M. Williamson. Cloth, 12mo, Illustrated. $1.50

All whose souls have responded to the heart throbs of a motor, all who have had experience in or hope to enjoy foreign travel, picturesque scenery, quaint towns and ancient castles, all who love a love story well told, will enjoy "My Friend the Chauffeur." He is a titled Englishman, disguised as a chauffeur, who conducts an American girl and her party through Northern Italy, Venice and Dalmatia.

THE PANG YANGER by Elma A. Travis, M.D. Cloth, 12mo. $1.50

Abijah Bead, the Pang Yanger, punishes his faithless wife by bringing her son to grow up in the community where she is best known, that his startling resemblance may be a punishment to her. His purpose is overwhelmed and set aside by the irresistible impulse of his love for a Southern girl, which sweeps over his nature like the forest fire which wipes Pang Yang out of existence. The Pang Yanger's comments on things add a grim humor to the book.

THE FORTUNES OF THE LANDRAYS by Vaughan Kester. Illustrated by The Kinneys. Cloth. $1.50

This is a story of the great West. It begins with the gold fever of '49, and describes emigrant trains, prairie schooners. Indian massacres and other stirring scenes, all held together by the family life of the Landrays, and the work, play, adventures and loves of the people composing this family. It is the story of the lives of our own immediate ancestors and an account of the making of the United States.

BACK HOME by Eugene Wood. Illustrated by A. B. Frost. Cloth, 12mo. $1.50

We all look back to boyhood when we went barefoot, spoke pieces Friday afternoon, went in swimming without permission, attended Sunday-school because we had to, and the Sunday-school picnic because we wanted to. Therefore, we all find in this quaint, homely book our early boyhood life told as we always remembered it. It has the one touch of nature that makes us all akin.

for the Bookshelf

A good book carefully chosen, with a thought of the taste of the friend who will receive it, can express more real Christmas than a costly jewel or an expensive trifle. Good books are living things that add something to the recipient's life.

THE WORK OF OUR HANDS by H. A. Mitchell Keays. Cloth, 12mo. $1.50

Here is a girl brought up in straitened circumstances who becomes the wife of a millionaire whose money has been made by the work of hundreds of hands. The wife, at first astonished and dismayed at the conditions she finds, tries to relieve their sufferings with her husband's money. This brings opposition and division, and out of this is worked up a strong story and one founded on industrial conditions as they prevail in this country.

THE ANCIENT LANDMARK by Elizabeth Cherry Waltz. Cloth, 12mo. $1.50

Imagine a young, beautiful and sensitive woman irrevocably married to a drug fiend. She believes that nothing can justify divorce, and her friends and the social circle to which she belongs agree with her. The entire book is occupied in telling how she gradually came to believe in her right to her own life, in which she was helped by a real love for a man whom she could also respect. The background of the story is laid in Kentucky, and it is a beautiful picture of the famous blue-grass country, so replete with the picturesque and romantic.

TOLD BY UNCLE REMUS by Joel Chandler Harris, with 61 illustrations by A. B. Frost and others. Large 12mo. $2.00

President Roosevelt said of these stories and their writer in a recent speech in Georgia:

"I am very fond of Uncle Remus. Presidents may come and Presidents may go, but Uncle Remus stays put. Georgia has done a great many things for the Union, but she has never done more than when she gave Mr. Joel Chandler Harris to American Literature."

I. N. R. I.: A Prisoner's Story of the Cross — by Peter Rosegger. 8 illustrations, in color, drawn by C. K. Linson. Cloth, 12mo. $1.50

A carpenter in prison, under sentence of death, seeks consolation in writing what seems to him the real story of Jesus Christ. His account of the events of the Saviour's life, as he remembers them, is homely and colloquial, but with a wonderful earnestness, sincerity and beauty. Taking an original point of view, the author approaches the subject with all reverence, and makes it an uplifting and inspiring story.

Christmas Books

A Christmas book need not be a story. If you have a friend who plays bridge or golf, here is a chance to choose a book that he will appreciate more than any story—a book that he will gladly add to the choicest shelf in his library.

FOSTER'S COMPLETE BRIDGE by R. F. Foster. Cloth, 12mo. Net, $1.50; postpaid, $1.62

This is a complete manual on Bridge Whist by America's leading Bridge expert. It will serve as an introduction to the game for the beginner, but it also treats extendedly of the finer points of play for the more experienced. The author makes his directions for the proper leads very clear by a new and ingenious arrangement of diagrams, through which the playing of sample hands is indicated.

THE MYSTERIOUS STRANGER AND OTHER CARTOONS by John T. McCutcheon. Net, $1.50; postpaid, $1.70

John T. McCutcheon, the funniest cartoonist in the world, who is paid twenty thousand dollars a year to draw cartoons in the Chicago "Tribune," presents 160 of his best comments on current events. Even the victims of Mr. McCutcheon's ready pencil appreciate the joke. He knows how to be amusing without hurting. Not since the days of DuMaurier has a cartoonist been able to tell so long a story in one picture.

THE COMPLETE GOLFER by Harry Vardon. 50 illustrations. Net, $3.50; postpaid, $3.65

Harry Vardon is, unquestionably, the greatest golf player that the world has ever seen, and has more knowledge of the art, science and technique of the game than any man alive. He shows in this book that he has also a rare faculty for imparting this knowledge. It offers even the most experienced golfer a host of helpful hints, the fruit of Mr. Vardon's own varied and long experience. The illustrations alone are a most complete commentary on the game.

THE WIVES OF HENRY VIII by Martin Hume, with portraits. Net, $4.00; postpaid, $4.20

Unusual opportunities to get at little known documents, and a great deal of diligent research coupled with a brilliant historical faculty, have enabled Major Hume in this book to produce a volume of rare interest. Heretofore little has been known concerning the lives of the unfortunate consorts of Henry VIII, and these poor ladies have been viewed only in their relations to King Henry. From pathetic Catharine of Aragon to strong-willed Katharine Parr, they offer a very wide romantic interest in themselves.

for the Bookshelf

¶ Here are four books that have been so highly appreciated by the public that thousands of readers will enjoy them better than any new book just published. A unique study of Parisian life, a story of the great silent places of the forest, a story of the child-life on the east-side, and finally the school-life of a little girl growing up in the average small American town.

¶ THE BEAUTIFUL LADY by Booth Tarkington. Illustrated in color. $1.25

The story opens where the hero, and narrator, is sitting in front of a café with shaved head, upon which is painted an advertisement of the least amusing ballet in Paris. The Beautiful Lady was touched and sympathetic where others found only amusement, and from then on the story never flags and the author never loses his marvelous mastery of the quaint dialect in which the story is written. It is wonderful the way he gives American slang in broken French.

¶ EMMY LOU: HER BOOK AND HEART by George Madden Martin. 50 illustrations. Cloth, 12mo. $1.50

This delightful and wonderfully human story tells how a little girl, beginning in the First Reader, goes from class to class through the public schools, and describes the various little tragedies and comedies of a schoolgirl's life. The author writes from her memory of her own girlhood so vividly that there are few people who grew up under the same conditions who will not recognize the book's appeal.

¶ THE BLAZED TRAIL by Stewart Edward White. Illustrated by Thomas Fogarty. Cloth, 12mo. $1.50

Who is there, who has listened beside the camp fire to the broken English of an Indian guide, who does not know and love Stewart Edward White? If there be such a one, let him take "The Blazed Trail" as a beginning, and read this powerful story of the great Northwestern timberland. It is a classic of the forest, written by one who has lain by night, under the near-by stars, listening to the many voices of the forest.

¶ LITTLE CITIZENS by Myra Kelly. Cloth, 12mo. 17 illustrations. $1.50

The author has discovered a new language—that spoken by the little American-born children of the Russian Jews, who use the English words with the strange constructions of their fathers and mothers. One of the most touching parts of the book is the devotion of these children to their teacher, and the real love of the teacher for her charges. This author has discovered an absolutely new field, one in which the short story has never before penetrated.

The Best Fiction

The Deluge

"A cross-section out of the very heart of our life to-day, with its big and bold energies and passions, the swiftest and intensest life ever lived by the human race."

"THE DELUGE" is a story of high and frenzied finance. It is important to every fiction-lover because it grips the attention in a vise of steel. It is important to every patriotic American because it lays absolutely bare the financial dilemma toward which the country has drifted.

But in the clash of the great business conflict, the love element is not for a moment forgotten. It is the refreshing and glorifying touch in a novel of magnificent proportions and persistent absorption.

THE BOOK WITH THE GALLOPING PLOT

The House of a Thousand Candles

This is a novel of romance and adventure, of love and valor, of mystery and hidden treasure.

It will set your pulse a-beating and hold you fast by its entrancing charm.

"The House of a Thousand Candles" is in other words one of the strongest, cleanest, freshest novels in many a day.

Gift Books

HAROLD MACGRATH'S

Hearts & Masks

WHEN Mr. MacGrath wrote this most exhilarating story, he was in his gayest mood and full of the zest of life. At every page the adventure turns an unexpected corner. It teems with breathless excitement, sparkling dialogue, fascinating, glittering atmosphere. Mr. Fisher's pretty girls and manly men make a fitting accompaniment to the merry tale of carnival entanglements.

DAVID GRAHAM PHILLIPS'S

The Social Secretary

THIS is an absorbing novel of Washington to-day, telling how a clever girl "made" the social success of a new Senator's wife. Mrs. Burke (the Senator's wife), with her naive speeches, shrewd sense, downright sincerity and unvarnished comments on Washington society, wins and keeps your love. The Social Secretary herself is a fascinating and amiable figment of a pleasing fancy.

By David Graham Phillips. With twelve full-page illustrations in photogravure by Clarence F. Underwood. Decorations by Ralph Fletcher Seymour. 12mo, cloth, Price, postpaid, $1.50.

JOHN LUTHER LONG'S

SEFFY

"SEFFY" is an idyl of the Pennsylvania Germans, with two love motives, the love of a man for a maid, and the love of a father for a son. A draught of pure delight is this happy little comedy of country manners—like a summer day—all sunshine and showers and rainbows—smiles and tears, and smiles again breaking through the tears.

By John Luther Long, author of "Madame Butterfly," etc. Illustrated by C. D. Williams, and decorated by Earl Stetson Crawford. Ornamental cover, 12mo, cloth, postpaid, $1.50.

THE

SEYMOUR RILEY PANELS

SIX poems by James Whitcomb Riley, hand-lettered and decorated by Ralph Fletcher Seymour. The six beautiful poems to which Mr. Seymour has given such delightful setting are: As Created; Ike Walton's Prayer; God Bless Us Every One; The Prayer Perfect; Wet Weather Talk, and Kissing the Rod.

Printed as separate panels in several colors on cream Florentine cardboard. Size, 7 x 10; each in an envelope ready for mailing, 25 cents. The six in a white glazed-paper box, $1.50, postpaid.

The Beautiful Gift Book of the Fall

A GARDEN IN PINK

AN IDYL BY BLANCHE ELIZABETH WADE

With decorations and illustrations in color by Lucy Fitch Perkins

"IT may have been suggested by the pale flush of a rosy sunrise, or by the tender glow of a dying day; by the sudden remembrance of a fragrant breath of last Summer's pinks, or by a mere glance at my Spring gown; yet I think the arbutus was the real cause of the inspiration.

"However that may be, as we wandered under the leafless trees, I exclaimed to The Other One,—

"'O Other One, this year it shall be pink!'"

And this is how they decided that the garden should be pink; and they were so exacting that they even changed the homely name of John Brown, the gardener, to Giovanni Pincolini, so that he should be in complete harmony with his surroundings.

The appearance of this whimsical idyl of married life and nature appreciation, with its pink and green scheme of cover, decorations, and illustrations, is of exquisite delicacy and originality.

BOOKS FOR PRESENTS

"THE DEFINITIVE BIOGRAPHY OF LAMB"

The Life of Charles and Mary Lamb

By E. V. LUCAS

2 vols., 8*vo*, 50 illustrations, net, $6.00. Editor of "The Works and Letters of Charles and Mary Lamb."

"For all the happiest things that have ever been said about Lamb, the enthusiasts will find in these two volumes a happy hunting ground. We finished the book not with a note of admiration after a brilliant display of rhetoric, but with a quiet sigh of unfeigned sorrow at a forced parting from a very dear friend."—London Times.

Louis XIV. and La Grande Mademoiselle

Authorised English Version

8*vo*, illustrated. Net, $3.00 (by mail, $3.25). By ARVÈDE BARINE

"It is bewildering to think of the many crowns and coronets that might have rested on the brow of this dramatic heroine, a heroine who appears and disappears in clouds of dust, with regiments of cavalry wheeling and whirling around her to the sound of the trumpets—the stern devotee of reason, who dismissed one of her maids because she married for love, the philosopher, who debated in her mimic court whether an accepted lover is more unhappy than a rejected lover in the absence of the beloved."—London Times.

Portraits of the 18th Century

HISTORICAL AND LITERARY

Translated by KATHARINE P. WORMELEY and G. B. IVES. By C. A. SAINTE-BEUVE

Two parts, 8*vo*, with about 30 illustrations. Sold separately, each $2.50, net.

The quality, the discernment and balance, intuitive grasp of essentials, the grace, force, and justice, of Sainte-Beuve's critical work have placed him in the front rank—perhaps it would be better to say, have given him a place alone and unapproachable in the history of critical literature.

Romance of the French Abbeys

By ELIZABETH W. CHAMPNEY

Author of "Romance of Feudal Châteaux," "Renaissance Châteaux," etc.

8*vo*, with 2 colored, 9 photogravure, and 50 other illustrations. Net, $3.00 (by mail, $3.25).

A delightful blending of history, art, and romance. It fully carries out Guizot's suggestion, "If you are fond of romance, read history."

The Life of Goethe

By ALBERT BIELSCHOWSKY

Translated by W. A. COOPER. To be complete in 3 parts. Large 8*vo*. Illus. Each, net, $3.50.

PART I.—1749–1788. FROM BIRTH TO THE RETURN FROM ITALY. Now Ready.

Dr. Bielschowsky was acknowledged as the foremost authority on Goethe, and it is generally conceded that this is the most important life of Goethe, from the standpoint of scholarship, sympathetic interpretation, and literary art—in fact, the most important biography of any man written in German for many years.

Kate Greenaway

By M. H. SPIELMANN and G. S. LAYARD

Large 8*vo*, with 53 full-page colored and 125 other illustrations. Net, $6.50.

Those who think of Kate Greenaway merely as the designer of pretty pictures for children will be surprised to learn what an interesting and important personage she was. Mr. Spielmann shows that among the best artists and critics of Europe, Miss Greenaway is regarded as one of the artist geniuses of the Nineteenth Century. This book is something more than a personal biography. It is rather a peep behind the scenes, led by Kate Greenaway, into the intimate converse of the foremost artists and writers of our times.

The St. Lawrence River

HISTORICAL, LEGENDARY, PICTURESQUE

8*vo*, 100 illustrations. Net, $3 50. By GEORGE WALDO BROWNE

This work presents in a consecutive narrative the most important historic incidents connected with the river, combined with descriptions of some of its most picturesque scenery and delightful excursions into its legendary lore.

BOOKS FOR PRESENTS

Talks in a Library with Laurence Hutton

Recorded by ISABEL MOORE

8vo, with portrait and 65 illustrations. Net, $2.50 (by mail, $2.75).

"It will be read less for its odd and amusing anecdotes, numerous and admirable as they are, than for its personal reminiscences of the many remarkable men and women whose acquaintance, and, in an extraordinary number of instances, friendship, this useful and truly amiable man enjoyed."
—N. Y. Evening Post.

The Voyageur and Other Poems

By WILLIAM HENRY DRUMMOND

Author of "The Habitant," etc. Illustrated by F. S. COBURN.

Photogravure Edition. With 16 photogravure illustrations. 8vo, ¼ calf. Net, $2.50 (by mail, $2.70).

Popular Edition. With 2 colored and 8 other illustrations. Crown 8vo. Net, $1.25 (by mail, $1.35).

A new volume of verse by Dr. Drummond means a genuine delight to thousands of readers. The touches of roguish humor, the playful imagination and the quick appreciation of nature which are the heritage of the French Canadian, Dr. Drummond has made his own. He knows the pathos and fortitude of simple lives and the ideals which inspire his people.

Pictures of Life and Character By JOHN LEECH

212 illustrations. Oblong, 8vo. Cloth, $1.50.

"There is far more fun, more good drawing, more good sense, more beauty, in John Leech's Punch pictures than in all the art union illustrations, engravings, statues, etc., put together."—DR. JOHN BROWN in his Notes on Art.

THE SHAKESPEARE STORY BOOK

By MARY MACLEOD. With an Introduction by Sidney Lee and many Illustrations by Gordon Browne. 8vo. Cloth. Gilt top $1.75.

Lives of Great Writers, by TUDOR JENKS. With an introduction by HAMILTON WRIGHT MABIE.

IN THE DAYS OF CHAUCER

(Second Edition)

Tudor Jenks brings the personality and the times of the great writers directly to us. To read after him is to walk the streets and mix with the living people of Old England. He has made the merry-hearted England of Chaucer's time live in our imagination.

IN THE DAYS OF SHAKESPEARE

(Second Edition)

He creates again our Shakespeare for us—Will Shakespeare, the boy in Stratford, the young man who went to seek his fortune in London and later returned to the life of a country gentleman, a sportsman and a neighbor.

IN THE DAYS OF MILTON

The England of Milton is the England from which America drew its life, and Mr. Jenks has pictured Milton, the affectionate friend, the blind seer, the lonely prophet of a great new world.

JAMES M. LUDLOW'S NEW NOVEL

Illustrated Cloth, $1.50

SIR RAOUL

Author of "Deborah" Etc.

A Story of the Theft of an Empire

The kind of a book one reads twice over. The story has such a go that one must read fast to keep pace with one's fascinated interest. But after the book is laid down and Raoul is safe home in his Schwarzwald castle with his Lady Renee, you begin to suspect that if you had not hurried so fast you would have learned a host of facts about life in the thirteenth century, and about the ways of our crusading forefathers. So you read it twice. The immense amount of accurate information makes one think of Reade, and the rapid action recalls the more modern Hope, but the welding of the two into faultless diction is Ludlow's own.

Of timely and lively interest are the works just issued on Russia and Japan. Like all books of the Photogravure Series they are printed in large, clear type on specially made paper and sumptuously bound in silk cloth with rich gold decorations embossed on side and back, gilt tops, silk markers and provided with cloth-slip covers matching in color the cloth boxes in which they are incased. The illustrations in these two works are hitherto unpublished subjects of most absorbing interest.

WE ESPECIALLY RECOMMEND

SIR GALAHAD of NEW FRANCE

BY WILLIAM HENRY JOHNSON $1.50

ILLUSTRATED.

A novel having for its background the attempts of the French Huguenots to settle in Florida. The author, a historian, vividly portrays the contrast between troubled France and the Arcadian simplicity of the American primeval forest.

THE HOUSE of MERRILEES

BY ARCHIBALD MARSHALL $1.50

A STORY OF MYSTERY AND DETECTION

ILLUSTRATED.

A decidedly interesting story which has a well-knit plot, action on every page, characters well drawn and well contrasted, and a mystery that is not cleared up until the final chapters. It is not one of those impossible tales, but a rational story.

BACK o' ARCADY

BY FRANK WALLER ALLEN $1.25

BEAUTIFUL BOOKMAKING, PAGE DECORATIONS, ILLUSTRATIONS, ETC.

A beautiful pastoral love story, told with all the charm and exquisite style of Ik Marvel's "Reveries of a Bachelor" and George William Curtis's "Prue and I." A story so charmingly told that it will become enshrined in the memory.

SCIENCE AND A FUTURE LIFE

By PROF. JAMES H. HYSLOP, Ph.D., LL.D.

$1.50 net, 12 cents postage

Does the scientific investigation of psychic phenomena prove that man survives bodily death? Professor Hyslop bases his argument on the data accumulated by the Society for Psychical Research by eminent scientists.

"On the basis of scientific respectability and value, Dr. James H. Hyslop should be encouraged to go on with his good work."—Public Opinion.

BROKE of COVENDEN

A LITERARY MASTERPIECE

By J. C. SNAITH. $1.50

"There is no living writer in England or this country to whom it would not be a credit."—Springfield Republican.

"For several years past the writer of these lines has read a number of books each week, and he does not hesitate to say that 'Broke of Covenden' is the best novel he has read in the past ten years."—Cleveland Town Topics.

A NEW LIMP LEATHER STEVENSON

At $1.50 per volume. Cloth, $1.00

A different photogravure frontispiece of Stevenson is used in each volume. Other illustrations.

The title page of each volume has a vignetted photogravure appropriate to the book.

Titles ready: Virginibus Puerisque.— Memories and Portraits.— Familiar Studies of Men and Books.— An Inland Voyage.— Travels with a Donkey.— Child's Garden of Verses and Underwoods.— Essays and Criticisms,— and — The Story of a Lie.

The HUNDREDTH ACRE

By JOHN CAMDEN. $1.50

A DETECTIVE STORY

The reader will want to devour the tale at one sitting. The work is that of a highly ingenious and competent hand, and the denouement is surprising enough to suit the most critical of detective story gourmands.

"The person who guesses this mystery before John Camden is ready to let him has the right to esteem himself clever."—The Globe, New York.

The STORM of LONDON

By F. DICKBERRY. $1.50

(110,000 in England)

The most audacious novel that has appeared for years, in which London is depicted as waking up one morning to find itself in a state of nudity, and, after society once adjusts itself to this new condition, life proceeds in a novel manner.

Dodd, Mead and Company's New Illustrated Holiday Books

THE ARTIST'S WAY OF WORKING

By Russell Sturgis

Editor of "The Dictionary of Architecture," etc. Over 200 illustrations.

"The Artist's Way of Working" is addressed not to artists or to art students, but distinctly to the art-loving public. It tries to disclose to them in untechnical language so much of the methods by which the artist produces his effects as will enable them to enjoy and appreciate art works much more fully than ever before. The illustrations are a special feature of the work; they go hand-in-hand with the text. 2 vols. 8vo, cloth, net, $15.00.

MY LADY'S SLIPPER

By Cyrus Townsend Brady

Author of "For the Freedom of the Sea," etc.

Handsomely illustrated and printed in two colors. This is a light, breezy romance of the time of John Paul Jones. The scene of the story is largely in Paris. The attractive make-up of the volume makes it a most acceptable holiday book. Square 8vo, net, $1.50.

HIS VERSION OF IT

By Paul Leicester Ford

Author of "The Honorable Peter Stirling," "Janice Meredith," "Wanted, a Matchmaker," etc

Illustrated in color by Henry Hutt, with marginal decorations.

This is one of the most clever short stories that the author ever wrote. A most acceptable gift book. 8vo, cloth, $1.50.

"HOWDY, HONEY, HOWDY"

By Paul Laurence Dunbar

Author of "Candle Lightin' Time," "Lil' Gal," etc.

Illustrated from photographs with marginal decorations in color.

Readers need no introduction to the inimitable verses of Paul Laurence Dunbar. His talent won immediate recognition, and to-day his fame is secure. 8vo, cloth, net, $1 50.

OLD-FASHIONED FLOWERS

By Maurice Maeterlinck

Illustrated in colors and with ornamental decorations.

This beautifully illustrated volume will give a most suitable holiday garb to three of Maeterlinck's charming essays, viz.: Old-Fash'oned Flowers, Field Flowers, and Chrysanthemums. Lovers of Maeterlinck cannot fail to be delighted with this book. Large 12mo, net, $1.20.

MAUD

By Alfred Lord Tennyson

A beautiful edition of Tennyson's great poem, illustrated and decorated by Margaret and Helen Maitland Armstrong. Several full-page illustrations in colors, and marginal decorations on every page. 12mo, cloth, net, $1.60.

THE SILKEN EAST

By V. C. Scott O'Connor

A record of travel and life in Burma. With map and 400 illustrations, including a large number of photographs taken by the author, and with 20 colored plates. 2 vols. 8vo, cloth, net, $12.00.

GREAT PORTRAITS DESCRIBED BY GREAT WRITERS

By Esther Singleton

Author of "Great Pictures," "A Guide to the Opera," etc.

Fully illustrated with full-page half-tone plates, a companion volume to "Great Pictures Described by Great Writers," etc. Especially appropriate for a gift book. 8vo, cloth, net, $1 60.

CATHEDRAL CITIES OF ENGLAND

By George Gilbert

With 60 full-page illus. in color by W. W. Collins, R. I.

The great cathedrals of England are reproduced in beautiful colored plates by a process which is far superior to that ordinarily in use. Besides the illustrations there is a full and valuable text, and we feel certain that on the whole the volume is the handsomest on the subject ever issued. 8vo, cloth, net, $3.50
De Luxe edition, boxed, special net, $ 0.00.

Two Beautiful Calendars

THE NATURE CALENDAR

With quotations from the works of
HAMILTON WRIGHT MABIE
Illustrations from nature, colored by hand. $2 50.

With illustrations in color by
HARRISON FISHER
Mounted on heavy cardboard and boxed. $1.00.

Three Important Juvenile Books

HUMPTY DUMPTY

By Anna Alice Chapin

Author of "Babes in Toyland," etc.

With full-page illustrations in color, and with decorations by Ethel Franklin Betts.

The names of Miss Chapin and Miss Betts on the title-page are guarantees that the story is delightfully adapted to the understanding of young children, and that the illustrations are well done. Large 8vo, cloth, net, $1.40.

SOME ADVENTURES OF JACK AND JILL

By Barbara Yechton

Author of "A Lovable Crank," "We Ten," etc.

A story that appeals strongly to children. Fully illustrated. 12mo cloth, $1.50.

THE WILD FLOWER FAIRY BOOK

By Esther Singleton

Author of "The Golden Rod Fairy Book," etc. Illustrated and decorated by Charles B. Falls in a manner hitherto not attempted with children's books. 8vo, cloth, $2.00.

COMPLETION OF THE

American Catalog
1900-1905

The Second (or Supplementary Volume) nearly ready

We are now completing the printing of the second volume of the new "American Catalog, 1900–1905," which will be ready for delivery in November.

The first volume, issued in June last, is a complete record in itself, being a dictionary-catalog of all books recorded between January 1, 1900, and January 1, 1905. In its one alphabet every book is entered at least three times (by author, title and subject), with information as to size, price, publisher, year of issue, etc. It forms the latest addition to the old series of the "American Catalogue," published in quarto form, while the newest volume is an octavo, which is generally conceded to be a much handier shape. We can reasonably affirm that every dealer needs such a permanent catalog in his business, while every library of importance should have this standard bibliographical work on its shelves, since its usefulness in the world of books is on a par with a time-table in the railroad world.

The second, or supplementary volume, contains the full title entries, with annotations, given in the "Weekly Record" of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY during the five years 1900, '01, '02, '03, '04, cumulated into one alphabet for each year; that is, into five alphabets. This is planned to answer the demands of librarians, booksellers and others who wish this valuable material, in available shape, for classifying and describing and for permanent reference.

For the book dealer the second volume is a very useful record of book valuation. It gives in form for ready reference brief descriptive notices of the important books published during the period mentioned, describing concisely the contents of each work and explaining many titles which, in themselves, mean little or nothing or are misleading. For descriptive cataloging, a bibliographical work of this kind is almost priceless.

The two volumes are uniformly bound in half morocco. The price is $12.00 for both or $7.50 for either separately. The edition is limited, but 240 copies of the first volume and 145 of the second volume remain unsold. We reserve the right to advance the price when the balance of either is reduced to 100 copies.

Illustrated from remarkable photographs

By THEODORE ROOSEVELT

A graphic account of the author's trips in Colorado, Oklahoma and Yellowstone Park, with much valuable and entertaining information in regard to animals wild and domestic.

CONTENTS:

WITH THE COUGAR HOUNDS
A COLORADO BEAR HUNT
WOLF COURSING
HUNTING IN THE CATTLE COUNTRY
THE PRONGBUCK
A SHOT AT A MOUNTAIN SHEEP
THE WHITETAIL DEER
THE MULE DEER OR ROCKY MOUNTAIN BLACKTAIL
THE WAPITI OR ROUND-HORNED ELK
WILDERNESS RESERVES; THE YELLOWSTONE PARK
BOOKS ON BIG GAME
AT HOME

He has hunted the prongbuck, miscalled the "antelope," the mountain sheep, the whitetail deer, the mule deer, the wapiti, or round-horned elk; bruin, black, brown and grizzly; the bobcat, the cougar and the wolf. Whatever animal he hunted he studied, and there is as much fresh, first-hand information as adventure in the volume.

AFTER FOUR YEARS' WORK

the publishers of Lippincott's Gazetteer of the World, for the past fifty years the standard dictionary of universal geography, announce the publication of an entirely new book, rewritten and reset from cover to cover. Only the framework or skeleton of the old book has been retained, together with the system of pronunciation introduced by that high authority, Dr. Joseph Thomas.

THERE ARE UPWARDS OF

27,000 ADDITIONAL TITLES IN THE

NEW LIPPINCOTT'S GAZETTEER

It is a detailed picture of every corner of the world in the 20th Century, with statistics of population, productions, mining, manufacture, physical geography, explorations, and general history accurately up-to-date. The exceptional qualifications of the editors, Angelo Heilprin, of Yale University, and Louis Heilprin, the experienced lexicographer, and their corps of expert assistants, assure the highest standard of accuracy. It is the business man's geographical reference book of the globe; it is an indispensable adjunct to the library of every newspaper editor, and merits a position in every school and home library. Christmas Books

You can express a great deal of Christmas in the right book. A book that you yourself like, and which you know your friend will like, expresses care and thoughtfulness, and is within the reach of all persons. Here are four of our new books, all different, but all good:

MY FRIEND THE CHAUFFEUR by C. N. and A. M. Williamson. Cloth, 12mo, Illustrated. $1.50

All whose souls have responded to the heart throbs of a motor, all who have had experience in or hope to enjoy foreign travel, picturesque scenery, quaint towns and ancient castles, all who love a love story well told, will enjoy "My Friend the Chauffeur." He is a titled Englishman, disguised as a chauffeur, who conducts an American girl and her party through Northern Italy, Venice and Dalmatia.

THE PANG YANGER by Elma A. Travis, M.D. Cloth, 12mo. $1.50

Abijah Bead, the Pang Yanger, punishes his faithless wife by bringing her son to grow up in the community where she is best known, that his startling resemblance may be a punishment to her. His purpose is overwhelmed and set aside by the irresistible impulse of his love for a Southern girl, which sweeps over his nature like the forest fire which wipes Pang Yang out of existence. The Pang Yanger's comments on things add a grim humor to the book.

THE FORTUNES OF THE LANDRAYS by Vaughan Kester. Illustrated by The Kinneys. Cloth. $1.50

This is a story of the great West. It begins with the gold fever of '49, and describes emigrant trains, prairie schooners, Indian massacres and other stirring scenes, all held together by the family life of the Landrays, and the work, play, adventures and loves of the people composing this family. It is the story of the lives of our own immediate ancestors and an account of the making of the United States.

BACK HOME by Eugene Wood. Illustrated by A. B. Frost. Cloth, 12mo. $1.50

We all look back to boyhood when we went barefoot, spoke pieces Friday afternoon, went in swimming without permission, attended Sunday-school because we had to, and the Sunday-school picnic because we wanted to. Therefore, we all find in this quaint, homely book our early boyhood life told as we always remembered it. It has the one touch of nature that makes us all akin.

for the Bookshelf

A good book carefully chosen, with a thought of the taste of the friend who will receive it, can express more real Christmas than a costly jewel or an expensive trifle. Good books are living things that add something to the recipient's life.

THE WORK OF OUR HANDS by H. A. Mitchell Keays. Cloth, 12mo. $1.50

Here is a girl brought up in straitened circumstances who becomes the wife of a millionaire whose money has been made by the work of hundreds of hands. The wife, at first astonished and dismayed at the conditions she finds, tries to relieve their sufferings with her husband's money. This brings opposition and division, and out of this is worked up a strong story and one founded on industrial conditions as they prevail in this country.

THE ANCIENT LANDMARK by Elizabeth Cherry Waltz. Cloth, 12mo. $1.50

Imagine a young, beautiful and sensitive woman irrevocably married to a drug fiend. She believes that nothing can justify divorce, and her friends and the social circle to which she belongs agree with her. The entire book is occupied in telling how she gradually came to believe in her right to her own life, in which she was helped by a real love for a man whom she could also respect. The background of the story is laid in Kentucky, and it is a beautiful picture of the famous blue-grass country, so replete with the picturesque and romantic.

TOLD BY UNCLE REMUS by Joel Chandler Harris, with 61 illustrations by A. B. Frost and others. Large 12mo. $2.00

President Roosevelt said of these stories and their writer in a recent speech in Georgia:

"I am very fond of Uncle Remus. Presidents may come and Presidents may go, but Uncle Remus stays put. Georgia has done a great many things for the Union, but she has never done more than when she gave Mr. Joel Chandler Harris to American Literature."

I. N. R. I.: A Prisoner's Story of the Cross — by Peter Rosegger. 8 illustrations, in color, drawn by C. K. Linson. Cloth, 12mo. $1.50

A carpenter in prison, under sentence of death, seeks consolation in writing what seems to him the real story of Jesus Christ. His account of the events of the Saviour's life, as he remembers them, is homely and colloquial, but with a wonderful earnestness, sincerity and beauty. Taking an original point of view, the author approaches the subject with all reverence, and makes it an uplifting and inspiring story.

Christmas Books

A Christmas book need not be a story. If you have a friend who plays bridge or golf, here is a chance to choose a book that he will appreciate more than any story—a book that he will gladly add to the choicest shelf in his library.

FOSTER'S COMPLETE BRIDGE by R. F. Foster. Cloth, 12mo. Net, $1.50; postpaid, $1.62

This is a complete manual on Bridge Whist by America's leading Bridge expert. It will serve as an introduction to the game for the beginner, but it also treats extendedly of the finer points of play for the more experienced. The author makes his directions for the proper leads very clear by a new and ingenious arrangement of diagrams, through which the playing of sample hands is indicated.

THE MYSTERIOUS STRANGER AND OTHER CARTOONS by John T. McCutcheon. Net, $1.50; postpaid, $1.70

John T. McCutcheon, the funniest cartoonist in the world, who is paid twenty thousand dollars a year to draw cartoons in the Chicago "Tribune," presents 160 of his best comments on current events. Even the victims of Mr. McCutcheon's ready pencil appreciate the joke. He knows how to be amusing without hurting. Not since the days of DuMaurier has a cartoonist been able to tell so long a story in one picture.

THE COMPLETE GOLFER by Harry Vardon. 50 illustrations. Net, $3.50; postpaid, $3.65

Harry Vardon is, unquestionably, the greatest golf player that the world has ever seen, and has more knowledge of the art, science and technique of the game than any man alive. He shows in this book that he has also a rare faculty for imparting this knowledge. It offers even the most experienced golfer a host of helpful hints, the fruit of Mr. Vardon's own varied and long experience. The illustrations alone are a most complete commentary on the game.

THE WIVES OF HENRY VIII by Martin Hume, with portraits. Net, $4.00; postpaid, $4.20

Unusual opportunities to get at little known documents, and a great deal of diligent research coupled with a brilliant historical faculty, have enabled Major Hume in this book to produce a volume of rare interest. Heretofore little has been known concerning the lives of the unfortunate consorts of Henry VIII, and these poor ladies have been viewed only in their relations to King Henry. From pathetic Catharine of Aragon to strong-willed Katharine Parr, they offer a very wide romantic interest in themselves.

McCLURE, PHILLIPS & COMPANY

for the Bookshelf

¶ Here are four books that have been so highly appreciated by the public that thousands of readers will enjoy them better than any new book just published. A unique study of Parisian life, a story of the great silent places of the forest, a story of the child-life on the east-side, and finally the school-life of a little girl growing up in the average small American town.

¶ THE BEAUTIFUL LADY by Booth Tarkington. Illustrated in color. $1.25

The story opens where the hero, and narrator, is sitting in front of a café with shaved head, upon which is painted an advertisement of the least amusing ballet in Paris. The Beautiful Lady was touched and sympathetic where others found only amusement, and from then on the story never flags and the author never loses his marvelous mastery of the quaint dialect in which the story is written. It is wonderful the way he gives American slang in broken French.

¶ EMMY LOU: HER BOOK AND HEART by George Madden Martin. 50 illustrations. Cloth, 12mo. $1.50

This delightful and wonderfully human story tells how a little girl, beginning in the First Reader, goes from class to class through the public schools, and describes the various little tragedies and comedies of a schoolgirl's life. The author writes from her memory of her own girlhood so vividly that there are few people who grew up under the same conditions who will not recognize the book's appeal.

¶ THE BLAZED TRAIL by Stewart Edward White. Illustrated by Thomas Fogarty. Cloth, 12mo. $1.50

Who is there, who has listened beside the camp fire to the broken English of an Indian guide, who does not know and love Stewart Edward White? If there be such a one, let him take "The Blazed Trail" as a beginning, and read this powerful story of the great Northwestern timberland. It is a classic of the forest, written by one who has lain by night, under the near-by stars, listening to the many voices of the forest.

¶ LITTLE CITIZENS by Myra Kelly. Cloth, 12mo. 17 illustrations. $1.50

The author has discovered a new language—that spoken by the little American-born children of the Russian Jews, who use the English words with the strange constructions of their fathers and mothers. One of the most touching parts of the book is the devotion of these children to their teacher, and the real love of the teacher for her charges. This author has discovered an absolutely new field, one in which the short story has never before penetrated.

The Best Fiction

The Deluge

"A cross-section out of the very heart of our life to-day, with its big and bold energies and passions, the swiftest and intensest life ever lived by the human race."

"THE DELUGE" is a story of high and frenzied finance. It is important to every fiction-lover because it grips the attention in a vise of steel. It is important to every patriotic American because it lays absolutely bare the financial dilemma toward which the country has drifted.

But in the clash of the great business conflict, the love element is not for a moment forgotten. It is the refreshing and glorifying touch in a novel of magnificent proportions and persistent absorption.

Gift Books

HAROLD MACGRATH'S

Hearts & Masks

WHEN Mr. MacGrath wrote this most exhilarating story, he was in his gayest mood and full of the zest of life. At every page the adventure turns an unexpected corner. It teems with breathless excitement, sparkling dialogue, fascinating, glittering atmosphere. Mr. Fisher's pretty girls and manly men make a fitting accompaniment to the merry tale of carnival entanglements.

DAVID GRAHAM PHILLIPS'S

The Social Secretary

THIS is an absorbing novel of Washington to-day, telling how a clever girl "made" the social success of a new Senator's wife. Mrs. Burke (the Senator's wife), with her naive speeches, shrewd sense, downright sincerity and unvarnished comments on Washington society, wins and keeps your love. The Social Secretary herself is a fascinating and amiable figment of a pleasing fancy.

By David Graham Phillips. With twelve full-page illustrations in photogravure by Clarence F. Underwood. Decorations by Ralph Fletcher Seymour. 12mo, cloth, Price, postpaid, $1.50.

JOHN LUTHER LONG'S

SEFFY

"SEFFY" is an idyl of the Pennsylvania Germans, with two love motives, the love of a man for a maid, and the love of a father for a son. A draught of pure delight is this happy little comedy of country manners—like a summer day—all sunshine and showers and rainbows—smiles and tears, and smiles again breaking through the tears.

By John Luther Long, author of "Madame Butterfly," etc. Illustrated by C. D. Williams, and decorated by Earl Stetson Crawford. Ornamental cover, 12mo, cloth, postpaid, $1.50.

THE

SEYMOUR RILEY PANELS

SIX poems by James Whitcomb Riley, hand-lettered and decorated by Ralph Fletcher Seymour. The six beautiful poems to which Mr. Seymour has given such delightful setting are: As Created; Ike Walton's Prayer; God Bless Us Every One; The Prayer Perfect; Wet Weather Talk, and Kissing the Rod.

Printed as separate panels in several colors on cream Florentine cardboard. Size, 7 x 10; each in an envelope ready for mailing, 25 cents. The six in a white glazed-paper box, $1.50, postpaid.

The Beautiful Gift Book of the Fall

A GARDEN IN PINK

AN IDYL BY BLANCHE ELIZABETH WADE

With decorations and illustrations in color by Lucy Fitch Perkins

"IT may have been suggested by the pale flush of a rosy sunrise, or by the tender glow of a dying day; by the sudden remembrance of a fragrant breath of last Summer's pinks, or by a mere glance at my Spring gown; yet I think the arbutus was the real cause of the inspiration.

"However that may be, as we wandered under the leafless trees, I exclaimed to The Other One,—

"'O Other One, this year it shall be pink!'"

And this is how they decided that the garden should be pink; and they were so exacting that they even changed the homely name of John Brown, the gardener, to Giovanni Pincolini, so that he should be in complete harmony with his surroundings.

The appearance of this whimsical idyl of married life and nature appreciation, with its pink and green scheme of cover, decorations, and illustrations, is of exquisite delicacy and originality.

WHEN GRANDMAMMA was FOURTEEN

By MARION HARLAND. $1.25.

"Marion Harland is as skilled in writing for young people as she is in telling a story for children of larger growth, and this book has a charm of manner and rich humanity which are characteristic of all her writings."—Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

RANDY'S LUCK

By AMY BROOKS. $1.00.

"This is just the sort of a story that will appeal to the girl reader. The author certainly has the faculty of knowing how to write clever stories, pure and wholesome, with that touch of sincereness in them that always wins."—Providence News.

CORDELIA'S PATHWAY OUT

By EDNA A. FOSTER, editor of "Children's Page," in Youth's Companion. $1.00.

Cordelia is a sly, country-bred child, but she observes, imitates, and applies the best to her own life, and the exercise of loving and homely qualities brings her to a desirable plane.

DOLLY'S DOUBLE

By ETHEL WOOD. $1.00.

"Here is a book sure to find a warm place in the heart of any little girl and many boys, for the latter play no small part in making things lively and bright. They have the liveliest, pleasantest times imaginable and it is a pleasure to follow them to the end."—Albany Journal.

THE RUNAWAY DONKEY, and Other Rhymes for Children

By EMILIE POULSSON. 4to. $1.50.

Miss Poulsson is one of the few who can write really musical and well-liked rhymes for children, and her new book, "The Runaway Donkey and Other Rhymes," proves it.

DAVID RANSOM'S WATCH

By Mrs. G. R. ALDEN ("Pansy"). $1.50.

"David Ransom is a fine type of the good, sterling American, generous to others, but firmly keeping his own high principles."—Christian Advocate, New York.

MY LITTLE LADY IN WAITING

By LOUISE E. CATLIN. $1.25.

"How a little tenement girl rose to better things and finally saved a princess from death is the story told in this book. It is a pleasing recital bound to interest all little girls."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

HOW BARBARA KEPT HER PROMISE

By NINA RHOADES. $1.00.

"This is a story which will be read with the greatest delight by the younger ones. The book is beautifully illustrated and has the usual attractive binding. Every child's library should hold a copy of this book."—Portland Express.

BOOKS FOR PRESENTS

"THE DEFINITIVE BIOGRAPHY OF LAMB"

The Life of Charles and Mary Lamb

By E. V. LUCAS

2 vols., 8*vo*, 50 illustrations, net, $6.00. Editor of "The Works and Letters of Charles and Mary Lamb."

"For all the happiest things that have ever been said about Lamb, the enthusiasts will find in these two volumes a happy hunting ground. We finished the book not with a note of admiration after a brilliant display of rhetoric, but with a quiet sigh of unfeigned sorrow at a forced parting from a very dear friend."—London Times.

Louis XIV. and La Grande Mademoiselle

Authorised English Version

8*vo*, illustrated. Net, $3.00 (by mail, $3.25). By ARVÈDE BARINE

"It is bewildering to think of the many crowns and coronets that might have rested on the brow of this dramatic heroine, a heroine who appears and disappears in clouds of dust, with regiments of cavalry wheeling and whirling around her to the sound of the trumpets—the stern devotee of reason, who dismissed one of her maids because she married for love, the philosopher, who debated in her mimic court whether an accepted lover is more unhappy than a rejected lover in the absence of the beloved."—London Times.

Portraits of the 18th Century

HISTORICAL AND LITERARY

Translated by KATHARINE P. WORMELEY and G. B. IVES. By C. A. SAINTE-BEUVE

Two parts, 8*vo*, with about 30 illustrations. Sold separately, each $2.50, net.

The quality, the discernment and balance, intuitive grasp of essentials, the grace, force, and justice, of Sainte-Beuve's critical work have placed him in the front rank—perhaps it would be better to say, have given him a place alone and unapproachable in the history of critical literature.

Romance of the French Abbeys

By ELIZABETH W. CHAMPNEY

Author of "Romance of Feudal Châteaux," "Renaissance Châteaux," etc.

8*vo*, with 2 colored, 9 photogravure, and 50 other illustrations. Net, $3.00 (by mail, $3.25).

A delightful blending of history, art, and romance. It fully carries out Guizot's suggestion, "If you are fond of romance, read history."

The Life of Goethe

By ALBERT BIELSCHOWSKY

Translated by W. A. COOPER. To be complete in 3 parts. Large 8*vo*. Illus. Each, net, $3.50.

PART I.—1749-1788. FROM BIRTH TO THE RETURN FROM ITALY. Now Ready.

Dr. Bielschowsky was acknowledged as the foremost authority on Goethe, and it is generally conceded that this is the most important life of Goethe, from the standpoint of scholarship, sympathetic interpretation, and literary art—in fact, the most important biography of any man written in German for many years.

Kate Greenaway

By M. H. SPIELMANN and G. S. LAYARD

Large 8*vo*, with 53 full-page colored and 125 other illustrations. Net, $6.50.

Those who think of Kate Greenaway merely as the designer of pretty pictures for children will be surprised to learn what an interesting and important personage she was. Mr. Spielmann shows that among the best artists and critics of Europe, Miss Greenaway is regarded as one of the artist geniuses of the Nineteenth Century. This book is something more than a personal biography. It is rather a peep behind the scenes, led by Kate Greenaway, into the intimate converse of the foremost artists and writers of our times.

The St. Lawrence River

HISTORICAL, LEGENDARY, PICTURESQUE

8*vo*, 100 illustrations. Net, $3 50. By GEORGE WALDO BROWNE

This work presents in a consecutive narrative the most important historic incidents connected with the river, combined with descriptions of some of its most picturesque scenery and delightful excursions into its legendary lore.

BOOKS FOR PRESENTS

Talks in a Library with Laurence Hutton

8vo, with portrait and 65 illustrations. Net, $2.50 (by mail, $2.75).

"It will be read less for its odd and amusing anecdotes, numerous and admirable as they are, than for its personal reminiscences of the many remarkable men and women whose acquaintance, and, in an extraordinary number of instances, friendship, this useful and truly amiable man enjoyed."
—N. Y. Evening Post.

The Voyageur and Other Poems

By WILLIAM HENRY DRUMMOND

Author of "The Habitant," etc. Illustrated by F. S. COBURN.

Photogravure Edition. With 16 photogravure illustrations. 8vo, ¼ calf. Net, $2.50 (by mail, $2.70).

Popular Edition. With 2 colored and 8 other illustrations. Crown 8vo. Net, $1.25 (by mail, $1.35).

A new volume of verse by Dr. Drummond means a genuine delight to thousands of readers. The touches of roguish humor, the playful imagination and the quick appreciation of nature which are the heritage of the French Canadian, Dr. Drummond has made his own. He knows the pathos and fortitude of simple lives and the ideals which inspire his people.

Pictures of Life and Character By JOHN LEECH

212 illustrations. Oblong, 8vo. Cloth, $1.50.

"There is far more fun, more good drawing, more good sense, more beauty, in John Leech's Punch pictures than in all the art union illustrations, engravings, statues, etc., put together."—DR. JOHN BROWN in his Notes on Art.

THE SHAKESPEARE STORY BOOK

By MARY MACLEOD. With an Introduction by Sidney Lee and many Illustrations by Gordon Browne. 8vo. Cloth. Gilt top $1.75.

Lives of Great Writers, by TUDOR JENKS. With an introduction by HAMILTON WRIGHT MABIE.

IN THE DAYS OF CHAUCER

(Second Edition)

Tudor Jenks brings the personality and the times of the great writers directly to us. To read after him is to walk the streets and mix with the living people of Old England. He has made the merry-hearted England of Chaucer's time live in our imagination.

IN THE DAYS OF SHAKESPEARE

(Second Edition)

He creates again our Shakespeare for us—Will Shakespeare, the boy in Stratford, the young man who went to seek his fortune in London and later returned to the life of a country gentleman, a sportsman and a neighbor.

IN THE DAYS OF MILTON

The England of Milton is the England from which America drew its life, and Mr. Jenks has pictured Milton, the affectionate friend, the blind seer, the lonely prophet of a great new world.

JAMES M. LUDLOW'S NEW NOVEL

Illustrated
Cloth, $1.50

SIR RAOUL

Author of "Deborah" Etc.

A Story of the Theft of an Empire

The kind of a book one reads twice over. The story has such a go that one must read fast to keep pace with one's fascinated interest. But after the book is laid down and Raoul is safe home in his Schwarzwald castle with his Lady Renee, you begin to suspect that if you had not hurried so fast you would have learned a host of facts about life in the thirteenth century, and about the ways of our crusading forefathers. So you read it twice. The immense amount of accurate information makes one think of Reade, and the rapid action recalls the more modern Hope, but the welding of the two into faultless diction is Ludlow's own.

FOURTH EDITION

St. Cuthbert's

A Parish Romance

R. E. KNOWLES

Cloth, $1.50

"Ralph Connor did a good thing for his publishers when he introduced Robert E. Knowles to them with the manuscript of ST. CUTHBERT'S under his arm. For the book, which has been out only three weeks, is now in the third edition."

By a New Author

OWEN KILDARE

The Wisdom of the Simple

A Tale of Lower New York

The author of "My Mamie Rose" writes about the slum life of downtown New York as a man might write of the grave, after he had been raised from the dead. Reared in the rough nursery of the tenement alley, it is not remarkable that his tales have inimitable power.

12mo, Cloth, $1.50

ISABELLA R. HESS

Saint Cecilia of the Court

"Shows rare skill of construction, rapid and sustained action. Pictures many sides of life in the whirling metropolis where a little red-haired girl rises above the environments of the alley. The pathos and humor are irresistible."
—Boston Globe.

Illustrated. Cloth, $1.25

ADELINE M. TESKEY

The Village Artist

"The artist conceives likenesses of people as they might become if they gave their best qualities a chance. Mrs. Simon Slade makes her village to bloom as a garden and she tells her experiences in a quaint, simple manner that is itself a rare delight."—Washington Star.

Cloth, $1.00

NORMAN DUNCAN

Author of "Dr. Luke," etc.

SECOND EDITION

The Mother

A Novelette of New York Life

"Here is a new thing, an original, a wonderful piece of work—a fragment right out of the Book of Life; the realism of Dickens himself in a new world. It goes straight to the heart."
—Book News.

Decorated Cloth, $1.25

By W. J. DAWSON

The Makers of English Fiction

"Mr. Dawson knows his subject thoroughly, having been an omnivorous reader and possessing a memory as retentive as Macaulay's. He is a literary man of impressionable mind and acute judgment. His style is a perpetual delight for clearness, variety, force and rhythm. His book is the work of a real critic and a master of style; high praise, but deserved, we believe."—New York Evening Sun.

WINSTON Photogravure Books

For Holiday Presents

Winston Photogravure Books are exquisite editions of some of the classics of Literature, Writings of History and Books of Travel. They were originated to appeal to the taste of the lover of the beautiful in bookbinding and illustration. In these books the makers have gone a step farther than the usual handsome bindings of de-luxe editions and have inserted with a lavish hand the finest photogravure illustrations, from which fact these books are known and have become famous as Photogravure Books. Each volume contains from 20 to 50 photogravures. Their equal is not known among the high-grade books of this country and Europe.

RUSSIA

The vast empire of the Czars from the beginning to the most recent times. By Theophile Gautier, translated from the French by Florence McIntyre Tyson. The most important and most recent work on the subject. Illustrated with 50 photogravures.

WE ESPECIALLY RECOMMEND

SIR GALAHAD of NEW FRANCE

BY WILLIAM HENRY JOHNSON $1.50

ILLUSTRATED.

A novel having for its background the attempts of the French Huguenots to settle in Florida. The author, a historian, vividly portrays the contrast between troubled France and the Arcadian simplicity of the American primeval forest.

THE HOUSE of MERRILEES

BY ARCHIBALD MARSHALL $1.50

A STORY OF MYSTERY AND DETECTION

ILLUSTRATED.

A decidedly interesting story which has a well-knit plot, action on every page, characters well drawn and well contrasted, and a mystery that is not cleared up until the final chapters. It is not one of those impossible tales, but a rational story.

BACK to ARCADY

BEAUTIFUL BOOKMAKING, PAGE DECORATIONS, ILLUSTRATIONS, ETC.

A beautiful pastoral love story, told with all the charm and exquisite style of Ik Marvel's "Reveries of a Bachelor" and George William Curtis's "Prue and I." A story so charmingly told that it will become enshrined in the memory.

SCIENCE AND A FUTURE LIFE

By PROF. JAMES H. HYSLOP, Ph.D., LL.D.

$1.50 net, 12 cents postage

Does the scientific investigation of psychic phenomena prove that man survives bodily death? Professor Hyslop bases his argument on the data accumulated by the Society for Psychical Research by eminent scientists.

"On the basis of scientific respectability and value, Dr. James H. Hyslop should be encouraged to go on with his good work."—Public Opinion.

BROKE of COVENDEN

A LITERARY MASTERPIECE

By J. C. SNAITH. $1.50

"There is no living writer in England or this country to whom it would not be a credit."—Springfield Republican.

"For several years past the writer of these lines has read a number of books each week, and he does not hesitate to say that 'Broke of Covenden' is the best novel he has read in the past ten years."—Cleveland Town Topics.

A NEW LIMP LEATHER STEVENSON

At $1.50 per volume. Cloth, $1.00

A different photogravure frontispiece of Stevenson is used in each volume. Other illustrations.

The title page of each volume has a vignetted photogravure appropriate to the book.

Titles ready: Virginibus Puerisque.— Memories and Portraits.— Familiar Studies of Men and Books.— An Inland Voyage.— Travels with a Donkey.— Child's Garden of Verses and Underwoods.— Essays and Criticisms,— and — The Story of a Lie.

The HUNDREDTH ACRE

By JOHN CAMDEN. $1.50

A DETECTIVE STORY

The reader will want to devour the tale at one sitting. The work is that of a highly ingenious and competent hand, and the denouement is surprising enough to suit the most critical of detective story gourmands.

"The person who guesses this mystery before John Camden is ready to let him has the right to esteem himself clever."—The Globe, New York.

The STORM of LONDON

By F. DICKBERRY. $1.50

(110,000 in England)

The most audacious novel that has appeared for years, in which London is depicted as waking up one morning to find itself in a state of nudity, and, after society once adjusts itself to this new condition, life proceeds in a novel manner.

Dodd, Mead and Company's New Illustrated Holiday Books

THE ARTIST'S WAY OF WORKING

By Russell Sturgis

Editor of "The Dictionary of Architecture," etc. Over 200 illustrations.

"The Artist's Way of Working" is addressed not to artists or to art students, but distinctly to the art-loving public. It tries to disclose to them in untechnical language so much of the methods by which the artist produces his effects as will enable them to enjoy and appreciate art works much more fully than ever before. The illustrations are a special feature of the work; they go hand-in-hand with the text. 2 vols. 8vo, cloth, net, $15.00.

MY LADY'S SLIPPER

By Cyrus Townsend Brady

Author of "For the Freedom of the Sea," etc.

Handsomely illustrated and printed in two colors.

This is a light, breezy romance of the time of John Paul Jones. The scene of the story is largely in Paris. The attractive make-up of the volume makes it a most acceptable holiday book. Square 8vo, net, $1.50.

HIS VERSION OF IT

By Paul Leicester Ford

Author of "The Honorable Peter Stirling," "Janice Meredith," "Wanted, a Matchmaker," etc

Illustrated in color by Henry Hutt, with marginal decorations.

"HOWDY, HONEY, HOWDY"

By Paul Laurence Dunbar

Author of "Candle Lightin' Time," "Lil' Gal," etc.

Illustrated from photographs with marginal decorations in color.

Readers need no introduction to the inimitable verses of Paul Laurence Dunbar. His talent won immediate recognition, and to-day his fame is secure. 8vo, cloth, net, $1 50.

OLD-FASHIONED FLOWERS

By Maurice Maeterlinck

Illustrated in colors and with ornamental decorations.

This beautifully illustrated volume will give a most suitable holiday garb to three of Maeterlinck's charming essays, viz.: Old-Fashioned Flowers, Field Flowers, and Chrysanthemums. Lovers of Maeterlinck cannot fail to be delighted with this book. Large 12mo, net, $1.20.

MAUD

By Alfred Lord Tennyson

A beautiful edition of Tennyson's great poem, illustrated and decorated by Margaret and Helen Maitland Armstrong. Several full-page illustrations in colors, and marginal decorations on every page. 12mo, cloth, net, $1.60.

THE SILKEN EAST

By V. C. Scott O'Connor

A record of travel and life in Burma. With map and 400 illustrations, including a large number of photographs taken by the author, and with 20 colored plates. 2 vols. 8vo, cloth, net, $12.00.

GREAT PORTRAITS DESCRIBED BY GREAT WRITERS

By Esther Singleton

Author of "Great Pictures," "A Guide to the Opera," etc.

Fully illustrated with full-page half-tone plates, a companion volume to "Great Pictures Described by Great Writers," etc. Especially appropriate for a gift book. 8vo, cloth, net, $1 60.

CATHEDRAL CITIES OF ENGLAND

By George Gilbert

With 60 full-page illus. in color by W. W. Collins, R. I.

The great cathedrals of England are reproduced in beautiful colored plates by a process which is far superior to that ordinarily in use. Besides the illustrations there is a full and valuable text, and we feel certain that on the whole the volume is the handsomest on the subject ever issued. 8vo, cloth, net, $3.50. De Luxe edition, boxed, special net, $ 0.00.

GEORGE W. JACOBS & CO., Publishers, PHILADELPHIA

The Best-Selling Author

"NOT long ago," according to The Book Monthly, "there walked into a London bookshop a gentleman who said: 'I should like the works of your best-selling author.' It was not quite a usual demand, and the bookseller thought for a moment before responding to it. Then he went to the other end of his shop, picked out a complete edition of Shakespeare and brought it, with the remark, 'This, sir, is our best-selling author.' The inquiring customer looked and laughed, and said, 'Well, it wasn't Shakespeare I wanted, but I'll take the edition, and I'll not forget the hint that Shakespeare is always first.'"

You Want Shakespeare!

The only question is what edition. Before purchasing see any or all of these. We guarantee the best in point of text, contents, and manufacture, coupled with reasonableness of prices.

SHAKESPEARE. The "Handy Stratford" Edition

DUTTON'S TOLD TO THE CHILDREN SERIES

Each, with 8 colored illustrations, 50 cents

These little books are based on classics which grown-up people and older children know well, but which in their original form are too difficult for the little folks to understand.

The get up of the books is especially pleasing to the little ones. While charmingly done, their size and binding gives them more of the appearance of a grown-up's book than a child's book. The size is a square 16mo, 5 x 6¼ inches. The bindings are in cloth with gold decorations and a colored cover design similar to the illustrations. Each volume has eight or more full-page colored plates like the sample. A heavy antique type which is very easy to read is used on pure white rag paper.

By MARGARET WARDE. Those who knew Betty as a Freshman will be eager to follow her into Sophomore year. She and her friends are more interesting than ever. There is in every chapter the delightful atmosphere of the American College for girls. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

Polly the Gringo

By EVELYN RAYMOND. "Gringo" was a term applied by the Spanish natives of California to "Americanos" before California was in the Union. Polly Pancoast's father and brother went to California, and Polly followed them alone. Her experiences form a story of unusual charm in character and incident. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

An American Girl in Korea

By ANNIE M. BARNES. This very timely book offers a fascinating glimpse of the strange "Hermit Country." Margaret, although imprisoned in the underground dungeon of a monastery by Buddhist priests, whose mysterious rites she has witnessed, escapes and also frees a young artist. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

STORIES FOR BOYS

Winning His Way to West Point

By CAPT. PAUL B. MALONE, U. S. A. A thrilling story of a young recruit in the Philippines after the transfer to the United States. The scenes are those of camp, skirmish and battle. As a result of his bravery the hero wins an appointment to West Point. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

A Plebe at West Point

By CAPT. PAUL B. MALONE, U. S. A. Douglas Atwell won his cadetship by his bravery in the Philippines, and now appears at West Point. Capt Malone knows the cadet life at first hand, and his story will stir the blood of every reader. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

Fighting King George

By JOHN T. McINTYRE. Tom Deering was one of "Marion's Men," those fleet and daring riders who so baffled Tarleton and Clinton in the Carolinas. Tom sees lots of fighting and has the good fortune to be at Yorktown when Cornwallis gives up his sword. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

The Lost Expedition

By W. BERT FOSTER. This story, of how a professor and two young companions were lost on an Alaskan glacier, and how they escaped death in a dozen forms, has all the fascination of the old Arctic exploration narratives, with the zest of a stirring plot as well. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

STORIES FOR YOUNGER CHILDREN

Marjorie's Way

By ALICE TURNER CURTIS. Marjorie had two aims—to be like her aunt, and to help Luke Saunders. Luke turned out well and Marjorie did become like her aunt in a surprising way. A very wholesome and charming story. Cloth, illustrated, $1.00.

The Boynton Pluck

By HELEN WARD BANKS. Bob and Billy by mistake get into the hands of a mean old farmer, who overworks and half starves them. It takes pluck to stand it, but they pull through it, and are all the better for their experience. Cloth, illustrated, $1.00.

¶ SANDY

By the author of ¶ "MRS. WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH" ¶

SINCE the date of issue "Sandy" has been on the list of the six best selling books in the United States, and for the past five months has been alternately first and second. It takes a good book to secure that position and to hold it for that length of time. "Sandy" has been called "rays of sunshine" and "the best of Mrs. Rice's books." It is a longer story than the others, but costs the same—$1.00. Illustrated.

¶ QUEEN ZIXI OF IX

¶ By L. FRANK BAUM

¶ Author of ¶ "The Wizard of Oz"

¶ This is the handsomest illustrated children's book of the season, and just as full of fun as it is of color. A real fairy story, illustrated with sixteen full-page pictures in three colors, and 75 additional ones in two colors. The finest "Baum Book" ever published. Square 12mo, 303 pages, $1.50.

¶ PINKEY PERKINS: ¶ Just a Boy

¶ By CAPT. HAROLD HAMMOND, U.S.A.

¶ This book is recommended to boys especially. It is very humorous, the first genuine boys' story that has been written in a long time. "Pinkey" is a genius, as full of fun and frolic as "Tom Sawyer." Turn him loose in the home—he is the best companion boys could have. 12mo, 325 pages, $1.50.

LEADING FALL NOVELS

¶ THE NORTHERNER
By NORAH DAVIS
A powerful love-story of the South, in which sectional prejudice plays an important part. $1.50.

¶ SABINA
By the author of "TILLIE: A Mennonite Maid"
Another absorbing story of the queer Pennsylvania Dutch, this time the Amish. $1.25.

¶ PLAIN MARY SMITH: A Romance of Red Saunders
By HENRY WALLACE PHILLIPS
A rare combination of deviltry, sentiment, and unbridled fun. $1.50.

¶ THE WHEAT PRINCESS By the author of "When Patty Went to College"
The love-story of an American millionaire's daughter in Italy. $1.50.

¶ JULES OF THE GREAT HEART
By LAWRENCE MOTT
A stirring book, graphically portraying the adventures of a French-Canadian outlaw trapper. $1.50.

¶ UNDER ROCKING SKIES
By L. FRANK TOOKER
As good a sea-yarn as you will want to read, with a delightful love-interest. $1.50.

¶ ŻAL: An International Romance
By RUPERT HUGHES
The love-story of a Polish musician who comes to America—an unusual book. $1.50.

THE CENTURY CO.'S HOLIDAY BOOKS

¶ AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF ¶ ANDREW D. WHITE

THIS IS THE IDEAL ¶ CHRISTMAS GIFT ¶

¶ Here is one of the world's few great biographies. It is history, biography, narrative. It follows the march of politics, statescraft, and diplomacy for fifty years. ¶ It contains a keen appreciation of the Czar, of the Kaiser, of Bismarck, of Tolstoi, and nearly every other notable abroad with whom the author has come into personal contact. ¶ It is the story of a life of active usefulness, direct, simple, sincere. ¶ It overflows with anecdote and interesting data about the leading men of our country from Lincoln to Roosevelt. ¶ It is entertaining; it is instructive; it belongs in every library. Nothing can surpass it as a Christmas gift. ¶ Royal octavo, 2 vols., 600 pages each. $7.50 net; carriage extra.

¶ VERSAILLES AND THE ¶ COURT UNDER LOUIS XIV

¶ By JAMES EUGENE FARMER

¶ This is the only definitive record of Versailles available to the public. It is an intimate picture of the Grand Monarch and his brilliant court, with its parading and intriguing courtiers; beautifully illustrated. Divided into four parts—the Palace, the Park, the King, the Court. Royal octavo, 595 pages, 70 illustrations. $3.50 net; postage, 21 cents.

ITALIAN VILLAS ¶ AND THEIR GARDENS ¶

By EDITH WHARTON ¶

¶ The demand for this work grows. Last year's large edition was exhausted long before Christmas, and the second edition, with its pictures by Maxfield Parrish in four colors, black and white, and from photographs, is just completed. It describes the most interesting villa-gardens of Italy. Royal octavo, bound in colors and gold, 275 pages. $6.00 net; postage, 27 cents.

¶ HOW TO STUDY ¶ PICTURES

A HAND-BOOK OF ART ¶ By CHARLES H. CAFFIN ¶

¶ A series of comparisons of paintings and painters from Cimabue to Monet, with historical and biographical summaries and appreciations of the painters' motives and methods. One of the most unique and useful, as well as interesting, books on art ever issued. It is of value to students, travelers, teachers, and all art lovers. Mr. Caffin has adopted the original method of contrasting the work of equally great artists on opposite pages—in all fifty-six artists. Send for special circular. The bibliography, glossary, and indexes add value to the book. Octavo, 528 pages, 56 illustrations. $2.00 net; postage, 19 cents.

¶ WITH THE EMPRESS ¶ DOWAGER

By KATHARINE CARL, who lived eleven ¶ months in the Imperial Palace of China ¶

¶ This is a remarkable story of singular interest and entertainment. While painting four portraits of the Empress, Miss Carl gathered the material for this intimate account of the most powerful woman in the world and her court, with its intrigues, jealousies, gay parties, and tragedies. Royal octavo, 306 pages, 21 illustrations. $2.00 net; postage, 14 cents.

THE LEADING FALL BOOK

RED FOX

The Story of His Adventurous Career in the Ringwaak Wilds and of His Final Triumph Over the Enemies of His Kind

Square 12mo, with cover design, 50 full-page plates and many decorations from drawings by CHARLES LIVINGSTON BULL. $2.00.

The New Work of Professor Charles G. D. Roberts

The First Long Animal Story by the Author of "The Kindred of the Wild," etc., etc.

"The absorbing adventures of Red Fox are depicted with the rarest skill, in addition to which the book makes a brilliant chapter in Natural History."—WM. R. LESTER in Phila. No. American

"The reader gives himself up eagerly to the charm of Prof. Roberts's delightful style, and becomes wholly absorbed in the fascinating adventures of Red Fox."—F. DANA REED in Brooklyn Eagle.

Our own confidence in the fine quality of GRACE MacGOWAN COOKE'S striking novel on the Labor Question, THE GRAPPLE, cannot be better expressed than in the words of the New York Times critic, who said: "Mrs. Cooke's unusual story is so original, so strong, and so finely told, that it deserves a large and thoughtful public and a leading place among the books of the day."

"Another altogether delightful MRS. JIM book" is the consensus of the enthusiastic commendations of MRS. JIM AND MRS. JIMMIE, by STEPHEN CONRAD. The first "Mrs. Jim" book, The Second Mrs. Jim, doubled its sales during the fall of 1904, altho' it was published in the preceding April. "Mrs. Jim and Mrs. Jimmie" will do that and much more than that. If your customers haven't met Mrs. Jim or Mrs. Jimmie yet, they have a treat in store for them.

When ROBERT NEILSON STEPHENS wrote THE FLIGHT OF GEORGIANA, we knew that it would have a large audience, but we could not anticipate the unanimous praise of leading critics. We quote two: "He is the master among modern writers of romance."—Phila. Press. "A well told, eventful and thoroughly satisfying story, the reading of which left us refreshed, cheered and grateful."—Everybody's Magazine.

HARPER & BROTHERS, PUBLISHERS, NEW YORK

HARPER'S NEW FICTION

THE CONQUEST OF CANAAN — By BOOTH TARKINGTON

This is unquestionably the best novel Mr. Tarkington has produced. It is a splendid story of the triumph of character over circumstance, and a perfect example of the thoroughly American novel. Illustrated, Cloth, $1.50

THE GAMBLER — By KATHERINE CECIL THURSTON

Mrs. Thurston again gives the world a novel of striking and original achievement. In "The Gambler" she has portrayed a heroine as superbly fascinating as she is unusual in fiction. A powerful story, as magical in its charm as was 'The Masquerader." Illustrated, $1.50

THE DEBTOR — By MARY E. WILKINS FREEMAN

A story which from its moving dramatic interest and human appeal should find a popular reception with the many thousands who have read and loved Mary E. Wilkins' New England tales. Illustrated, $1.50

POLE BAKER — By WILL N. HARBEN

A shrewd, kindly, shirt-sleeves philosopher, Pole Baker will be remembered as a humorous character in the author's "Abner Daniel." Here he has some capital yarns to tell as well as a genius for interfering in other people's affairs to their own ultimate good. $1.50

THE TRIDENT AND THE NET — By the Author of "THE MARTYRDOM OF AN EMPRESS."

This popular author here enters a new field, and in this novel her powers of vivid description and realistic narration have freer scope than ever before. Illustrated, $1.50 net

REBECCA MARY — By ANNIE HAMILTON DONNELL

"Of all small girls who have recently figured as heroines in fiction, Annie Hamilton Donnell's 'Rebecca Mary' is at once the quaintest, most original, attractive, and sincere of the lot."—N. Y. Globe. Illustrated, $1.50

EDITORIAL WILD OATS — By MARK TWAIN

A volume containing several of Mark Twain's funniest sketches, all narrating various journalistic experiences of his youth. Laughable bits of literary whimsicality and adventure. Illustrated, $1.00

THE TRAVELLING THIRDS — By GERTRUDE ATHERTON

Gertrude Atherton has done nothing better than this. Puck and Cupid work midsummer madness among the party, and the climax is a brilliant and surprising stroke of imagination. $1.25

MRS. RAFFLES — By JOHN KENDRICK BANGS

Mr. Bangs has amusingly parodied the adventures of the celebrated Raffles in narrating the burglaries in which, after Raffles death, his widow is engaged. Illustrated, $1.25

Christmas Greeting

Twice-told tales are ever the best loved, and now all the world rejoices to hear once more the message of Christmas-tide. Its burden of peace, goodwill and friendship is again set forth upon the Christmas bookshelf, in volumes where young and old may find comfort and good cheer. Counsel of the world's sages; poetry, wit, and wisdom; travellers' tales; gay romance and bustling adventure; elfin chronicles of makebelieve, and romping stories of playtime—they wait, adorned with brush and pencil, rich in holiday array, and holding golden hours for winter's brightening. Alike in their choosing and their using we receive their message, and in silence they speak to us in Christmas Greeting.

The Bible Beautiful.

FROM the beginning of history, religion and art have gone hand in hand. The worshipper has always embodied his aspirations in some form of beauty. The Mosaic law forbade the Hebrews to practice graphic arts: "Thou shalt not make to thyself any graven image nor the likeness of any thing that is in Heaven above, or on the earth beneath or in the water under the earth." Their spiritual ideals were of the loftiest and they wrought them into a great national literature from which all Christian art has drawn its first inspirations. When Christianity entered the western world its teachings were to be interpreted to a people that could only receive through the eyes and they were at once translated into the universal language of pictures. This great motive fashioned the marvellous mosaics, carved cathedral fronts, designed stained glass windows, ornamented bronze doors and frescoed the walls and ceilings of the great houses of worship. Century after century the sacred story of a world created out of nothing, lost by sin and redeemed by the sacrifice of the only begotten Son of the Creator, was translated from one form of art to another until the world's noblest painting was worthy to stand beside the world's noblest literature.

An opportunity is given to all to possess in most artistic shape a collection of the most celebrated paintings based on Bible subjects, and most valuable information upon the artists that painted them, in "The Bible Beautiful," by Estelle M. Hurll, which L. C. Page & Company make their leading holiday book this season.

In this volume she traces the development of Bible illustration from the crude pictures of the catacombs through the art of various countries to the present day. Three appendices, composed of selections from mediæval literature, throw light upon the study of art origins and there are three carefully made, most useful indexes: one of artists for the art student; one of places for the tourist; and one of Bible subjects for theological students. The book is illustrated in duogravure from photographs selected by the author from forty-three of the old masters.

The publishers have made a dainty holiday book of this very valuable material. It is bound in white parchment, with rich gilt border ornamented in mosaic design, and makes a very ornamental as well as distinctly appropriate Christmas gift. It is neatly boxed. Miss Hurll is doing most excellent work in a specially happy manner.

HER LETTER.

The Love Suit on Poverty Flat.

In the summer of 1868 the second number of the new California magazine, The Overland Monthly, contained a story by its editor entitled "The Luck of Roaring Camp." The world almost missed that story. The young girl proofreader thought it immoral and the foreman of the printing office pleaded with the young editor to suppress it. But the publisher of the magazine decided that it should appear unchanged by one letter or comma, and Bret Harte, the young editor, became known throughout the reading world.

Very soon the magazines of highest rank were competing for such sketches of the outskirts of civilization which Bret Harte peopled with characters that became household words.

And then little poems and poems of longer length began to fill odd corners of the papers and magazines, signed B. or H., or not at all. These added to the author's growing fame and perhaps will keep this fame alive when his stories are neglected by a coming generation. Of such are the three poems that together tell the history of "the love-suit on Poverty Flat." Two of these appeared in the seventies, "Her Letter" and "His Letter," but it was nearly at the close of his life that the author wrote "Her Last Letter" which so touchingly rounds out the love-story so dramatically and artistically told. In "Her Letter" the "heiress to the best-paying lead in the state" writes from New York where she has been taken to be "'finished' by travel"

"To someone who breasted highwater,
And swam the North Fork and all that,
Just to dance with old Folinsbee's daughter,
The Lily of Poverty Flat."

"His Letter" is dictated in high fever to "Truthful James," that masterpiece of Bret Harte's creation, who himself adds:

P. S. Which this same interfering
Into other folks ways I despise;
Yet if it so be I was hearing
That its just empty pockets as lies
Between you and Joseph, it follers
That, having no family claims,
Here's my pile, which it's six hundred dollars,
As is yours, with respects,
TRUTHFUL JAMES.

STARTING FOR CAMP.

Outdoor Pastimes of an American Hunter.

BIG GAME hunting is the subject dealt with in all but one of the chapters of this vital and absorbing volume, which is a fresh revelation of the "manysidedness" of the President of the United States. Mr. Roosevelt writes here as a born sportsman—ardent in the chase, evidently a dead shot, and "game" for any trial of strength or skill—yet he is more than that. Intense love of nature, an almost emotional sympathy for the "various language" of wilderness, plain and forest, are evident, as is his thorough knowledge of the history and literature of hunting, his quick humor and his kindliness toward man and beast. His own attitude toward hunting is perhaps most clearly shown, when he says: "Personally I feel that the chase of any animal has in it two chief elements of attraction. The first is the chance given to be in the wilderness; to see the sights and hear the sounds of wild nature. The second is the demand made by the particular kind of chase upon the qualities of manliness and hardihood. As regards the first some kinds of game, of course, lead the hunter into particularly remote and wild localities; and the farther one gets into the wilderness, the greater is the attraction of its lonely freedom. Yet to camp out at all implies some measure of this delight. The keen, fresh air, the breath of the pine forests, the glassy stillness of the lake at sunset, the glory of sunrise among the mountains, the shimmer of the endless prairies, the ceaseless rustle of the cottonwood trees where the wagon is drawn up on the low bluff of the sunken river—all these appeal intensely to any man, no matter what may be the game he happens to be following."

Eight of the eleven chapters of the volume tell of Mr. Roosevelt's hunting experiences, recent or more remote. Among them are the hunt with the cougar hounds in Colorado in 1901, his bear hunt in Colorado and his wolf hunt in Oklahoma in the spring of the present year, and many of the incidents of his own ranch life. The prong-buck, mountain sheep, white tail deer, mule deer, and wapiti, each furnish a graphic chapter; as does his Yellowstone Park trip of 1903, when he laid the cornerstone of the great entrance arch to this magnificent national preserve.

"Books on big game," considered comprehensively and with keen critical acumen, have a place to themselves; while the final chapter, called "at home," tells of the family pets of his own household. The home pets have ranged from woodchucks, minks and dogs to a baby badger, kangaroo rats, flying squirrels, guinea pigs, rabbits, and "a queer-tempered young black bear, which the children named Jonathan Edwards, partly because of certain well-marked Calvinistic tendencies in his disposition, partly out of compliment to their mother whose ancestors included that Puritan divine."

On the preservation of our wild game Mr. Roosevelt holds strong views. Hunting with knowledge and discrimination, stringent "close seasons," and absolute prohibition of excessive game butchery—which he regards as "a repulsive debauch"—these he thinks are essentials, if outdoor life is to hold one of its manliest and finest activities. He makes a strong plea, also, for the hunter to be something more than a mere killer—an explorer, a naturalist. "If possible, he should be an adept with the camera; and hunting with the camera will tax his skill far more than hunting with the rifle, while the results in the long run will give much greater satisfaction." The spirit that underlies the whole volume, indeed, finds expression in the dedication to "Dear Oom John" Burroughs, as one whose writings "appeal to all who care for the life of the woods and the fields, whether their tastes keep them in the homely, pleasant farm country or lead them into the wilderness."

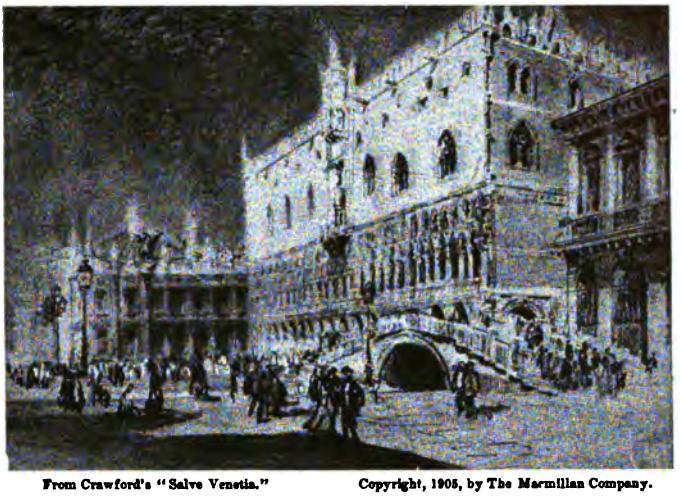
THE FIRST COUGAR KILLED.

Salve Venetia.

LIKE Rome and Florence and other great Italian cities, Venice has always had an individual history and government of its own, as late even as the eighteenth century, when Napoleon ended the republic, and ceded the territories of Venice to Austria. After later vicissitudes Venice finally in 1866 became a part of the Kingdom of Italy.



This queen of the Adriatic has for generations been the Mecca of the art student and traveller. Its unique position and construction—rising vision-like from the unsubstantial sea—have only been part of the bewildering fascination it has exercised upon the world. The finest conceivable examples of architecture and sculpture are shown in its palaces, its tombs, and its churches; its art galleries, collections of masterpieces, rich in information and inspiration, draw lovers of the artistic from every quarter of the globe; to its lagoons and narrow streets, its gloomy prisons, to every stone of its numerous mementoes of past or recent centuries clings a history, that can scarcely be paralleled in strange romance, in dark and mysterious deeds of cruelty and revenge. The palaces of the doges, scenes of the wildest luxury and extravagance, filled to overflowing with the treasures and spoils of the east, are even to-day robbed to enrich and adorn the home of a modern millionaire. Within its history is embraced the annals of the Inquisition—a name that will never cease to create a shudder of fear and abhorrence. The rise of the great republic, and its final downfall, is an episode so enlightening to the student of governments that none should fail to learn it by heart.

Immortalis," and Naples in "The Rulers of the South"—given such salient points in its history as may be enjoyed by the general reader, ever craving fresh food for his hungry imagination; these events standing like milestones in Venice's growth and decadence. Thus prepared, the work is charmingly good reading, doubly enhanced by the novelty of Mr. Crawford's style, an attractive combination of simplicity and the half humorous philosophy of the man of the world. Volume one of this handsome work opens with an account of the republic of St. Mark; following are chapters on Venice under the families of Partecipazio, Candiano, and Orseolo; on Venice and the First Crusade; Venice and Constantinople; on manners and certain customs in the fourteenth century; with an account of the doges of the early part of the fourteenth century, the conspiracy of Marino Faliero and his successors, of Carlo Zeno, and of the two famous factions of the Castellani and the Niccolotté, between whom a bitter hatred existed. Venice in the sixteenth century begins the narrative of the second volume; its aristocratic magistrates, its criminal history, Venetian diplomacy, the arsenal, the glass works, and lace-makers, its painters, among whom were Titian, Tintoretto and Veronese; men of letters and scholars are a few of its themes. Venice is also pictured in her decadence, with pen sketches of her last homes, her last great ladies; the last carnivals, the last fairs, the last feasts, the last magistrates, the last sbirri, the last doges, the last soldiers, the last diplomats and the last hour.

The Macmillan Company, who publish this beautiful work, issue it with the certainty of enlarging the already almost numberless list of Mr. Crawford's admirers. Like their predecessors in the same line, the two volumes are richly illustrated. There are thirty photogravures and two hundred half-tones from drawings by Mr. Joseph Pennell, woven in the text, and an exquisitely designed binding. To those who enjoyed "Ave Roma Immortalis" this work is recommended.

VILLA LANDOR FROM THE GARDEN.

The Florence of Landor.

THE Florence that Walter Savage Landor knew differed little in its outward aspects from the Florence of the ages beautified by Lorenzo il Magnifico and forever made famous by the great men in the arts and sciences associated with its history. In describing it Miss Whiting has confined her researches to a certain period in the life of the celebrated English poet and author of "Imaginary Conversations," the years from 1821 to 1864 when he lived at Fiesole, and was the dominant figure of the brilliant group of English and American authors and artists who made their homes in Florence.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR.

The work is, in a way, a biography of one of the giants of English literature. It is not only based upon new Landor material, but it is a fresh attempt, and one of unusual power to portray for the world a true portrait of a man often unfairly treated. Strong impressionist views are offered of the man himself, from the pens of his contemporaries. His peculiar temperament, his impulsive loves and hates, his rapid methods of literary creation, with the story of his home life at the Villa Landor, his early romance, of which Rose Aylmer was the heroine, form subjects of chapters.

Landor's life lacked but a decade to rounding out a century. Some of the best work of his career was accomplished in the decades marking the closing years of his life, influenced no doubt by contact with the fascinating personalities that lent charm and distinction to the social life of the Florence of that period —a period studied by Lilian Whiting with unusual industry and enthusiasm, during a residence in this attractive old city. The narrative, however, is not limited to the nineteenth century; we are carried back to the past centuries of Florence, with its tragedies and their picturesque heroes. We visit her palaces, her monuments and tombs; listen to vivid descriptions and criticisms of the great art treasures of the Pitti and the Uffizi; and have told us in poetical phrase the legends, myths and authentic stories that cling to the figures of history and romance of her mediæval days, learning to love this "Flower of Dante and Michael Angelo, and the home of Galileo, and among the nearby hills of Fiesole, Boccaccio conceived his immortal "Decameron." Many of the "Imaginary Conversations" were composed here aloud, Landor wandering in the footsteps of the great Italian novelist. Florence always remained to him the most beautiful spot in the world and as it first impressed him under "the gleaming amethyst lights of the early spring days of 1821."

all Cities and City of all Flowers," as deeply as do all who come within its alluring limits. Approaching nearer our own day, we drink tea and eat strawberries (in the spirit) on the terraces of the Brownings and the Storys, take delightful picnics with the Hawthornes and the Trollopes or spend Arcadian days with other equally charming companions in excursions to noted places. Idyllic hours of summer beauty, rare landscapes and scenes of romantic suggestion are brought before us with the pencil of an artist. The first steps in the conception of George Eliot's "Romola" are followed through the crowded thoroughfares, the scenes of Savonarola's fiery and tragical conflicts being pointed out. Landor's villa looked down upon the birthplace of

The Villa Landor, of which we give a picture, has an added interest in the fact that years after Landor's death it was the home of Professor Daniel Willard Fiske, formerly of Cornell University, who restored its special features, fitting it up with every modern convenience, furnishing it with the most exquisite taste. The portrait of Mr. Landor, painted when he was eighty years of age and reproduced as the frontispiece of this volume, is the work of Charles Caryll Coleman, who was then a young art-student in Italy. It was painted for Kate Field. With its special literary charm, its many full-page pictures and handsome binding, the work ranks among the finest of the holiday volumes. The Boss of Little Arcady.

No one writes a better novel of American conditions than Harry Leon Wilson. He has the information, quiet, sympathetic observation, humor, pathos, the love of his fellow-man and the poetic imagination needed to invent the situations in which he can show his characters to the life.

"A-CHESTIN' OUT HIS CHEST LAHK A OLE MA'ASH FRAWG."

All his old art and his constantly growing experience in literary construction are shown in Mr. Wilson's latest story, "The Boss of Little Arcady," just issued by Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co. The scene is laid in a thriving Ohio town, "just after the war," where the "boss" was not the low political schemer now known under that name in our large American cities, but the editor of the weekly paper which really guided, moulded and led his fellow-citizens. When the story opens this man is shown using all his ingenuity to get rid of a fellow-citizen "objectionable in every way: as a human being, a man, a citizen, a member of the Slocum County bar, a veteran of our late Civil Conflict, shiftless, untidy, a borrower, a pompous braggart, a trouble-maker, forever driving some poor devil into senseless litigation, and also given to spells of hard drinking." But when even the "boss" was at a loss to proceed without withdrawing his "iron hand from the velvet glove," "Upright Potts" received word that his deserted wife was coming to Arcady and "Upright Potts" disappeared forever. The wife came, a typical character of a generation ago, a devotee of "culture" given to lecturing and teaching and "literachoor." She influenced the "boss" by attacking him at his weakest point, his newspaper. She criticised and rewrote and taught until the rugged paper which had told the truth in any shape became a model of expression and she really first taught the Little Arcadians of the existence of Darwin, Huxley, Robert Browning, Emerson and the other civilizers of whom the world was talking.

The narrative is told by the intimate friend of the "boss," once his rival in the love of a woman who chose the "boss," and led to this second hero of the tale going to the war where he became a major.

A Southern lady of the old regime also comes to Little Arcady to be supported by her old ex-slave, and this gives Mr. Wilson opportunity for very noble thoughts about conditions following the Civil War. And this woman's daughter plays the part of the Cupid needed in all stories that are to be popular. These Southerners are in strong contrast to the energetic "boss" and to the woman who taught him so many active truths.

The publishers have made a pretty book, well printed, just the thing to read aloud in cosy comfort on a stormy winter night.

Nothing is more needed than books so written that they must be read, which hold before the people American ideals of true liberty, and of hard, constructive work that will help the next generation to acquire what no man can take from them.

The simpler and sweeter things of life hold sway in Little Arcady and the "boss" is always lovable.

LITTLE MISS AND "JIM."

Eve's Daughters.

"A house without a woman and firelight is like a body without soul or spirit."—BENJAMIN FRANKLIN.

IN our very tenderest years we were taught by some sweet, smiling, fluffy-haired Sunday-school teacher, adored by boys and girls alike, that all the sin and trouble of the world could be traced to Mother Eve. She had plucked a little apple from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil which she had been commanded to let alone, and she liked the first bite and of course kept the rest for the man she loved. He ate and then he told, and they both lost their Paradise.

Thus crudely was the beautiful idea of the responsibility of woman and of her power in the life of man presented to young minds by one of Eve's daughters, who herself could only read in the symbolical poem that Eve was very wicked and Adam very mean.

The little scholars grew to men and women, and saw and heard much of the happiness and the sorrow of the world, and were again taught the lesson of the tree of knowledge, this time by more sophisticated lips, which also reduced all the complicated story to one little proverb, and said: "Cherchez la femme."

What men and women both have said of "Eve's Daughters" bringing out of their study of woman and womanhood the very highest and the very lowest thoughts, is in itself a literature. A "Mere Man" has browsed recently in this special field and has compiled a book about "Eve's Daughters" in selections from writers of very clime and tongue, and these selections have been portrayed by the pencil of Arthur G. Learned, and Dana Estes & Company have secured all the nice work and have made it into a sumptuous holiday book. Open it anywhere, you are fascinated and can read for hours, and every page is full of pretty drawings, showing all the little articles of toilet, amusement, need or extravagance that are dear to the heart of woman from the cradle to the grave. Ribbons, laces, jewels, powder-puffs, fans, looking-glasses and cats zig-zag over the largest pages, entwined with flowers, hearts and little pictures of all kinds of impossible men, some with wings and some with cloven hoof, all hovering around "Eve's Daughters." JESUS BEFORE PILATE.

A Prisoner's Story of the Cross.

It takes courage once again to write the story of the Cross, but a German has this courage in the year of our Lord 1905. His name is Peter Rosegger, and he has found a translator in Elizabeth Lee, and a publisher in McClure, Phillips & Company.

The old, old story is told by a prisoner. Who was he, how came he to undertake so arduous, so presumptuous a task? He was Otto Ferleitner, found guilty by a majority of two-thirds of the jury and in the name of his Majesty the King condemned to die by hanging. What had he done? He had belonged to a Society for the Protection of the People Against Traitors, and he had been selected to fire the shot at the Chancellor, a man in high position. He never for a moment had doubted that the Society which had so fired his emotions would be able to save him from all the logical consequences of his lawless act. But he was condemned to die, and when he reached his solitary cell he was frightened. He fell to the brick floor and lay as one dead. Later he roused and sent for a priest, not that he felt the need of religious consolation, but he craved the nearness of a human being and only a priest was allowed to visit a murderer. The priest came, said the conventional words, went away and sent the prisoner some appropriate reading. The little leaflets and booklets left the prisoner wholly unmoved, but the words touched a chord of memory. He thought of his mother, and how she had taught him the old Bible stories, how real she had made it all, and how she had always in the hours that were often so dark found comfort and rest in her Bible. The prisoner thought he would begin and write down the story of the Redemption of the world as his mother had told it. The warden refused him a pen, for condemned criminals had taken their life with such "a bare bodkin."

Then came the judge who had spoken the sentence. He said perhaps in three weeks or six weeks the prisoner might be pardoned. He granted him ink, pen and paper, and the prisoner had work, the great boon so cruelly denied to murderers in prison.

And he wrote the story of "I. N. R. I.," and finished it exactly six weeks after his condemnation. He had written it all day and dreamed of it all night. He had been in the stable at Bethlehem, he had wandered by the Lake of Gennesaret, and had spent nights in the wilderness of Judæa. He had stood on the Mount of Olives; he had been in Bethany and supped at the side of Jesus.

be over." A short silence. Then the Father answered: "The criminal, Ferleitner, needs neither priest nor judge. He is pardoned."

And this story of the Cross, as a poor ig-

Captive, in prison and sentenced to death, he was almost indifferent to the thought. He had experienced the glorious death at Golgotha; his heart was full of the Resurrection. He gave his history to the priest, and the latter read all the poor manuscript and said nothing.

CROWD OF SIGHT-SEERS AT HENLEY.

London Films.

Mr. Howells's half dozen sojourns in London have enabled him to use his mental kodak with satisfying results. Although he modestly disclaims any particular skill in the process of developing to which he has subjected the various films he has exposed to the sights and experiences of London life, yet the keen-eyed and quick-brained traveller, alive to the niceties of contrasted shades and lights, will perceive that Mr. Howells has produced a series of London views having many resemblances both to a moving picture and a composite photograph.

FLEET STREET AND ST. DUNSTAN'S CHURCH.

Since Mr. Howells's first impressions of London in Civil War days, he has revisited it at varying intervals, not like the professional tourist bent on "doing" the sights in the shortest possible time, but like a traveller returning home after a long absence, sure of a kindly welcome and confident of renewing the sensation of oneness with its storied past.

One may be a loyal American and yet feel the sensation. One may also be an enthusiastic New Yorker and yet find nothing to quarrel with in Mr. Howells's contrasted glimpses of the two cities, their buildings, streets, crowds and atmosphere. As he aptly sums up the differences between them, "London was and is and shall be, and New York is and shall be, but has hardly yet been."

In the pages of his book we accompany him in his rambles about London, by day and night, afoot or on top of the "lordly omnibus," or ensconced in the "cheerfully intelligent cab." Arriving in the early spring of 1904, Mr. Howells is made to understand what a pity it is that English houses cannot be built reversible, so that the cold outside may replace the colder inside. He comments on the London spring housecleaning, and on the London season, upon which the peace of mind and bank accounts of London tradesmen depend. The English church may be disestablished, the House of Lords abolished, but the London Season must be inviolable.

Mr. Howells pleasantly philosophizes on matters of state and ceremony; points out the reasons which make English life essentially a family life; wonders when the king finds time for reigning with all his travelling, visiting and entertaining. We are conducted to Hyde Park to gaze at the Sunday throng of the socially elect, and to Battersea to mix with the holiday crowd of workers; or we join in a most interesting search for American origins in old city churches and half-forgotten streets. Then there are delightful excursions along the Thames, to Hampton Court, the "royal almshouse," to Greenwich, where we eat white bait and later hunt up Nelson relics; to Henley for a water fête, called by our English cousins a boat-race.

Thus we saunter with this most engaging of guides, enlivened by his humorous comments, seeing old sights with more discerning eyes, gaining an appreciation of all that makes London a city unique in interest and endearing in charm. Mr. Howells is at his very best—and can any contemporary writer better his best?—in this volume, wherein may be found all those qualities of style and thought which have made him pre-eminent in present-day American literature. To the manifold excellences of the narrative the Harpers have added some two dozen remarkably good half-tone illustrations, reproducing characteristic bits of London scenes.

How to Study Pictures.

THE world is full of beauty, which many people hurry past or live in front of and do not see. There is also a world of beauty in pictures, but it escapes the notice of many because while they wish to see it they do not know how.

PORTRAIT OF GEORG GYZE. (Holbein the Younger.)

The first necessity for the proper seeing of a picture is to try to see it through the eyes of the artist who painted it. The world is a vast panorama, and from it the painter selects his subject, not to copy it exactly, since it would be impossible for him to do this, even if he tried. How could he represent each blade of grass, each leaf upon a tree? So what he does is to represent the subject as he sees it, as it appears to his sympathy or interest; and if twelve artists painted the same landscape, the result would be twelve different pictures differing according to their separate ways of seeing it, which of course, would be influenced by their individual experience and feeling. People as a rule look only through their own eyes, and like or dislike a picture according as it does or does not suit their particular fancy. These people will tell you: "Oh! I don't know anything about painting, but I know what I like," which is another way of saying: "If I don't like it right off, I don't care to be bothered to like it at all." Such an attitude of mind cuts one off from all growth and development.

But there are many more people hungry to be taught to know and understand pictures, and for these Charles Henry Caffin, the well-known art critic, has made a book called "How to Study Pictures," which has been published in the best style of the Century Company. Mr. Caffin, who is a native of Kent, England, came to this country in 1892 to work in the decoration department of the World's Columbian Exposition. Since then he has been art critic on Harper's Weekly, on the Evening Post, and the New York Sun. He is a graduate of Oxford University and a man of pronounced scholarly as well as artistic learning. He has had long experience as teacher and lecturer, and he understands the great art of holding attention and making his matter interesting.

His plan for this work is original and of great possibility. He teaches by means of a series of comparisons of paintings and painters from Cimabue to Monet, with historical and biographical summaries and appreciations of the painters' motives and methods. In each chapter two artists are compared, sometimes of the same school, sometimes of different schools. The author bids you—not as a rule to discover which is the better, but to contrast the artists' motives and methods. In the course of the comparison Mr. Caffin gives the history of the times when necessary to the understanding of the artists, short biographies of each artist, an explanation of the influences which helped to shape him and his special point of view; and teaches the method of his technique as illustrated in the samples selected. He acquaints his readers with all the men who may be described as pivotal or representative in the evolution of painting, and they are not allowed to become absorbed in one man or one school to the exclusion of others. Technical terms are used to make the reader familiar with them, but there is a good glossary.

"Look here, upon this picture, and on this"—

And the publishers have done their share to make the volume a treasury of celebrated works of art. They have reproduced portraits of the great artists and specimens of their most characteristic work in facing pictures that show at a glance what the author has so carefully trained his readers to see.

The Century Company has added another to the long list of art books by the publishing of which it has done such enduring work for the art education of America.

THE OLD SCRIBE. (JOZEF ISRAELS)

THE SLUM CAT.

Animal Heroes.

COURAGE and daring are the accepted qualities of heroism, and these man shares with his humbler "little brothers" of the air and the forest. "Animal Heroes" is Ernest Thompson Seton's happy title for his latest volume of animal lore—character sketches and brief life histories of creatures engaged in constant struggle against opposing forces of man or nature, and rising above their fellows by their indomitable spirit and undaunted energy. It is a varied company — a cat, a dog, a pigeon, a lynx, two wolves and a reindeer — showing again Mr. Seton's wide knowledge and deep sympathies with all the dwellers of the brute world which he has made his own. To the telling there is added the interpretation of the artist-author's clever pencil, in a fine series of full-page drawings and an abundance of delightful marginal sketches and thumbnail decorations, while in the artistic fitness of printing, type and execution, the volume takes its place beside Messrs. Scribners' previous editions of Thompson Seton's books.

THE WINNIPEG WOLF.

There are eight stories in the volume, each founded on an actual animal life-history, though more or less composite as to details, and ranging in their setting from the east side purlieus of New York to the trackless forests of Manitoba. "The Slum Cat" is the first of the tales. From a kittenhood of outcast poverty, Slum Kitty is thrust by a freak of fortune into the most favored realms of cathood. As the Royal Analoston, of mythical pedigree, magnificent in fur and marking, she has soft cushions, tender care and every luxury; but the desire for her native slum drives her back to the wild freedom and dangers of her familiar haunts, where alone she knows contentment. Very graphic is the brief chronicle of "Arnaux," the homing pigeon, and full of interest in its indication of the wonderful feats in speed and distance, accomplished by these little winged messengers. The bull terrier Snap is the only other one of the "animal heroes" who may be counted among the friends of man; and his affections were limited to his master, whom he loved with a truculent affection. His story is short and tragic, but vital in its picture of the wolf hunt with the pack of hounds, led on to dear victory by "the crowning moral force of grit, that none can supply so well as a bull terrier."

For the other stories there is a wilder background. "Badlands Billy," the fierce black wolf of the buttes and plains, has the longest chronicle. From the cub days with his foster mother to his dominance as the terror of ranchmen and cattle herders, his career is traced with all a naturalist's insight and a trained story-teller's ardor. Thompson Seton in a few graphic sentences can convey a better realization of animal characteristics than is given in many a zoölogical treatise. Take, for instance, this: "Mankind has difficulty in recognizing the power of nostrils. A gray wolf can glance over the morning wind as a man does over his newspaper, and get all the latest news. He can swing over the ground and have the minutest information of every living creature that has walked there within many hours. His nose even tells which way it ran, and in a word renders a statement of every animal that recently crossed his trail, whence it came and whither it went." With equal clearness the various traits of animal nature are set before the reader, and wolf, coyote, and their fellows are given individuality and are seen as kin to man in their suffering, their heroism and their contentment. "Little Warhorse" is the tale of a jack rabbit, whose fleetness and grit won a hard earned freedom from the fierce ordeal of greyhound coursing; in "The Boy and the Lynx" Thompson Seton has woven incidents of his own boyhood in the Canadian backwoods; "The Winnipeg Wolf" tells of the strange friendship between a small boy and a great gray wolf; and "The Legend of the White Reindeer" is a wild poetic Norse folk-tale

THE WHITE RENSKALV FACING THE WOLVERENE.

In all the tales are evident that mingling of keen observation and sympathetic understanding that have made Thompson Seton's books beloved by an ever-growing public, and an immense influence in the development of modern nature study. They interpret for man the world of dumb creatures, and together with their appeal as stories of vivid adventure there goes the stronger appeal of human sympathy, to be responded to by every one that

THICK WAS THE FUR OF FOXES.

The Christy-Longfellow "Evangeline"

Of all the remarkable group of poets that for so many years made Boston the literary Mecca for pilgrims from our own land and from "Outre Mer," Longfellow was the most widely famous. Emerson touched deeper depths of thought; Whittier touched the problems of the nation's life more deeply; Holmes came personally more before the public, but, taking the English speaking world at large, it was Longfellow whose fame overshadowed all the others, because he appealed to humanity at large, he was "understanded of the people." Burns, Beranger, Uhland and Walter Scott are also not among the greatest of the world's poets; but they cheered, taught, comforted and inspired the homes of the world, and their readers can never fail, for love, hope, trial and resignation will always live in store for every child that is born, and who has sung of these as have the poets of the people and the home!

And where has Longfellow sung of love, hope, trial and resignation as he has in "Evangeline"? The story of the lovers of Acadia, with its word pictures in the stirring English hexameters of the rugged shores and stormy winters of Nova Scotia, rests upon a tradition first brought to Longfellow by Hawthorne who saw in it greater possibilities for rhythmic poetry than for prose romance. It was first given to the world in 1847. Among the wild scenery of Acadia, Evangeline lived her love and hope; her days of trial took her through the world in search of Gabriel; and her resignation at last brought the tragic climax in the poorhouse hospital of the steady Quaker City of Philadelphia.

And when art and artist, as well as poetry and poets, had found a home in "the wild land of Hiawatha," what single poem more often inspired pictures than the sorrows of "Evangeline"?

Howard Chandler Christy showed last year how deeply Longfellow could speak to his pencil in the work he did on "The Courtship of Miles Standish." With even truer sympathy with his author has he made the illustrations for "Evangeline" which the Bobbs-Merrill Company have heightened in beauty and effectiveness by the rich, deep colors in which they are printed in their leading holiday book, "The Christy-Longfellow Evangeline."

Christy spends his life in drawing lovers. He has been most successful in drawing the American girl of American fiction for the past ten years, and who has not fallen in love with one, some or all of the self-reliant, independent, intelligent, frank, practical, bright, vivacious, generous, witty, energetic, affectionate, ambitious, modest, versatile and flirtatious girls he has pictured for us in the many novels he has illustrated?

But his work last year showed that not only the up-to-date, always beautiful American girl inspires him. He gave us satisfactory pictures of "Priscilla, the Puritan Maiden," and he has done even better imaginative work in drawing "Gentle Evangeline among the mists of the Almighty Atlantic," whose wanderings, led by love and hope, brought her to meet other men and women of whom Christy also makes most telling portraits.

Author and artist are commended; but this "Christy-Longfellow Evangeline" owes much to its publishers, who have gotten it ready for the season when "recommenced the reign of rest and affection and stillness" in the lonely land of Grand-Pré, but when in the busy life of to-day the same affection prompts to Christmas shopping and bookbuying. They have made a holiday-book that is striking in its typographic attractions. On every page are printed in tint the kine, the fruits, the corn and the pine cones that grew on the land of "the wealthiest farmer of Grand-Pré," also wheels of fortune and cornucopiæ of plenty. Over this is printed the text. The colored illustrations require three and four printings and have had expert printers to bring out their fine effects. The binding is of rich red with a design of a missal of devotion within a heart-shaped wreath of forget-me-nots.

The Second French Empire.

ROYALTY may well be felicitated on inspiring such sincere, unwavering loyalty as that evinced by Dr. Evans, the American dentist, towards the ill-fated Louis Napoleon and Eugénie. It seems a strange freak of fortune that it was an American citizen who succored and protected the Empress of France in her darkest hours when, deserted by subjects and friends, she was a fugitive in her own kingdom. How efficiently and faithfully Dr. Evans discharged his trust has never been fully known until the publication of his memoirs, found after his death in 1897.

DR. THOMAS W. EVANS.

Empowered by the executors of the estate to put them in form for publication, Dr. Edward A. Crane, a life-long friend of Dr. Evans, has selected those portions which refer to the Second French Empire and its fall, and to the escape to England of the Empress. Dr. Crane has succeeded admirably in presenting an orderly and vivid narrative of great national events as well as a picture of court life, in all of which the famous court dentist played a part.

In 1847 Dr. Evans and his wife came to Paris on the invitation of Dr. Brewster, a resident dentist who desired a professional associate. Not long after his arrival he was summoned to attend Prince Louis Napoleon, recently elected president of the French Republic and soon to be declared Napoleon III., Emperor of France. Thus was laid the foundation of a friendship which lasted until the Emperor's death, some twenty-odd years afterwards, and brought the American in close touch with Napoleon III., his court and numerous eminent personages of the time. He was permitted to see the intimate side of the Emperor, rarely shown to outsiders; he studied his character under varied circumstances and was, consequently, able to form an all-round estimate of a man greatly misjudged and harshly condemned. Dr. Evans found him a broad-minded, tolerant man, generous to a fault, magnanimous, and honestly desirous of promoting the best interests of his subjects. Very attractive also is his portrayal of the beautiful and fascinating Eugénie, at all times a devoted wife, loving mother and sincere friend, though sorely criticised oftentimes for the very traits that rendered her so charming.

Those chapters describing Eugénie's flight from Paris after the battle of Sedan, accompanied by Mme. Lebreton, Dr. Evans and Dr. Crane, the discomforts and perils of the journey by carriage to the coast, borne by Eugénie with rare fortitude and courage, read like a novel; and the fiercest republican is constrained to acknowledge that this lovely and gracious lady was never more royal than in her hours of defeat and failure.

The Appletons have given to the volume all the accessories of attractive binding, excellent make-up and most interesting illustrations, including portraits and scenes of places connected with the rulers of the Second French Empire.

THE HERMITAGE.

The True Andrew Jackson.

Of the half dozen great Americans whose names have added lustre to The True Biographies Series none made history so rapidly or so spectacularly as the hero of the latest issue —"The True Andrew Jackson," written by Cyrus Townsend Brady. The J. B. Lippincott Company send out this attractive volume in time to capture the holiday trade, but it is a work that should be included in every library, as should the other volumes of the series, as true and impartial histories of famous Americans, often the subject of misrepresentation and exaggeration. More lives and sketches are said to have been written of Andrew Jackson, than of Washington or Lincoln, and they are all as varied in their standpoint as they are many in numbers. Mr. Brady has been studying the career of our seventh President for many years, scarcely leaving a volume unopened, or a sketch unread, that could throw light upon his many-sided personality and the many contradictory estimates of it. That he has sifted carefully many human documents his thoughtful narrative testifies. It is a notable gathering together of evidence in the way of opinions and anecdotes traced back to authentic sources, offering conclusive proof of every point he desires to sustain.

Unlike many of Jackson's former biographers, Mr. Brady has no apologies to offer for him. He says: "I began the study of Jackson with no predisposition to admire him. He was not one of my early heroes—not politically or personally, that is. I have carefully examined his career and character from the point of view of friend and enemy, and I have become persuaded that he is one of the three great Presidents in our history, and that, although he stands below both of them, as a personality he is quite worthy of being mentioned in the same breath with George Washington and Abraham Lincoln."

This is the key-note of the work, the man's sincere and strong personality and ardent love of country, qualities in a period that boasted of such figures as those of Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, Thomas H. Benton, John Quincy Adams, John C. Calhoun and Martin Van Buren, Jackson's superiors in education, in culture and in abilities of various kinds, that made him the idol of the plain people, who twice elected him President of the United States. "What I have done was for my country," is Jackson's own apology for his shortcomings and should stand as his epitaph.

That the virtues of Andrew Jackson exceeded his faults is the deduction Mr. Brady logically reaches in all of the eighteen chapters into which he has divided his book. Beginning with his family and early life, he represents him as lawyer, planter, storekeeper, sportsman and soldier; three chapters are devoted to his highly creditable services in the Mexican and Indian wars; his personal appearance, manners, and the stories of "Jacksonian vulgarity" are threshed out in another chapter; "his relations with his mother and wife," and his love of children speak well for the beauty and purity of his home life; "the affair of Mrs. Eaton" exploits gossip of long standing, that became a national affair, around the person of the wife of a cabinet minister; his pugnacity and patriotism, duels and quarrels, his nullification measure, his war on the Second Bank of the United States, all have the searchlight of truth turned upon them, the result being probably the first unbiased portraiture we have had of the brave hero of the battle of New Orleans, and of the man who defeated Henry Clay.

An extended chronology of Jackson's life, compiled by the author, is prefixed to the volume, which the reader will find of great value. An appendix embraces papers of historical importance mentioned in the text. The illustrations are as generously placed as in the biographies of William Penn, Henry Clay, Franklin, Lincoln, Jefferson and Washington, and drawn from equally authentic sources, many being rare portraits. Mr. Brady's vivid style makes this an exceptionally readable biography.

ANDREW JACKSON AT NEW ORLEANS.

From "The Shakespeare Story Book." A. S. Barnes & Co.

"AND YOUR EXPERIENCE MAKES YOU SAD?" QUOTH ROSALIND.

The Shakespeare Story Book.

"TELL me a story," is one of the first demands of childhood. More powerfully than we can realize are a child's taste and character influenced by the reply to this teasing, pleading question. For the answer may give a background of familiarity with the treasures of imagination, literature, and history, or it may pile up merely a heap of false and crude impressions of the common round of life. There can be only a depth of pity for the children who have never listened wide-eyed and enthralled to brave tales of romance and adventure, or caught the clear notes of the horns of Elfland blowing across enchanted ground; to whom such names as Camelot, Roland, Baldur the Beautiful, Haroun Al Raschid are meaningless. They have been deprived of their full share of the common literary heritage of the world. There is no later study of literature that can make up for the lack of this early association and familiarity. This is particularly true as regards a knowledge and love of Shakespeare. Mary Cowden Clarke has said that with no other books than the Bible and Shakespeare a poor girl may become a cultured gentlewoman and a poor boy a man of character and attainments; and it is unquestionable that childhood acquaintance with the characters, plots and beauties of Shakespeare's plays is one of the strongest factors in the later development of literary taste and personal character.

From "The Shakespeare Story Book" A. S. Barnes & Co.

It was almost one hundred years ago—in 1807—that Charles and Mary Lamb's volume of "Tales from Shakespeare Designed for Young Persons" was published, presenting in simple matter-of-fact narrative the plots of fourteen of the comedies and six of the tragedies. They have been beloved by successive generations of children, and will doubtless hold their own for generations to come, despite many omissions of important detail—as, for instance the casket scene in "Merchant of Venice"—and a somewhat bald descriptive manner. Now another endeavor has been made in this same field, in "The Shakespeare Story Book," written by Mary MacLeod, delightfully illustrated by Gordon Browne and published by A. S. Barnes & Co. as a charming holiday volume of pale blue, with Nick Bottom and his attendant sprites frolicking on the cover. Sidney Lee, the eminent Shakespearian scholar, has written an introduction, setting forth the value and justification of this endeavor to supply young people with a fuller and more accurate rendering of Shakespeare's plots than has been heretofore available. But the stories themselves are their best justification. Miss MacLeod has chosen sixteen: "The Tempest," "Two Gentlemen of Verona," "Much Ado About Nothing," "Midsummer Nights' Dream," "Merchant of Venice," "As You Like It," "Taming of the Shrew." "Twelfth Night," "Romeo and Juliet," "Macbeth," "Hamlet," "King Lear," "Othello," "Cymbeline," "The Winter's Tale," and "Comedy of Errors." In the telling of each the plot is set forth with clearness and precision, and mainly by means of vivacious dialogue directly from the text. The stories are broken practically into chapter divisions, giving greater vitality; the beautiful songs are there in full; and the result is remarkable in its mingling of textual accuracy, simplicity, and vivacity.

Aside from its value as an introduction to the great treasure house of English literature the volume has the abiding charm of good story-telling. Take the rendering of "The Tempest," which opens with the chapter heading "The Magician's Isle"—in its first sentence, "There was once a lonely island far away in the midst of a wide sea," it touches the very note of enchantment and romance, in a way to charm the childish soul, and each successive page allures in the same way. "Macbeth" opens with a few words of introduction, setting the historical period. But we plunge into the tale itself, with the first sentence—"It was a wild night on a desolate heath near Forres"—which imparts a delightful "creepiness" that few children could resist.

Gordon Browne's many illustrations are in full sympathy with the text, and it is apparent that writer and artist have worked together in most effective harmony. "The Shakespeare Story Book" deserves to take its place among the treasures of childhood, appealing directly to children themselves; giving to mothers, fathers, and "big sisters" material from which to satisfy the clamor of their small audience for "another story;" and at the same time serving as a key to open and make dearer in later years the golden casket of Shakespeare's genius.

A Little Princess.

"If I am a princess in rags and tatters I can be a princess inside. It would be easy to be a princess if I am dressed in cloth of gold, but it is a great deal more of a triumph to be one all the time when no one knows it," thus little Sara Crewe lectured herself in her dark, cold garret when she was hungry, neglected and aching with longing for the handsome father who, some years before, had left her in a London boarding-school before he sailed for India.

You know the story, you mothers and fathers, you boys and girls, big and little, of this soldier's daughter, indulged, petted, showered with all that money could buy, who, when she was eleven years old, heard that her father was dead, that all his fortune was lost in diamond-mine investments, and that she herself, instead of being the favored "parlor-boarder," must teach the younger children, run errands and help the servants in order to be kept at all in Miss Minchin's boarding-school. But Sara's imagination turned all the hard circumstances of her life into a story—"You are a story—I am a story, Miss Minchin is a story;" and she and Emily, her doll, Melchisedec, the rat, forlorn Becky, the scullery-maid, and two of the boarding-school children lived in a magic world created by Sara's vivid fancy, where cold and loneliness and ill-treatment did not exist and where Sara herself reigned supreme as the Little Princess.

So long ago that the boys and girls of fifteen can not remember it, there appeared in the pages of St. Nicholas the first history of Sara Crewe. Presently the story was published in book form; and, then, some two or three years back, Mrs. Burnett adapted it for stage presentation as "A Little Princess." Month after month the play drew crowded houses, made up largely of children, following with breathless interest the misfortune and good fortune of this little garret princess.

How they cried over Sara's hard life! How they sympathized with her when she had only shabby dresses to wear, only scraps to eat, and no fire to warm her garret! How they pitied her for all the scoldings she received, and admired her quiet bravery! And then, when the wonderful presents began mysteriously to appear in her room, how they rejoiced! And how supremely satisfied all the children, and the "grown-ups," too, felt when the gentleman from India was introduced and turned her again into a veritable Little Princess.

During all these years the story has been growing because, as Mrs. Burnett explains, a great deal more had happened at Miss Minchin's than she first had time to find out. For instance, Mrs. Burnett has discovered at the school two little girls, named Ermengarde and Lottie, who did not come at all into the first story of "Sara Crewe." Melchisedec and Becky, the scullery-maid, have also introduced themselves; so, really, there was nothing for Mrs. Burnett to do but write Sara Crewe's story all over again, letting all these new characters appear in the book as they did in Sara's room up near the chimney-pots.

Therefore the whole of the story of "A Little Princess," with all the things and people who had been left out put into it, and "pages and pages of things which had happened that had never been put even into the play," is now offered by the Charles Scribner's Sons to the young folks all over the land. Many of them have known and loved Sara Crewe in years past; but to the younger brothers and sisters she is, perhaps, a stranger, waiting to be presented this Christmas-tide.

They will find her as pictured by Ethel Franklin Betts, a big-eyed child with a tangle of dark hair and a pathetic little face full of love for the weak and unhappy. Many full-page illustrations, reproduced in softly blended colors, embellish the volume which is of proper story-book shape and size, enclosed in pretty covers, whereon is represented the Little Princess with her doll cuddled in her arms and the sparrows fluttering around her as they used to do in the attic days when she divided her bread crusts with them and envied them their freedom.

ANGEL WITH THE LUTE—AFTER CARPACCIO.

Other Holiday Gift-Books.

THE preceding pages describe and illustrate in detail several of the most notable holiday books. The following is a more complete descriptive summary, covering the general field, and noting the new books and some of the standards of the several publishers, who are arranged in alphabetical order. To them we are indebted for the many illustrations which adorn these pages and suggest more fully the books of the year.

HENRY ALTEMUS COMPANY always give their best strength to books for young people. This year, however, they have two books that appeal to people who have learned some lessons in the school of life. Both are by Minna Thomas Antrim. In "Sweethearts and Beaux" she has written what may be called a mocking comedy, realistic and ironical, which presents some facts about women and men in telling manner; and with "At the Sign of the Golden Calf" she offers an arraignment of modern society, in which she says some pretty hard things, laying bare some hidden motives and wording some unpalatable facts in rather caustic manner. But with it all Miss Antrim lets "mercy temper justice," and her books will please at sight in their pretty dresses of ooze calf.

AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY, Philadelphia, have two novels of decided interest, both beautified with unusually pretty pictures. "Phyllis Burton," by Mrs. S. R. Graham Clark, deals with the life of an average New England village, in which the doctor's home is the scene and "Phil," her sister and cousin are the chief actors. The book is wholesome and full of humor. "The Appointed Way," by "Hope Daring," a pseudonym for Anna Johnson, tells a tale of the Seventh Day Adventists, a sect who believe that Christ will again appear on earth and that only those will be saved that hold the peculiar tenet of the sect. A magnetic preacher of the doctrines gains a great ascendancy over the father of a happy little family, and the consequences change the lives of all. A pretty town of western New York is the scene. Of more serious nature is "Christianity in Modern Japan," by Ernest W. Clement, principal of the Duncan Baptist Academy, Tokio, Japan, who gives a bird's-eye view of the work of missionaries in Japan and a very useful outline of the books, pamphlets and magazines, where more exhaustive information may be obtained. The critical Nation has pronounced that "in literary proportion and breadth of view, and in keenness of insight, this book is a model." It specially praises its "cool, judicial temper." "The Higher Criticism Cross-Examined," by Fred D. Storey, who for years has been connected with the Appellate Department of the Supreme Court of New York, gives a very thorough investigation of the various positions of the higher criticism and controverts them with clearness of statement and felicity of expression.

D. APPLETON & COMPANY have provided liberally for the holidays in almost every line of literature. A very interesting book they have is "The Second Empire," by Dr. Thomas W. Evans, edited by Dr. E. A. Crane, a work that tells of the escape of Empress Eugenie from Paris after Sedan, in which she was aided by the author who was an American dentist. This publication has been fully described already. American history has a valuable contribution in "The Journal of Benjamin Henry Latrobe," architect of our greatest public building, the capitol at Washington, the personal friend of the first President of the United States, a man of great intellectual attainments, a soldier, architect, civil engineer, philosopher, artist, humorist, poet and naturalist. He travelled in the United States from 1796 to 1820, and this volume is composed of his notes and sketches, copiously illustrated with reproductions of the original drawings of the author, one of which is an original sketch of Washington taken at Mount Vernon when he was visiting the great President. Albert J. Beveridge, U. S. Senator from Indiana, has written a book that should go into every household where there is a son and a mother, under the title "The Young Man and the World." In it the young senator, just thirty-six, tells his young countrymen how he was plowboy at 12, logger at 14, graduated from De Pauw College at 23, plainsman, law clerk, lawyer, poor and without a pull, and by sheer pluck and hard work was thought fit to hold the great office of U. S. Senator at 36, where his steady, conservative work is commanding the admiration and respect of his older colleagues. Fiction is a specially rich field to draw from in the Appleton provision. Robert W. Chambers has two masterpieces, one entitled "The Reckoning," the other "Iola," as totally different in character as can well be imagined. "The Reckoning" is the fourth of the series of novels concerning early American history and is as good, if not better, than the others; while "Iola" is joyous, delicious satire, delightfully illustrated with borders, head and tail pieces and thumb-nail sketches by Arthur E. Becker, and has also illustrations in color by J. C. Leyendecker and Karl Anderson, all of which catch the abounding indescribable charm of this story of an "utterly too, too" father of eight daughters, all named for butterflies, who joked in Greek and Latin and impressed themselves upon their age. It is a most happy travesty of the high culture of the hour and of Elbert Hubbard's theories of art. Lloyd Osbourne also appeals to happy spirits in "Baby Bullet" who is an "orphan automobile." What that means you must read the humorous love-story to discover, and you will have lots of fun while you are wandering with the dear old maid, the American heiress, the big American hero and the disgruntled French "chauffeur" along the beautiful English country roads. "The Giants," by Mrs. Tremont Older, is a big, strong, exciting and true story of the Oil Trust; "The Carlyles," by Mrs. Burton Harrison, is laid in Richmond during the early stormy Reconstruction days after the Civil War. "Purple and Fine Linen," by Emily Post, and "The Game and the Candle," by Frances Davidge, give a startling picture of Manhattan's "best society"; and "Outside the Law," by James Barnes, tells a fine, dramatic detective story. "The Russo-Japanese War" is the motive in "At the Emperor's Wish," by Oscar King Davis; and the Chinese-Japanese war that preceded, furnishes the background for "The Staircase of Surprise," by Frances A. Mathews. Miriam Michelson has followed "In the Bishop's Carriage" with "A Yellow Journalist," in which she betrays some startling secrets of the trade; John Oliver Hobbes in "The Flute of Pan" has written a kind of "Graustark" story, with all her fine literary art; Max Pemberton's "The Hundred Days" tells of wild days in Paris and the Battle of Waterloo; and one of the finest books on the list is "Patricia, a Mother." Holiday gift books of luxurious manufacture have been made of the ever popular stories—Parker's "Seats of the Mighty," and "Nancy Stair." Holiday attractions have also been bestowed upon Kipling's poems. "The Seven Seas," but we all know that the swing and the go and the bigness of Kipling will carry "The Seven Seas" farther than all de luxe accessories.

BAKER & TAYLOR CO. offer a true holiday book in their attractive edition of Dickens's ever-popular "A Christmas Carol" and the "Cricket on the Hearth," with a sympathetic introduction and illustrations in color and line by George Alfred Williams. Two books appealing to all art students are "The Appreciation of Pictures," by Russell Sturgis; and "The Impressions of Japanese Architecture and the Allied Arts," by Ralph Adams Cram. Mr. Sturgis's book is a companion volume to his "How to Judge Architecture;" and "The Appreciation of Sculpture." The new volume deals historically with pictures and furnishes a basis for a thorough understanding of them. The large number of paintings reproduced in the work, many of them rare and unusual, add greatly to its value, and as far as text goes probably no man is better fitted than Russell Sturgis, who is acknowledged America's foremost critic of the arts. Ralph Adams Cram also easily holds his place among the leading architects of the United States. He makes clear that Japanese architecture must be studied with knowledge of the great difference between the characteristics of the Far Eastern and the Far Western races, and then he gives an exhaustive account of world-renowned buildings and of the ideas and events of which they are the lasting and visible proof. Everything Japanese is interesting the world at the moment, and this beautifully illustrated book will be of enduring worth to all serious students of the history and art of this wonderfully progressive nation which rests its newest achievements upon its far-reaching ancient history. Little gifts to serious friends may be made of the new paper editions of Josiah Strong's popular moral appeals, entitled "The Next Great Awakening" and "The Times and Young Men;" and for older people who remember the life so cleverly described there can be no more appropriate gift than "When You Were a Boy," by Edwin L. Sabin, with 50 illustrations by Frederic Dorr Steele, showing boy-life as these older readers lived it. Richard Le Gallienne's "Romances of Old France," a companion to his "Old Love Stories Retold," once again tells the famous Troubadour romances, and is artistically illustrated and decorated in color. For those who love a good story beyond all else there is a novel by a new writer, Margaret P. Montague, called "The Poet, Miss Kate and I." In the form of a diary the "I," a young girl living amidst the most beautiful scenery of the Alleghany Mountains, tells of her close companionship with "Miss Kate," a little chestnut mare, until together they met "the poet," who became the guiding influence of "I's" life.

A. S. Barnes & Co. have secured a prize in "The Shakespeare Story Book," by Mary MacLeod, and an introduction by Sidney Lee, surely an unimpeachable authority, who recommends the author's work as very well done. This work is fully noticed in our front pages. Another Shakespeare book of great interest on the Barnes list is Tudor Jenks's delightful picture given through "In the Days of Shakespeare," also full of good illustrations. All collectors of American literature must have the four-volume India Paper edition of "The Works of Edgar Allan Poe," and it will be more than welcome to all who can appreciate the work of this most distinctively original of all American writers. Also appealing specially to American students of history are two new volumes in the excellent Trail Makers Series: "Voyages and Explorations of Samuel de Champlain," narrated by himself, translated by Annie Nettleton Bourne, with introduction to the two volumes by Edward Gaylord Bourne; "The Journeys of La Salle and His Companions, 1668-1687, as Related by Himself and His Followers," with introduction by Professor Isaac J. Cox; "Life in the Eighteenth Century," by George Cary Eggleston with a comparative summary of historical events by Professor Herman V. Ames, a fine index and many illustrations. Mr. Eggleston sketches the building and furnishing of the more luxurious homes in Virginia and in the Northern cities. He outlines the customs of social life and the growth of trade and industry. While political and military facts are set down in their order the main purpose of the book is to give in convenient form an interesting story of life, manners and customs during the colonial period from 1700 to the outbreak of the revolution. Every insurance man, be he "fire" or "life," will be very grateful for Miles Menander Dawson's "The Business of Life Insurance." The author is one of the most eminent actuaries and insurance experts in this country, and has written this practical, comprehensive and much-needed book for the special use of the great public composed of persons nearly all of whom purchase insurance on their lives. The fiction published this year by this house has been of a high order of merit. "The Cherry Ribband," by S. R. Crockett, makes direct appeal to all who contributed to make "The Lilac Sunbonnet" a record-making book; "Squire Phin," by Holman F. Day, is a treasure house of the humor and oddity of "Down East," which has its social comedies and little social comedies and family dramas if not tragedies as well as the largest cities; "The Heart of a Girl," by Ruth Kimball Gardiner, is a fine study of a clever, introspective, intense girl who begins life in Illinois, then spends years in Dakota and Nebraska "boom" towns; "Lodgings in Town," by Henry Arthur, author of "An Island Cabin" and "The House in the Woods," completes the trilogy of books that tell what the author passed through whilst seeking an ideal form of existence far from our great modern rush, and it is filled with the curious characteristics of city living, especially in the unique lodging life of New York City; "The Mountain of Fears," by Henry C. Rowland, tells the strange adventures of Dr. Leyden as collector, world traveller, scientist, adventurer, traveller, and keenest of observers of men and things, and represents story telling of singular dramatic power; and Charles Battell Loomis, always cheery and full of happy news, tells of "Minerva's Manœuvres," Minerva being a colored cook whom a young couple took with them to the country where they wished to "return to nature," and who disliked nature and quiet above all things, and kept her mistress constantly bribing and conciliating her to make her threaten less frequently that she must go right back to New York.

BENZIGER BROTHERS, New York, have reading matter specially designed for Catholic readers, and it is well to know of such books, so that we may be sure that we give nothing that can in any way hurt a member of that church, as we might if we offer him a Protestant view of life or religion. There are several works of fiction ready considered specially suitable for young girls: "Out of Bondage," by Martin Holt; "The Children of Cupa," by Mary E. Mannix; "For the White Rose," by Katharine Tynan Hinkson; "The Dollar Hunt," translated from the French by E. G. Martin; and "The Violin Maker," translated from the German original of Otto v. Schacking, by Sara Trainer Smith. There is also a book of excellent short stories entitled "Where the Road Led, and Other Stories," by such well-known authors as Anna T. Sadlier, Maurice F. Eagan, Alice Richardson, Jerome Harte and several others. In books of devotion choice may be made of "Theory and Practice of the Confessional," by Dr. Caspar E. Shieler; 'Mary, the Queen;" "St. Francis of Assisi, Social Reformer," by Rev. Leo L. Dubois; and a new edition of "Meditations on the Passion of Our Lord," by a Passionist Father.

BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY have a new Christy-Longfellow book this year devoted to "Evangeline," certainly a fitting heroine to stand with Priscilla the Puritan of last year's Christy-Longfellow's "Courtship of Miles Standish." The "Evangeline" has already been fully described in our front pages. Other pretty volumes of gift-book poetry are "Songs o' Cheer," by James Whitcomb Riley, with over 100 Hoosier pictures in color and black and white by Will Vawter, another volume of Riley's poems of gladness, content and consolation, which have walked so straight into the hearts of the American people, and which will scatter smiles and laughter, as it is a deadly enemy of the blues; and "Banjo Talks," by Anne Virginia Culbertson, who is a perfect master of negro dialect, and whose merry, careless rhythmical singing and dancing tunes are illustrated with many photographs of actual plantation scenes. Then comes gift-book fiction, a new order of book classification, but really very happily named Of such is "The House of a Thousand Candles," by Meredith Nicholson, author of "The Main Chance," who tells a story of a globe trotter who by his grandfather's will was forced to spend one whole year in a candle-lighted palace by an Indiana lake. If he left his place of exile his inheritance would revert to a beautiful girl; if he married this girl the estate would go to charity. Truly a promising plot which has inspired Howard Chandler Christy to make some fine pictures, which are printed in rich colors, and the book in its blue cover, with red title and many candles, looks a holiday book of the real kind. "The Social Secretary," by David Graham Phillips, appears in a dress so beautiful that she herself would give it approval. She taught a family in high place in Washington how to fittingly occupy that place, and her story is a delightful one. In Harold MacGrath's "Hearts and Masks" the publishers have found a little gem, and they have mounted it with fine taste and set it off with twelve delicate Frenchy illustrations in color and a very fetching cover design by Harrison Fisher. The author of the great success, "The Man on the Box," has written another gay, rollicking story of a masquerade in which the hero took an uninvited part and got out of many troubles into good old-fashioned love for life all in twelve hours. A little comedy of country manners is "Seffy," a story of Pennsylvania Germans by John Luther Long, whose fine work in "Madame Butterfly" has been outdone in this later story of free and genial humor and touching pathos. "Seffy" has been made "gift-fiction" by the illustrations of C. D. Williams and the decorations in color of Earl Stetson Crawford. Just as sure to please, though not quite dressed up enough externally for holiday festivities, are "The Deluge," by David Graham Phillips, a tale of American finance sure to please fathers and brothers; and "The Man of the Hour," Octave Thanet's great story of the descendant of a hard-headed American captain of industry and finance and a high-strung Russian princess with anarchistic sympathies, which has all the qualities of a fine work of fiction, a noble motive, an imaginative plot and pure literary style. Other stories to be called for and looked at when buying for friends that care for fiction are 'Heart's Haven," by Katharine Evans Blake; "The Storm Signal," by Gustave Frederick Mertins; "The Best Policy," by Elliott Flower; and "Pipe-Town Sandy," by John Philip Sousa," who has put all the brilliancy, dash and "go" with which he leads an orchestra into his story of East Washington in the sixties before the echoes of the great war had quite died away. Besides all these fine things in song and fiction this house provides some good presents for those of steadier age and more thoughtful turn. Marion Harland's book of "Everyday Etiquette" is just the thing to give a young girl who will take things said by others so much better than what mother tries to teach her; and Margaret E. Sangster's "Radiant Motherhood" might open the eyes of some friend who thinks of her children as only a trouble. Full of suggestions for sensible young men is Orison Swett Marden's "Choosing a Career;" and "Letters of Labor and Love," by Samuel M. Jones.

BRENTANO'S appeal to people of large culture and cosmopolitan liberality in their provision for Christmas purchasers. Of course this special class of society is at present discussing Bernard Shaw and his purpose, his standing in the literary and dramatic world and his future among the writers of this generation. Brentano's have on their list "The Irrational Knot," a novel Shaw wrote at the age of twenty-five, dealing with the problem of marriage in society of every class. He has recently looked this over and written one of his excellent prefaces, in which he compares his work with that of Ibsen and shows how they both have earnest purpose and a plan of work for humanity; and "Man and Superman," with text entirely unabridged, is brought out in a pretty edition of this comedy and philosophy. Oscar Wilde, who also needs a cultured audience, is represented by "Intentions," containing four of his most characteristic essays: "The Decay of Lying," "Pen, Pencil and Poison," "The Critic as Artist," and "The Truth of Masks." Agreeable, gossipy reading are the "Letters from Catalonia," by Rowland Thirlmere, containing a new and absolutely authentic portrait of Alphonso XIII. and two colored frontispieces in the two volumes; and Théophile Gautier's "Italy," with twenty-seven photogravures by Daniel B. Vermilye. A series of small pocket-size volumes, carefully selected and printed from the wise and witty words of the great writers of all countries is called the Wisdom Series. In it are to be had "Polonius: a collection of wise saws and modern instances," "The Wisdom of Robert Louis Stevenson," and "The Wisdom of Oscar Wilde." A most timely book is "Russia in Revolution," by G. H. Perris, with photogravure frontispiece of Stepniak and eighteen other illustrations. For musical friends consult the Music of the Masters series, edited by Wakeling Dry. The volumes now ready are "Wagner," "Beethoven" and "Tchaikovski." For those who like a good English novel "The Rose of Life," by M. E. Braddon, will make a desirable present. The scene shifts between London and the Riviera and five characters work the plot: a poet, his adoring wife, a woman of the world, the daughter she is unfit to protect and the man who is the lover.

H. M. CALDWELL Co. make holiday gift books and make them very attractive always. This year they are quite up to their usual average of books for every friend of every taste. "The Value of Courage," edited by the late Frederic Lawrence Knowles, a representative collection of prose and verse extracts which may be described as a specific for worry, fear, depression of spirits and all forms of cowardice, physical, moral and spiritual; and there is another equally pretty book entitled "The Value of Simplicity," with selections chosen by Mary M. Barrows whose book on "The Value of Cheerfulness" was so popular last season. Both these books are printed on cameo buff paper in two colors, are bound in silk moire and white vellum cloth and boxed; and they also appear in a de luxe dress of full maroon suede, silk lined, and have besides a medium costume of full limp chamois, satin lined. A very dainty thing is made of Dickens' "Christmas Carol," with photogravure frontispiece and twelve half-tone illustrations, which is shaped like a holy bell and put in fancy binding, and two more shape books that will take are "Automobilia," by Charles Welsh, with an interesting article on the evolution of the automobile, printed on antique buff paper in two colors; and "Love's Garland," by the same compiler, shaped like a ring, containing an admirable collection of short poems on love, interspersed with the poesies anciently written on lovers' rings and bracelets. Fourteen titles have been added to the Red Letter Library, amongst which are selected poems by Cowper, Tennyson, Byron, Herbert, Johnson, Coleridge, Milton, Longfellow, etc., with introductions by specially capable talent. These are exquisite bits of bookmaking and may be had in full limp leather, or in the Bibelot edition in full embossed calf with full gilt edges. Many new titles have come into the Remarque edition of Literary Masterpieces and there can be no prettier way of presenting "Atala," "The Gold Bug," "Paul and Virginia," "Undine" and many other of the little gems the world has loved for so many years. This house also puts standard works into the Alcazar Classics, the Paragon Series, the Sesame Classics and many, many more of the forms of distinctive beauty that these names stand for. For men, always so hard to choose for, this house has made most successful efforts. On their list are "In Bohemia," by James Clarence Harvey with dainty illustrations by Mucha, Hy. Myer, Outcault and others, which may also be had in the Parfait edition, superbly bound in polka dot silk in a scarlet covered box matching binding; "The Log of the Water Wagon," a graphic account of a cruise aboard that unpopular craft, by Bert Leston Taylor and W. C. Gibson, illustrated by M. L. Glackens; the smoker's own book of poetry, a captivating little volume of verse, compiled by Joseph Knight, the new book in the Smokers' Library which already holds the great favorites—"Tobacco in Song and Story," "My Lady Nicotine," and "Tobacco Leaves." The four books of this little library are put up in a cedar box with labels and marks as on a cigar box and would make a very suitable gift for a man in a whist or euchre contest. Year by year this house turns out very popular holiday gift books.

CENTURY COMPANY always appeals to people of culture and educated taste, and this year it makes them hesitate long what they shall take if they can only have one of three of the most important books provided. Charles H. Caffin's "How to Study Pictures" will perhaps commend itself to the largest public as a giftbook and a full description of this invaluable work for art lovers, students and travellers has already been given in our front pages. The other two are "Versailles and the Court Under Louis XIV.," by James Eugene Farmer; and "With the Empress Dowager," by Katharine Carl. The work on Versailles is at once historically accurate and chronologically complete, and presents in a wonderful way the story of the people and events that reflected the glory and grandeur of the Grand Monarch and made of his palace and its environment the very sublimation of earthly pomp. Perhaps the most brilliant court Europe has ever seen—certainly the most lavish—nothing in history is quite like this picture of nobles and courtiers parading and intriguing in and out of Versailles at the end of the seventeenth century. The palace, the park, the king, the court are all minutely word-pictured by an expert hand and upwards of seventy-five illustrations, printed in the best style of Century Company, make still more clear a historical phenomenon at which all the world wonders. The author is a graduate of Yale and at present Master of History and English Literature at St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H. "With the Empress Dowager," the simple narrative of an American woman's sojourn in China, reads like one's childish dreams of enchantment, though like most magical experiences, it came about simply enough. Miss Carl was visiting in Shanghai in April, 1903, when, through the influence of Mrs. Conger, wife of the United States Minister, she was invited to meet the Empress Dowager and begin work on a portrait. The one short sitting first granted led to the painting of four portraits and to Miss Carl's becoming a guest at the Chinese Court for eleven months, a guest who saw the Dowager Empress daily and shared in every festival and function of the court. It is said that since Marco Polo Miss Carl has been the first staying guest in the palace of a Chinese sovereign. Miss Carl describes the daily life of the Chinese Court, its gay parties, its jealousies and its tragedies, and she makes her readers realize the wonderful ruler of 300,000,000 of people—the most wonderful woman in the world to-day. The portrait first painted was for the St. Louis Exposition last year. The illustrations add much to the book. They are both from photographs and from sketches made by Miss Carl, sketches which make one feel well acquainted with the wonderful Tze-Shi and her court. A treasure to put in the hands of every voting American is the "Autobiography of Andrew D. White," a living, breathing, inspiring record, not alone of a life which has been a powerful factor for good in American growth and progress, but of the people and events which have shaped American history and thought in the last half century. Mr. White has led a life filled to overflowing with active usefulness in many causes—education, politics, statecraft, diplomacy and literature, and he has written a sane, modest, entertaining story of his noble and really great career. A dainty gift to a lover of fine bookmaking may always be chosen from the Thumb-Nail Series, which every year brings a trio of world-approved works to set among their peers already enrolled. This year arrive Dickens's "The Chimes," with frontispiece in green by Relyea; "Washington," containing the principal state papers of Washington, including his farewell address, with introduction on the character of Washington, taken from Lecky's "Eighteenth Century England," and "Sonnets from the Portuguese," with three poems of Robert Browning and a 50-page introduction by Richard Watson Gilder, telling once more of the ideal marriage of these two great poets. Remarkably fine fiction is also on the Century Co.'s list. Dr. S. Weir Mitchell's name "leads all the rest." His powerful story of "Constance Trescott" tells the tale of a woman's vendetta, and presents in the young wife one of the most impressive and individual characters in recent fiction, and shows a striking grasp of the conditions which followed the Civil War. But there are several more for which our lists elsewhere must be consulted. And the books of our President must not be overlooked, This house has "The Strenuous Life," "Hero Tales from American History," and "Ranch Life and the Hunting Trail."

C. M. Clark Publishing Company, Boston, have a very promising book in "Around the World in Ninety Days," by Frederick Chamberlin, the well-known Boston lawyer, who describes a tour of three months he was obliged to take, he having been sent quite unexpectedly to the Philippines upon a secret mission. The work has upwards of 300 illustrations, chiefly from snapshots taken by the author, of native life in Hawaii, China, Ceylon, Africa, Arabia, Italy and the Philippines. There is great historical value to much of Mr. Chamberlin's material and he gives facts about Queen Liliuokalani that no other white man has ever been able to get at. There is also a chapter on Aguinaldo that is of great interest, as is the account of Mount Vesuvius which the writer saw in full eruption. The book is gotten out as a handsome gift-book and gives a very remarkable showing of what can be accomplished in three months. Together with Nathan J. Coffee, Lydia Ann Jocelyn has written "Lords of the Soil," which gives a very realistic picture of early life in America among the Indians and Colonial settlers; "The Man from Maine," by Frank Carlos Griffith, who tells of a man who did not know what golf was, but after he had been a little while in New York City was able to hoodwink the wiliest of the men who tried to trade upon his inexperience; and there is another novel by James Ball Naylor, whose "Ralph Marlowe" touched the 100,000 mark. The new story is called "The Kentuckian."

THE WILLIAM COLLINS COMPANY have several editions of Shakespeare, and Shakespeare never comes amiss as a Christmas gift. "The Complete Shakespeare" may be had in one volume, on ordinary and on India paper; in the latter style less than one inch in thickness, with sixty-five illustrations and gotten up in various styles of binding from artistic cloth to rich full morocco; "The Gem Shakespeare" is a six volume set, printed on India paper in large type, with 217 illustrations, also bound in cloth or full crushed morocco; and "The Stage Shakespeare" is in forty volumes, one to each play, with 300 illustrations to the set. In paste grain morocco this makes a very dainty set of Shakespeare and a very luxurious gift. Bibles also are among the most popular of presents, and this house controls Collins' Clear Type Press Bibles in all sizes, with excellent type and artistic bindings of every kind and description. Twenty-four of the most famous novels of the English language are also ready to give away in the Handy Pocket Novel series.

T. Y. CROWELL & Co. have a novelty this season, an original book sure to please every devotee of the motor car who has turned the wheel and felt the rhythmic chug-chug of the engine, or has perchance reclined upon his back in the dust of the roadside peering up into the cranks and pistons and wondering why the wheels do not go round; and equally sure to please the other fellow, the one beset by plunging horse, squawking horn, choking dust or the lingering odor of gasoline. Its name is "Auto Fun" and it has been drawn from the witty pages of Life and shows the merry jibes and jests of such artists as Gibson, Kemble, Cushing, Bayard Jones, C. F. Taylor, Read and a score of lesser lights, equally fortunate in their drawings and skits about the all pervading automobile. The illustrations are reproduced full-page size and show to great advantage, handsomely printed and bound in original style. An ideal gift because of its novelty and attractiveness is Crowell's Miniature edition of "Irving's Selected Works," a set of books comprising "The Sketch-Book," "Christmas Sketches," "The Alhambra," "Bracebridge Hall" and "Tales of a Traveller," printed on fine India paper and bound in limp ooze leather, all fitted into a case that can be slipped into one's pocket. The type is anything but microscopic. It is of bold face and well leaded in its 1½ x 2½ inch dimensions, easy to read and restful to the eye. Information and entertainment are blended enjoyably in Mrs. Sara K. Bolton's "Famous American Authors," covering Emerson, Hawthorne, Longfellow, Whittier, Holmes and Lowell, with portraits and scenes printed in two colors; and Gustav Kobbé's "The Loves of Great Composers," telling the romances of Mozart, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Schumann, Chopin, Liszt and Wagner, with illustrations also printed in tint and done up in art leather with gilt top and neatly boxed. The several thousand readers of Oliver Huckel's "Parsifal" will be glad to hear that he has done the same fine work for "Lohengrin," the son of Parsifal, giving a good English literary setting of the drama and interpreting the stage scenes of Wagner's opera in a real and vivid way. In our rushing, "strenuous" life it is well to pause and weigh well such books as "The Happy Life," in which the venerable president of Harvard University makes his powerful plea for simplicity of living; "The Inward Life," by Amory H. Bradford, who explains "there is in every man light sufficient to disclose all the truth that is needed for the purpose of life;" "When the Song Begins," by Dr. J. R. Miller, brimming over with the constant, helpful optimism of the well-beloved author; and "Vital Questions," by Dr. Henry Dwight Chapin, wholesome, suggestive talks on "Inequality," "Poetry," "The Child," "Health," "Education," "Success" and other questions that come up continually to be settled for society and for the individual. For any girl contemplating marriage before another year goes round a fitting, dainty gift is "The Diary of a Bride," full of humor and philosophy as well as of lists of pretty things, and giving an account of the first year of housekeeping and home-making that teaches many needed lessons in a very happy way. "The Latin Poets," an anthology by Nathan Haskell Dole, covers the whole of Roman literature from Plautus and Terence to Juvenal and Lucan, and generous selections are given from all the greatest poets in translations also made by the greatest English poets. This house makes a specialty of books to give as presents, and gets up all the favorite literature of the world each year in newer and more tempting shape. The Grolier Booklets in flexible silk include such treasures as "Elegy in a Country Churchyard," "Marjorie Fleming," "Enoch Arden," "Pippa Passes," "Sonnets from the Portuguese," and others fit to stand with them; the Handy Volume Classics are known through all lands and every year add new "old favorites," as do the Illustrated Poets, the Luxembourg Library, the ever-welcome What is Worth While series, which this season brings J. R. Miller's "Beauty of Kindness;" Annie Russell Marble's "Books in Their Seasons;" and Bishop Potter's "The Drink Problem;" and the very dainty Chiswick Series, in which the newcomer is "An Emerson Calendar," compiled by Huntington Smith, printed at the Merrymount Press, finely illustrated and artistically bound. You can find gifts for friends of every taste if you ask to see T. Y. Crowell's holiday books.

DODD, MEAD & COMPANY have prepared several illustrated gift books, among the most attractive of which is Paul Leicester Ford's "His Version of It," which is one of the most clever short stories Mr. Ford ever wrote. It is a bright little love story, in which the happy end is brought about by a very interesting horseback ride on which the horses compare notes and converse about the queer actions of "the humans" with whom they are brought into such close daily contact. Illustrated in color by Henry Hutt, with marginal pictures and artistic cover design, this makes an attractive presentation volume. A light, breezy romance of the time of Paul Jones is called "My Lady's Slipper," and is written by Cyrus Townsend Brady, who lays his scene in Paris, where his hero goes through surprising adventures, all printed in two colors and suitably illustrated, by Mrs. Weber Ditzler; Maurice Maeterlinck's "Old-Fashioned Flowers," illustrated in color, with ornamental decoration, gives a most suitable holiday dress to Maeterlinck's charming essays, "Field Flowers" and "Chrysanthemums," and the one which gives the book its title; there is a finely illustrated edition of Tennyson's "Maud;" a new volume of poems by Paul Laurence Dunbar, illustrated from photographs, called "Howdy, Honey, Howdy," which show the author's remarkable insight and appreciation of the possibilities of his own race; and a record of life and travel in Burma, by V. C. Scott-O'Connor, with map, 400 illustrations and twenty colored plates after paintings by J. R. Middleton, Mrs. Ottway, Wheeler Cuffe and native artists. Other works to be examined are "The Artist's Way of Working," by Russell Sturgis, with 200 illustrations; "Great Portraits Described by Great Writers," by Esther Singleton, another volume chosen from the world's literature in which the impressions that great portraits have made on such men as Goethe, Shelley, Dumas, Ruskin, Dickens and Thackeray are given in words that have become classic; a volume showing again the author's literary and artistic taste, as shown in "Great Pictures" and "A Guide to the Opera," but adding a new human interest to her fine work; and "Cathedral Cities of England," by George Gilbert, who describes the great cathedrals and all the history and poetry that hinges round them, and whose work is made very effective by upwards of sixty full-page illustrations in color, by W. W. Collins. Of the last work there is also a de luxe edition, with the illustrations mounted on art paper, which in its handsome binding, lying in its protecting box, is certainly a presentation volume in every finished detail. For lovers of history and biography the preparation is lavish. If you are well provided with the necessary gold you can give a student of American history the "Original Journals of Lewis and Clark," in seven volumes, edited by Reuben Gold Thwaites, illustrated with portraits, views, maps, plans and facsimiles; or gotten up on large paper with colored illustrations or in a de luxe edition in fifteen volumes, with pictures colored by hand. The moneyed man of many a town should present this great record of the opening of our vast West to the public library of his locality. To Dr. Alfred Russell Wallace belongs the distinction of having separately, and a few years earlier than Darwin, formulated a theory of evolution which is substantially the same as Darwin's. His autobiography is issued under the title "My Life: a Record of Events and Opinions," and is a notable addition to the literature that tells of the days when Darwin, Huxley and Spencer thought the New Thought of the nineteenth century. "The Romance of Royalty" will appeal to the large constituency that "doth love a lord" and can never hear too much of the doings of those of royal blood. It gives the histories of four royal personages, all of whom were alive and in Europe but a few years back—Ludwig II. of Bavaria, Isabella II. of Spain, the Empress Eugenie, and the Duchess d'Alençon—and surely they all furnished romance to their generation. Fitzgerald Molloy writes of the secret side of court life with intimate knowledge and remarkable skill. A. Barbeau treats of "The World of Fashion and of Letters at Bath Under Queen Anne and the Georges," when Bath was the greatest meeting place of a totally vanished phase of English society. Gilbert K. Chesterton has written "A Life of Charles Dickens," which cannot fail to be novel, piquant and interesting, a distinct contribution to the controversy that is perennial regarding Charles Dickens's place in English literature. In "Twenty Years of the Republic" Professor Harry Thurston Peck has given the essence of a wonderful mass of contemporary newspapers, cartoons, books, letters and other interesting memoranda, covering from the Cleveland-Blaine presidential campaign of 1884 to the present day, and the professor writes as one who has given the rein to his favorite hobby. The work reveals not only the wide and mature point of view of the trained scholar, but also the many little touches and personal peculiarities which go so far toward making history, but which are so easily and quickly forgotten. Dr. Gustav Kobbé has looked behind the veil of romance that has so long linked the names of Richard Wagner and Mathilde Wesendonk, and has now shared with the world the secret of the great genius and the woman who inspired his Isolde in "Wagner and His Isolde," containing the correspondence between these great artists, which will be eagerly awaited in translation by the untold numbers of Wagner worshippers. All parts of the world would seem almost familiar as our own after the many books of travel we constantly receive, but new scenes are opened up in "A Yankee in Pigmy Land," in which William Edgar Geil writes the narrative of a journey across Africa from Mombasa, through the great pigmy forest to Banana, a thrilling book with more than 100 illustrations to make its wonders real. And then Dodd, Mead & Co. have excellent fiction, all on record in the book list elsewhere. "Nedra," by George Barr McCutcheon of "Graustark" fame, is notable in that the title reads backwards "Arden," a fitting name for the little island where the lovers meet their fate; and "The Man from Red Keg," by Eugene Thwing, are among the best stories of this prolific season. And Dodd, Mead & Co. have calendars, works of great beauty. Those that stand out in the long list are Harrison Fisher's "The Beverly Calendar" and Hamilton Wright Mabie's "The Nature Calendar," both with colored illustrations, and very artistic gifts this season.

WATCHING HER GROWING YOUNGSTERS.

DODGE PUBLISHING CO. have a most attractive array of gift books, booklets and artistic holiday editions of favorite poems, essays and masterpieces, tempting almost all tastes. Edmund Vance Cooke's child-verses won wide recognition in the Saturday Evening Post, and in dainty book form will appeal to a large audience, in their poetic charm and deep insight into childish thought and character. Mrs. Catharine Moriarty's most popular verses have also been gathered into a pretty volume, with the title "Friendship's Fragrant Fancies;" and there are artistic new editions of Palgrave's "Golden Treasury" and the "Rubaiyât," the latter in a rich Oriental edition with a remarkable series of photographic illustrations by Adelaide Hanscom, border designs and decorations. In the Little Books of Art and the Little Gallery Series there are new volumes, each dealing with a famous artist, which will be welcomed by every lover of art. "A Cynic's Meditations," by Walter Pulitzer, is a delightful little volume of epigrams and philosophic reflections, hitting off the inconsistencies of life and the teachings of experience; Jeannie Gillespie Pennington's two small volumes called "Don't Fret" and "Have Courage" will bring kindly counsel and inspiring help to many who find everyday cares weigh heavily; and Elizabeth Hamill Davis has compiled a most helpful year's treasury, giving "For Each Day a Prayer," drawn from many and varied sources. Charming little booklets that carry the spirit of Christmas greeting have been provided in the series called Great Ideals, in which appear Bishop Brooks's Christmas carol, Van Dyke's "Love," Stevenson's "Morning Prayer" and Emerson's "Friendship;" while as Little Prose Masterpieces "Wandering Willie's Tale," "Rab and His Friends" and Rossetti's "Hand and Soul' are brought out as dainty volumes. Another attractive gift book, original in idea and execution, is "The Original Letters," containing Cupid's diary, and allied private correspondence, a pressed flower, and newspaper clippings of allied interest, all illustrated by Rosalie Arthur and bound in white and scarlet. Indeed, any who seek some dainty and appropriate message of friendly greeting, of witty philosophy or good cheer, will find much on this firm's list to select from.

WESTERN TOWERS OF NOTRE DAME AT ST. LO.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & COMPANY appeal to a world-wide public of animal lovers in Schillings's "Flashlight in the Jungle." The author, a noted German traveller, hunter and scientist, has made repeated journeys into equatorial Africa that he might study its wild life, human and animal. On his last trip, in 1903, he took an elaborate photographic outfit suitable for telephotography and flashlight work, and with this he has made a collection of over 300 pictures of wild animals in their native haunts impossible to duplicate. His text reads like a story of adventure, and the book has met with instant success in Germany. Frederic Whyte is responsible for the English translation, for which that other famous African traveller, Sir Harry Johnston, has written an introduction, and President Roosevelt has added a letter of appreciation. Very different in subject is Mrs. Bayard Taylor's volume of reminiscences and biography, "On Two Continents." As the daughter of the great German mathematician and astronomer, Hansen, and as wife of the American traveller, diplomatist and man of letters, she was brought in contact with the leading men and women of her day on both sides of the water. The earlier chapters, describing her life in the quiet German town of Gotha, are followed by her experiences after her marriage with Bayard Taylor. There are anecdotes of George William Curtis, Aldrich, the Brownings, Thackeray, Swinburne, Bismarck and scores of others, as well as the most intimate portrayal so far published of her husband. Excellent illustrations visualize these glimpses of men and places. Another charming and informing volume of memories will be found in Mrs. A. Giraud Wright's "A Southern Girl in '61." Mrs. Wright was the daughter of Senator Wigfall, of Texas, and had ample opportunities to study the history and social life of the Confederacy. Her narrative is spirited, revealing both the bright and tragic aspects of those years, and it is illustrated by thirty-odd portrait reproductions. No better gift for your tourist friend can be secured than "Paintings of the Louvre," wherein Dr. Arthur Mahler gives a comprehensive description of the Spanish and Italian sections of this wonderful collection. Indeed, so large is the number of Italian artists represented in the Louvre that Dr. Mahler's book is virtually a history of Italian art. One hundred and sixty-six reproductions of the pictures and an appendix containing a complete list of the Spanish and Italian paintings in the Louvre complete a valuable art work. Interesting both from its artistic and personal import is Oliver B. Capen's "Country Homes of Famous Americans," describing the loved homes of seventeen Americans of note from Washington to Horace Greeley, accompanied by many photographic glimpses. Then in E. C. Holtzoper's "The Country House" we learn how to plan and build the country home for Americans who may yet—who can tell?—become famous. Practical advice on site, building, plumbing, garden, etc., makes this a most admirable work. "Ferns and How to Grow Them," by G. A. Woolson, will be a welcome gift to the amateur gardener and botanist, be he in town or country; while "The Tree Book," by Julia E. Rogers, also copiously illustrated, contains a fund of information for student and home-maker. Lest the inner man should suffer while the home is being made beautiful, within and without, Doubleday, Page have provided "The International Cook Book," by Alexander Filippini, formerly of Delmonico's. As usual, this house has a sheaf of entertaining novels. There is "The Missourian," by Eugene P. Lyle, Jr., giving the adventures of an intrepid American in the Mexico of Maximilian and Carlotta; or, Maud Wilder Goodwin's "Claims and Counterclaims," a study of conflicting feeling regarding the man who has saved the hero's life; or, Charles W. Chesnutt's "The Colonel's Dream," a story of a Southerner who returns to his old home and is brought in contact with the old-new negro problem. Then we can be amused by Eleanor Hoyt Brainerd's new creation, "Concerning Belinda," sketching the characters and incidents in a New York finishing school for girls. "Sons o' Men," by a new author, G. B. Lancaster, presents in a series of short stories a little known group of men, the sheep shearers and cattlemen of New Zealand. "Ayesha," Rider Haggard's sequel to that absorbing romance of many years ago, "She," needs no commendation; it's readers are eagerly awaiting it. And there will also be an audience for "Old Lim Jucklin's" philosophy on life and things as delivered on the cross-roads' horse-block in North Carolina and set down by Opie Read. A special holiday gift book to satisfy the most exacting taste is the new edition of Irving's "Rip Van Winkle," illustrated by Arthur Rackman and bound in handsome style. There are also new volumes in James Watson's "Dog Book," a veritable cyclopedia of canine lore; and a suggestive work by Meredith Nugent on "New Games and Amusements."

E. P. DUTTON & Co. present a royal gift for the holidays in "The Furniture of Windsor Castle," a book of great artistic and historic value, issued by command of His Majesty, King Edward VII. It has been most skilfully prepared by Guy Francis Laking, keeper of the King's Armory. In the account of these vast and priceless treasures they are divided into periods, and the more important of them are represented by plates of the most beautiful character, in which the smallest details are exquisitely brought out. The text also gives a full and minute description of each piece enumerated, and its associations, and the introduction gives historical account of the royal collection. The book is bound in royal gray, with a light tan rough grained leather back, and has the king's monogram on the cover. "French Songs of Old Canada," pictured by W. Graham Robertson, is an artistic gift book of exceptional charm. There are thirty-one hand-colored reproductions of the artist's sketches and several in black and white, beautifully illustrating the spirit of the text. Fifteen old Canadian French ballads, with the music to which they were sung and an English translation, constitute the text, which is lettered throughout by Mr. Robertson. Beautiful books of travel are "The High Road of Empire, Sketches in India and Elsewhere," by A. H. Hallam Murray, author of that delightful color book of last year, "Along the Old Road Through France to Florence," with forty-six plates and many black and white line drawings; "In the Track of the Moors," by Sybil Fitzgerald, with 50 illustrations in color and many drawings by Augustine Fitzgerald, an excellent study of the Moors, their architecture and their activities in various fields; "Normandy," by Gordon Home, the English traveller and artist, who describes the scenery and romance of the oft-sung and pictured Normandy, and with his colored and white and black illustrations makes an ideal gift book; "Casertino," in which Ella Noyes describes this pretty Italian province and Dora Noyes furnishes thirty colored and many other illustrations of this picturesque spot and its frank, friendly people; and "The Cities of Umbria," by Edward Hutton, who describes Assisi, Spoleto and many minor places where he studied the art of the past and the beauty of all time. After all there are no books like the old books, and this house is specially rich in new settings for the old favorites. The Temple edition of "The Novels of the Brontë sisters is now complete in ten volumes, with colored illustrations by Edward Dulac; a new Play-to-a-Volume edition of "Shakespeare," edited by Georg Brandes, has the Cambridge text, and a photogravure frontispiece of some famous actor in each of the forty volumes that make the pretty set; Dickens's "A Christmas Carol," "The Cricket on the Hearth" and "The Chimes" are brought out, with illustrations by Charles E. Brock, and may be had singly or boxed as a set; to the English Idyl Series is added "Silas Marner," with pictures in color by the same artist that did the Dickens books; and "A Study of Brahms" goes into the Master Musicians Series; and a new series sure of great popularity is the Temple Topographies, which will consist of little books on beautiful places described and illustrated by experts. The Duttons also run a specially beautiful line of calendars, year-books and Christmas cards.

PAUL ELDER & COMPANY, San Francisco, are always happy in their selection of books specially suitable for gifts. If you have young friends just married you cannot do better than to give them "The Matrimonial Primer," by V. B. Ames, illustrated by Gordon Ross, exquisitely gotten up, as are all the publications of this house, and full of sound advice humorously and wittily put:

"When your husband seems willing that all the economy shall be at the home end, insist upon laundering his shirts yourself." "When you are married, be a good comrade if it breaks every canon of your church and ancestry." Another very clever compilation, devoted to quotations from a wide range of literature, is "Sovereign Woman vs. Mere Man," in which Jennie Day Haines selected with much discrimination and for which Gordon Ross and Spencer Wright have furnished the artistic element. The prettily decorated pages on the left side of the book are devoted to "sovereign woman," the right hand pages to "mere man." Printed on Japanese paper and bound in Rhinos Bokhara boards the book is odd and very pleasing externally, and its contents are a literary treasure. Woman at her highest and noblest also figures in "Womanhood in Art," by Phebe Estelle Spalding, consisting of interpretations of impressions produced upon an observer in true sympathy with the genius that produced the Venus de Milo, Mona Lisa, Beatrice Cenci, the Sistine Madonna, etc. The book is illustrated with toned reproductions of the original world-famed works of art. A very clever idea is "The Joke Book Note Book," bound flexibly and made to fit in a man's pocket, with a sample joke to show the subject, followed by blank pages for the recording of fugitive jokes he may pick up when he stops "to see a man" while his dinner waits at home. The subject index is made of little thumb drawings of "darkies," "Irish," "British," etc. It's just the thing to give a social bachelor. Another happy find is "The Blue Monday Book," for which Jennie Day Haines has compiled optimistic quotations and for which the publishers have provided a blue dress set off with morning-glories. Provision is also made for those not so full of fun and frolic, and the house has chosen its booklets of religious nature with all the old judgment and exquisite taste. "Bible Mosaics" is the collective name of a little series of four volumes separately christened "Promises," "Commands," "Admonitions" and "Answers." The Bible quotations of which these booklets are composed are woven into consecutive little essays in the cleverest way by Agnes Green Foster, and the little volumes are brought out in several styles of binding, each more dainty than the last. A volume of lyrical verse, by C. G. Blanden, is entitled "A Chorus of Leaves," and is printed with border design in tint throughout and daintily bound in flexible vegetable parchment, making a charming presentation volume. The calendars and year-books of the house are legion. Among the very newest are "The Cynic's Calendar Entirely Complete" and "The Psychological Year Book." You can delight any friend with Paul Elder's pretty inventions.

DANA ESTES & COMPANY have a very handsome gift book entitled "Eve's Daughters," of which a full description has already been given. In the Lovers' Treasury Series they begin a new series of illustrated gift books, combining the qualities of charm and lasting value. Each volume contains thirty-two full-page half-tones of portraits, historical studies or reproductions of celebrated paintings. The text consists of famous poems combined with explanatory comments in prose. Two volumes of these anthologies are ready this season. "The Art Lovers' Treasury" is edited by Carrie Thompson Lowell, and may be characterized as "Famous Pictures Described in Poems," containing reproductions of representative pictures and the poems great writers have written of them, all compiled most carefully by the well-known reader and educator of Portland, Me. The poets quoted comprise Dante, Keats, Browning, Longfellow, Whittier and many others, including younger and contemporary singers. The list of illustrations includes, to name a few at random, Fra Angelico's Madonna della Stella, Raphael's Sistine Madonna, Giotto's St. Francis Preaching to the Birds, Da Vinci's Last Supper, Titian's Danae, Turner's The Fighting Temeraire, Millet's The Man with the Hoe, and Vedder's The Cup of Death. "The Music Lovers' Treasury" is edited by Helen Philbrook Potter, author of "The Years' Festivals." The number of poems addressed to musicians or written about musical instruments will astonish any one who has not already examined this field for himself. The poets represented range from Shakespeare and Milton to the youngest of the choir of to-day, and the work of compilation has been most intelligently done. It is good news to many who with John Burroughs and Richard Henry Stoddard hailed the advent of a true poet in Frederic Lawrence Knowles that there are new editions of his "Love Triumphant" and "On Life's Stairway," which were revised by him before his much-lamented death and have been asked for so persistently as to insure a new success for this poetry of a high order of literary and spiritual merit. This year there is a Cabinet edition of "Shakespeare" in twenty volumes, edited by William J. Rolfe and other Shakespearean scholars, of which the publishers are justly proud, which is very neat and remarkably reasonable in price. The volumes are lavishly illustrated with etchings and photogravures from the most celebrated paintings of Shakespearean subjects, many of which have never been available for reproduction before. Among the artists whose names lend special significance to the illustrative features of the work are Emile Bayard, W. von Kaulbach, L. Alma Tadema, Sir Frederick Leighton, Marcus Stone, Luke Fildes, and scores of others of equal eminence. A truly excellent story is "Mrs. Tree's Will," by Laura E. Richards, a sequel to "Mrs. Tree." In it the old lady dies at the age of nearly one hundred years, and her will, made with great thought, has consequences for the whole neighborhood, in which she exerted so strong an influence after the stormy days of her early life had come to a peaceful old age. The book is illustrated by Julia Ward Richards. It should not be overlooked in choosing fiction this year for friends of quiet, literary taste and experienced knowledge of human nature. And all the old favorites on the list of the Estes house, which was always in the fore in the providing of holiday gift books, are ready for another successful season in new and even prettier bindings than heretofore.

"MY EYES, HUNGRY WITH LOVE, WERE UPON THAT FACE BESIDE ME."

Fox, Duffield & Company have real holiday gift books. There is a great folio volume of full-page "Drawings by A. B. Frost," with verse written by Wallace Irwin, at present at the very heighth of popularity, and an introduction by Joel Chandler Harris, who gives an excellent estimate of Frost as a distinctively American artist; and then the fine work of Kenyon Cox, entitled "Old Masters and New," has been put into a festive illustrated edition, with wide margins, and shows sixteen reproductions of celebrated pictures in which art Cox is surely also an old master, making the book far more valuable and also making it distinctively an illustrated holiday book. Also in dainty holiday dress comes the new and greatly enlarged edition of "The Fusser's Book," in which Anne Archbald and Georgina Jones have told young men and women how to behave in society, in a humorous manner that fixes all the good precepts indelibly on the minds of all fussers who want to be irresistible. The book has been expanded from forty to one hundred rules of conduct. Marguerite Merington has made the happiest kind of dramatization of Mrs. Gaskell's "Cranford," using almost wholly Mrs. Gaskell's words, a very clever piece of work, and the publishers have put the little literary feat into a very pretty binding, with a frontispiece in color by Edwin Wallick. Racy, witty verse on American conditions of the kind Wallace Irwin writes so well are bound up under the title "The Sign of the Dollar," and the verse has been illustrated by E. W. Kemble, who is also always racy, witty and American. The subjects joked about mention "The Panama Brook," "The Missionary and the Standard Oil," "Frenzied Finance," "Immigration," "The Reveries of a Whitewasher," etc. It is a book sure to make people laugh and also to make them think a little what lessons some of the fun brings home. "More Misrepresentative Men," by Harry Graham, with portraits

"'HOMER HOLLOPETER,' SHE SAID, 'WHAT IS THE NAME OF THIS VILLAGE?'"

by Malcolm Strauss, is a second collection of humorous verse on celebrities. These include Robert Burns, William Waldorf Astor, Euclid, Joseph F. Smith, the Mormon, Andrew Carnegie, Henry VIII., and many more, all treated with fine satire and with drawings that are caricatures of true celebrities. And then the house has calendars and yearbooks and many pretty things they had in years gone by, which are as pretty and as appropriate as ever as holiday gifts. Don't forget "The Letters of Henrik Ibsen;" "The Little Kingdom of Home," by Margaret Sangster; Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales," illustrated in color by Walter Appleton Clark; or "The Star of Bethlehem," the pretty old play revived and made uniform with "Everyman," also not to be forgotten. For calendars we must refer to advertisements. A rather sad book for the holidays, but a book of such great merit that it should be bought and given to people of true appreciation is the story "An Eye for an Eye," by Clarence S. Darrow. It is the story of the last night of a condemned murderer, who tells the details of his crime and of his life to the friend who sits with him through the last night. The book is a great lesson most artistically given.

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY have brought out Marshall P. Wilder's "Sunny Side of the Street." The author calls it "A bright garland woven from blossoms plucked in the gardens of humor and pathos which lie side by side," a rather poetic phrase that might make the book seem to appeal more to the gentle sex and to rank with other works for quiet hours. But in reality it is a book of humorous recollections about many people Mr. Wilder has met in his continual wanderings and he has much to say of such prominent people as Richard Croker, President McKinley, John D. Rockefeller, Patti, Sir Henry Irving, Joe Jefferson, Mark Twain, "Buffalo Bill," Talmage, Horace Greeley, Edward VII., "Bill Nye," Russell Sage, John Philip Sousa and many more of the celebrities of a generation that we all know. The book is most attractive in its get-up, with text illustrations by Bart Haley and cover decorations by Charles Graham. If you have among your friends a clergyman of culture, no matter what his creed or sect, he would thank you for life for the "Jewish Encyclopædia," a work the publishers may be proud to have issued; and if you count students and high-school scholars in your lists of friends, don't forget "The Standard Dictionary," which will gladden the whole household for many years to come.

GINN & COMPANY, Boston, again turn out a book by William J. Long, and many are waiting to add it to their collection of his artistic stories of nature and her work. "Northern Trails" is the first book Long has written since "A Little Brother to the Bear" was published in 1903. No doubt it will also become a little classic in its field. The readers of "Northern Trails" are brought face to face with the wild life along the coasts and in the barrens of Labrador and Newfoundland. The chapters include stories of the white wolf, fishes, salmon, wild geese, whale and polar bear. The author's extraordinary powers of observation and simplicity of style which makes the literary merit of his writing unmistakable have attracted universal attention and brought in a vivid way the world of outdoors to readers of all ages. Besides the two already mentioned there are "The School of the Woods," devoted to animals and birds; "Following the Deer," "Beasts of the Field," "Fowls of the Air," the last two making a pretty set neatly boxed together. After roaming for pleasure with Mr. Long we can also find some much stronger food provided by this house. "The Philippine Islands," by Fred W. Atkinson, first General Superintendent of Education, are descriptive, not controversial; "The Discovery and Colonization of North America," by John Fiske, includes the events from the discovery of our continent to the struggle between England and France, out of which grew the questions which led to the American Revolution; and by the same author is "How the United States Became a Nation," covering the period that began with the first administration of Washington, 1789, and ended with the downfall of the Confederacy in 1865. Very timely now that we have begun to put down fraud and lay bare the schemes of those in high places are books to teach our citizens their duties. Of such are "Trade Unionism and Labor Problems," by Prof. John R. Commons; "Trusts, Pools and Corporations," by Prof. W. Z. Ripley, treating of combination from the point of view of capital; "President Roosevelt's Railroad Policy," made up of a discussion by Charles A. Prouty, David Willcox, Peter S. Grosscup and Frank Parsons; and "The Education of Wage Earners," by Thomas Davidson, with an introductory chapter by C. M. Bakewell.

HARPER & BROTHERS are specially proud of "London Films," of which they have made a fine gift book, which has already been fully described. A group of seven exquisite love stories of the Middle Ages in France and England is called "The Line of Love." James Branch Cabell has beautifully preserved the passionate and romantic atmosphere of the time, and his pages are rich in incident and glowing with life and color. The stories purport to be taken from the annals of a noble French family, covering the period from 1350 to 1550. For this book Howard Pyle has made a frontispiece and nine full-page illustrations in color, and also marginal illustrations in tint. In point of manufacture the volume is an exceptionally beautiful example of bookmaking. Miss F. Y. Cory now outranks all Americans as a depicter of child life. The triumphs of her genius have appeared in her famous series in Harper's Bazar, entitled separately "Tragedies of Childhood," "Simple Pleasures of Childhood" and "Trials of a First Baby." A combination of thirty full-page pictures in color and of the same number of pen and ink drawings have now been made in "The Pleasant Tragedies of Childhood," and each is explained in a merry little rhyme written by Burges Johnson.

SIX ARCHES AT SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO.

whose verses of child-life are well known. While the volume cannot fail to amuse children, its appeal is to the parents of children. Justus Miles Forman ranks high among the writers of pure romance. His story, "The Island of Enchantment," tells of a great passion in the days when love came at a glance or touch and courtship was unknown, and when a young captain, knowing more of war than of women, was sent to conquer the island of Arber, and fell in love with the dark eyes of a slim girl taken as a spy by his soldiers. The climax is surprising. Howard Pyle has made four full-page illustrations in color for this book. A romance of Old New York, impregnated with the spirit of pure comedy, is "Caroline of Courtlandt Street," by Weymer Jay Mills. Rose Whitebush—one of the famous Whitebushes of Courtlandt Street quality, but forever banned because her mother had been an actress—hits upon a wild scheme to retrieve her fallen fortunes. She will go to Courtlandt Street, and play the part of the Honorable Caroline, her cousin of the English branch. Though her strategy has to reckon with an English lover, the actress springs to life in her and aids her quaking heart and brave spirit, and when the crisis comes on the top of calamity for the would-be Caroline her love is in at the pinch, and all ends well. Six illustrations in color and marginal decorations in tint, untrimmed edges and a protecting box make this a most attractive gift book. Nothing more sure to please could be given a young girl than "Her Memory Book," with drawings by Helen Hayes and page embellishments printed in sepia from this artist's drawings. The book is built on the plan of the "Baby Books." In it a record of various important and interesting events of girlhood days may be kept. Provision is made for all the ordinary social diversions—dances, luncheons, teas, festivities of all descriptions, college events, and the sports of the four seasons. The pages devoted to the girl's coming-out party contain space for the signatures of the receiving party and of the guests. In the volume may be inserted cards, invitations, samples of favorite frocks, photographs and the hundred and one things the average girl likes to treasure. There is also a new edition of Richard Le Gallienne's "An Old Country House," brought out in response to popular demand. Booth Tarkington, Gertrude Atherton and Mary E. Wilkins have written three fine novels entitled, respectively, "The Conquest of Canaan," which is a town in Indiana; "The Travelling Thirds," in which a father, mother and two daughters take their first tour abroad to see Spain, where they also fall into the hands of Puck and Cupid; and "The Debtor," in which Miss Wilkins has gone from her favorite New England to a New Jersey village, where she describes a Southerner and his family who are extravagant and always in debt, and who are for a time kept alive by the father singing and dancing negro melodies in vaudeville shows. As a result of the scientific study of wild animals C. G. Schillings, the foremost of German naturalists, has written a book called "With Flashlight and Rifle," translated and edited by Henry Zick, and the work has striking reproductions of photographs of wild animals taken by the author at night in their native haunts in Africa. The text contains valuable information about the habits and life of these animals. Deep intellectual science on the contrary has gone into W. H. Mallock's "The Reconstruction of Religious Belief," in which the author dwells upon the necessity for finding some intellectual solution for the contradiction between science and religion, and reasons out the religion in every human soul in a variety of detailed ways. Any wide-awake clergyman would give much for this book. Any one that enjoyed "The Masquerader" wants "The Gambler," by Katherine Cecil Thurston. She is a born story-teller, and handles the dramatic possibilities of her characters with consummate art. The scenes of "The Gambler" are chiefly Ireland and Italy, and the girl who so nearly succumbs to her passion for gambling is a young Irish beauty.

HARRY VARDON "DRIVING."

A. J. Holman & Co., Philadelphia, Bible publishers, are having a phenomenal success with their new black-face type "Teachers' Bible," which came out several months ago. The first edition was all sold some weeks before it was off the press. They attribute its popularity to the clearness of the type, the good paper and the handiness of the volume. In their description they say: "Just the right size, neither too large nor too small, light in weight, easy to read"—which seems to describe the Bible very fairly. Their new up-to-date "Helps" which have been added to this Bible also aid in popularizing it. They also publish this same Bible without "References" or "Helps" which they call a "Black Face Type Text Bible," in which form it makes an ideal school Bible. This, too, is meeting with a great sale. The demand for their "Pictorial Editions" is also unabated, which is doubtless due to the admirable selection of the pictures. Photographic views of places were chosen which are of interest not only to Bible scholars, but to the people at large, and hence, to use a popular phrase, their Bibles are always "in the public eye." Several years ago an illustrated work on "Egypt and the Holy Land," containing nearly 300 photographic views, came out, and this was subsequently secured by this firm, and from it they made those fine selections which made this edition of the Bible so attractive. This firm was the first to bring out a "Pictorial Bible," with full descriptions and the Bible References, directly underneath the pictures, an arrangement which found immediate favor with Bible buyers. Their Twentieth Century edition of the "Family Bible," printed from the new expanded De Vinne type, is selling faster than ever this fall. It has the largest type used in any popular priced "Family Bible" and it also has the useful pronouncing feature.

AS HE SPOKE A DOUANIER LOUNGED OUT OF HIS LITTLE WHITEWASHED LAIR.

Henry Holt & Company never publish a book that is not of distinct merit. The head of the firm had the place of honor in the Atlantic for November, and there gave his views on "The Commercialization of Literature," which he deplores and fights at all times. Every novel that comes among us with the imprint of Henry Holt & Co. has been approved by the head of the house, and all who buy a Holt novel may be sure it has interest and decided literary quality. In "The Divine Fire" May Sinclair has given a full-length study of the poetic temperament that will live. The hero poet is placed in a curiously interesting environment and is drawn with a firmness of hand that has been praised in highest terms by such fastidious and exacting critics as the Atlantic Monthly, The Dial and London Punch. It is every reader's duty to speak of this book and do his best that its reputation shall spread. So good a novel must be spread abroad, and every one who has felt its noble, inspiring power should make his neighbor come under the spell of its absorbing interest and true distinction of style. JERUSALEM—THE TOWER OF DAVID.

is the romance of Dolores Delgado, the last of a royal native race of Central America and an American yachtsman, and the story covers some fighting that can hold its own with any in fiction; "The Venus of Cadiz," by Richard Fisguill, is original and humorous, a delightful comic opera novel with its Cadiz in Kentucky and a love-lorn six-footer, the proprietor of some mushroom caves, to make the unsophisticated Venus happy in the end; "The Millbank Case," by George Dyre Eldridge, is a very fine detective novel, dealing with Maine lumbering camps on the Canadian border and with the misdeeds of a group of powerful Maine politicians; "The Belted Seas," by Arthur Colton, is a South American sea yarn, telling of a ship that climbed a mountain, of the master of the earthquake, an American-Chinese monk, etc., a book remarkable for imagination, humor and pathos which recalls Stockton at his best; "The Marathon Mystery," by Burton E. Stevenson, tells an absorbing detective story of modern New York; "After the Divorce," by Grazia Deledda, narrates a powerful story of Italian life dealing with an Italian law which grants divorce to the wife whose husband has become a convict; and "The House of the Black Ring," by Fred Lewis Pattee, hinges on a striking mystery of the Pennsylvania mountains. There is a new illustrated edition of the "Williamsons' Lightning Conductor," and another humorous automobile story by the same writers called "The Princess Passes," in which a charming American girl and a susceptible Englishman travel through Northern France and Switzerland to the Italian lakes and Monte Carlo. The action is brisk and the love story most interesting, and this work of fiction has the approval of the most critical of all the papers—The Nation. If we leave the works of the imagination and come to the literature of fact good books may be chosen for friends from the list of this house. "Animal Snapshots and How Made," by Silas A. Lottridge, shows extraordinary pictures from photographs of our familiar wild animals and birds taken in the fields and woods by the author, accompanied by text telling of the habits of the raccoon, opossum, white-footed mouse, the great horned owl and all kinds of squirrels; and E. Ray Lankester has written a book on "Extinct Animals," which is in some measure the history of the earth itself, and he has provided illustrations of these animals as they must have been before written history existed. An interpretation of the methods of Shakespeare as an artist appears in "Lectures on Shakespeare," by Stopford Brooke, which is more an appreciation than an analysis of Shakespeare's best known plays. "The Negro and the Nation," by George S. Merriam, is a witty, scholarly study of the history of American slavery and enfranchisement, told with special reference to the far-reaching problems of the present day, a work characterized by thoroughness, impartiality and sanity of view which will appeal to the older men of your acquaintance who lived through the times that tried men's souls, just before and just after the Civil War. In these days when every ten people hold at least eleven opinions on Rostand, Hauptmann, Sudermann, Pinero, Maeterlinck and Shaw, the book of Edward Everett Hale, Jr., on "Dramatists of To-Day" will be eagerly sought for. It offers an informal discussion of "Cyrano de Bergerac," "The Sunken Bell," "Magda," "Candida" and other plays that are so warmly discussed in educated society and it admits a feature very often missing in the discussions of the hour in its quiet common sense. It is good news for all who now want to study Russia under authoritative teaching that they can have a new edition of "Wallace's Russia," rewritten throughout and greatly enlarged, and of it The Nation says: "A book of extreme value on a remarkably difficult subject has been rendered invaluable, nay indispensable, for those who wish clearly to understand present conditions and future possibilities in the realm of the Tsar;" and which the London Times classes with Bryce's "American Commonwealth," and says it is "impossible to praise too highly."

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & COMPANY have been very happy even for them in their selection of literary material to bring out as holiday gift books. Bret Harte's typically American love story in verse, known as "Her Letter, His Letter and Her Last Letter," with its artistic designs by Arthur I. Keller, has already been fully described in our front pages. E. Boyd Smith has struck a really new vein in animal books in his "Noah's Ark," and his full-page and double-page illustrations in color, shedding quite a new light on how types, animal and human, were preserved during the all-devastating flood, are exquisitely drawn and full of genuine, all-conquering humor. We have all read the story of Noah and the Ark, but few of us have stopped to picture to ourselves what actually must have happened when he tried to gather together the animals and build on land a ship to carry them. The leaders of the new theological criticisms have been diligent to tell us what could not have happened, but it has remained for E. Boyd Smith to show in these pictures what really did happen. As might have been expected, Noah's experiences were exasperating and funny to the last degree. He had strikes while he was building the ship, he had to overcome the disbelief of his people, and he was hopelessly put out by the difficulty of preventing the cats from catching the mice, and the dogs from chasing the cats. The dry and solemn tone of the accompanying text shows an art almost equal to the genius of the pictures. For the holiday volume of "English Hours" Henry James has collected from "Portraits of Places" and "Transatlantic Sketches" the chapters descriptive of England, and to them he has added four new papers and all have been illustrated by Joseph Pennell, who knows England as no one else, by seventy characteristic pictures. The new Christmas edition of "The One Hoss Shay," with 66 colored illustrations and decorations by Howard Pyle, is peculiarly attractive in its mechanical features. Mr. Pyle has been unusually successful in giving to many of his little head and tail pieces the character of hand-painted marginal illustrations. In an exceptionally readable narrative C. William Beebe has told the story of "Two Bird-Lovers in Mexico," telling how the ornithologist and his wife went from Vera Cruz to the Pacific and back and studied all the strange animals they met as well as the birds. Mr. Beebe is an excellent photographer, and the book is lavishly illustrated with reproductions of pictures taken during the rough trip. The book is in holiday dress, and though primarily a nature book it will interest many who will feel the attraction a volume of travel in a strange land always possesses. A holiday edition from new plates is also ready for Hawthorne's "Wonder-Book for Girls and Boys," with Walter Crane's original full-page water-color sketches; there is a new edition of Edna Dean Proctor's "The Song of the Ancient People," the outpouring of racial and tribal feeling of the Pueblo people, which is unique in American literature; and there is a monumental and sumptuous edition of George Cavendish's "The Life and Death of Cardinal Wolsey," that wonderful biography of Henry VIII.'s great cardinal written nearly 400 years ago and still the most authoritative work on that strange, ill-fated man's career. The illustrations have been fittingly chosen, chiefly from the work of Holbein. True literary taste craves essays and could be delighted with "Ways of Nature," by John Burroughs, specially aimed against recent popular animal books that this past master of nature study has pronounced pure romance and misleading in their effects; Agnes Repplier has prepared wholly delightful personal reminiscences of herself and her intimate friend, Mrs. Elizabeth Robins Pennell, which she entitles "In Our Convent Days;" and Thomas Wentworth Higginson in "Part of a Man's Life" offers a series of literary memories and anecdotes throwing light upon the intellectual and social tendencies of which he has watched the growth through so many, many years. Every student of American history will want "James G. Blaine," by Edward Stanwood, editor of the Youth's Companion, who makes most instructive the life of this great statesman, which is virtually a history of the Civil War, of Reconstruction and of the great series of struggles over the currency in which the great Secretary of State under two presidents took so active a part; and "Louisiana," by Albert Phelps, based entirely upon original research and thorough examination of contemporary records, manuscripts, political pamphlets, newspapers, etc., which deal with this unique Commonwealth among the States of our Union. The publishers are justly proud of "The English Works of George Herbert," in three volumes, arranged, annotated and considered in relation to his life, by George Herbert Palmer, and they have also made a large paper edition in six volumes of this critically speaking final edition of Herbert's work. A novel and interesting feature in the books is the printing of the poems on the right side of the page, with the notes, etc., facing them on the left. The centenary of the birth of the great anti-slavery reformer occurs during the Christmas season, and no more welcome gift could be given to a veteran male relative than "The Words of William Lloyd Garrison," a centennial selection, 1805-1905. A brief sketch of Mr. Garrison's life and a fine photogravure portrait add to the value and interest of the book for the general reader, while the appendix, with its list of the best authentic portraits of Garrison, its bibliography of works by and about him, and its chronology of the principal events in his carrer will be especially appreciated by librarians. Among the fiction recently published by the Riverside Press are some "gems of purest ray." Kate Douglas Wiggin's "Rose o' the River" gives a background of Maine village life to the story of Rose and her shiftless grandfather, which of course is wholesome and full of humor and pathos; and Alice Brown in "Paradise" takes her characters bodily from country firesides and gives us in "Barbara," an escaped circus palmist and conjuror, one of the most charming heroines she has ever drawn, full of religious sense and genuine human appeal; Margaret Sherwood in "The Coming of the Tide" writes a fine study in heredity and the contrast of temperament between a Southern girl, strong of character, and a New England dreamer and vague philosopher, of which the scene is again the Maine coast; and a very original story is told in letters in Persis Mather's "Counsels of a Worldly Grandmother," which is full of humor, wit and sparkle, but also full of much-needed lessons.

BAD BREAKS AND EXCUSES.

B. W. Huebsch, New York City, brings out "Christian Origins," by the Rev. Dr. Otto Pfleiderer, of the University of Berlin, the result of forty years of critical research, much of which has been offered in lectures and has commanded the attention of all scholars and thinkers; and "The Peril of Change," essays written in time of tranquillity, by C. F. G. Masterman, of Cambridge, England. He has provided for the Christmas season two books of interest to the music lover in "Beethoven, the Man and the Artist, as revealed in his own work," and "Mozart, the Man and the Artist, as revealed in his own work." Both books were compiled and annotated by Friedrich Kerst, a noted German musical writer, and have been translated into English with the consent of the author, and edited, with new introductions and additional notes, by Henry Edward Krehbiel, the well-known writer and critic, who has verified all the references and amplified many of the annotations by means of the rare documents in his possession. In these volumes are gathered the utterances of Beethoven and Mozart on the important events of their lives, their views of their art, estimates of other composers and opinions of their own works, religious views, etc. These are classed under such chapter headings as "Concerning Art," "Chips from the Workshop" and "Love and Friendship," and each quotation is followed by a statement of the source whence it is taken and the circumstances under which it was said or written. Two books that know straight where to go are "The Poetry and Philosophy of Browning" and "The Poetry and Philosophy of Tennyson," by Edward Howard Griggs, collections of lectures on the poets uniform with those on "The Divine Comedy of Dante."

"JEST WAIT TILL DICK ENDICOTT'S A CAP'N."

HURST & COMPANY this season have a decided novelty in their Burnt Leather editions of the classics and of the poets. These include a choice selection of clasic literature adapted for presentation or keepsake purposes, each volume being bound in ooze calf with hand-painted floral and scenic designs, the titles being done by a graphic process. There are about seventy titles, including the best work of world-famous authors. As an inexpensive and handsome present these books will commend themselves to a large circle of readers. Hurst's Padded Editions of the Poets include about fifty titles, each volume being bound in embossed padded leather, with gilt edges and attractive cover designs. Hurst's Gilt Top Library edition of eminent authors is an excellent collection of the works of well-known writers in neat cloth bindings, including upwards of 250 titles. The Cambridge Classics, a collection of neat 16mo volumes, is put up in new styles, the covers being embellished with inlaid medallion portraits lithographed in eight colors. The Laurelhurst series, the Half-leather Classics, the Ideal series of Standard Classics, the Devotional Classics and the Presentation series are all sixteenmos, bound in various styles, and from them may be selected the best of English standards at exceedingly low price, making good presents for every season of the year. Their Half-leather, Standard Authors is a very attractive edition, bound in library style, half leather, with gilt tops. Their Arlington series of twelvemos, in new bindings, is perhaps the lowest priced edition of standard authors bound in cloth, including 150 titles. In addition to these Hurst & Co. also publish a variety of standard works in sets, dictionaries and manuals, recitation books and hand books, and Sunday-school Teachers' Reference Bibles at low prices. They also handle the famous "Peck" books, by George W. Peck, and Habberton's "Helen's Babies," elaborately illustrated. Among the very newest of the many series and styles are the Almonte Library of Popular Fiction into which they have put 100 of the best-loved novels: and a series of Mirthful Books In Up-to-date Slang.

GEORGE W. JACOBS & Co. have a perfectly delightful offering for the holidays in "Shakespeare's Sweetheart" in which Sara Hawks Sterling has written the love story of William Shakespeare and Anne Hathaway in such quaint and winning style that it almost suggests the dainty comedies of the great poet. Most of the incidents are nearly enough correct historically to give one the illusion of a biography. The scheme is one of novelty and cleverness. The plot makes Ben Jonson appear in Stratford and ask Anne Hathaway to tell him her love story. This he writes out and files away in a London vault where it has only just been discovered and given to the public. The book is set within marginal decorations and has illustrations in color by Clara Elsene Peck. This is a really poetic work and will please all who love Shakespeare and true literary pleasure. Very clever books are "Phases, Mazes and Crazes of Love" and its new companion volume, "Knocks, Witty, Wise and —," both by Minna Thomas Antrim who in this has made a collection of a hundred epigrams which give knocks to most of the faults and shams of society, and lets very little escape her trained eye and pert tongue. The book is all in colors with different decorations on every page and the whole makes a jolly, rollicking book that will go straight to a man's heart and from which he can quote the year round. To the same class of friend appeals "That Reminds Me," the net book with the regular discount, which contains the pith and marrow of about 2000 stories worth telling. If any man learns these stories he will be welcome in a jolly party where he can begin each one in turn with the stereotype phrase "That Reminds Me." Many clever ways of amusing friends in the social holiday season are suggested in Mrs. Herbert B. Linscott's "Bright Ideas for Entertaining" in which each suggestion is fully explained, making the book very practical. An important series to be called the American crisis biographies is inaugurated by the John Randolph Spears's "David G. Farragut." It presents the life of the first admiral of the U. S. Navy from the time he was a backwoods boy through his many commands and battles down to the famous battle of Mobile Bay, which made him world-renowned. A fine bibliography adds value to the book.

WILLIAM R. JENKINS offers some publications from which very pleasing Christmas gifts may be selected. "Japanese for Daily Use," by E. P. Prentys, assisted by Kametoso Sasamoto, gives a convenient selection of words, sentences and items of importance for those planning a trip to Japan. "Daily Thoughts in French from French Authors," compiled by Jerome Marguerite de Bouvet, is put into pretty and neat limp leather binding. Edmund Clarence Stedman's "Complete Pocket Guide to Europe" is always a good present both for those who have seen and those who hope to see the beautiful things of the old world; "Simple Rules for Bridge," by K. N. Steele, really sheds some light on this difficult and widely popular game, and there are "Bridge Count Pads"; and "French Calendars" and many more gifts for those who study French and play games and like pretty things that show their friends know that they are not among those who "grind" but have time for culture and enjoyment.

JOHN LANE COMPANY, The Bodley Head, have The International Studio, the illustrated magazine of fine and applied art, and nothing could be better for a friend of artistic tastes than a subscription to this great art magazine. It is the aim of The International Studio to treat of every art and craft—architecture, sculpture, painting, ceramics, metal, glass, furniture, decoration, design, bookbinding, illustrating, photography, lithography, enamel, jewelry, needlework, gardening, etc. The principal writers on art are contributors to its pages. Many original illustrations, reproduced in every variety of black and white process, half-tone, line, photogravure, etc., are to be found in each number. Color plates of real value are to be found in every issue. Very fine supplements to this magazine are also issued in wrappers and make luxurious art offerings. Among the latest of these is "Mansions of England in Other Times," by Joseph Nash; and "Art in Photography," containing select examples of fine English and American work. Sets of the works of Borrow, Beaconsfield and Trollope in the New Pocket Library edition would be most suitable to present to a lover of the old style fiction that holds so exalted a place in English literature; and the new fiction on the list of the house is also selected with discrimination. Among the best novels they have issued this year are "The Morals of Marcus Ordeyne," by William J. Locke, a story that bears the hall mark of genius, has a fine moral problem and a humor that is dainty and delightful; "A Child of the Shore," a romance of Cromwell by S. M. Fox; "A Prince to Order," a story of double identity by Charles Stokes Wayne; and "The Ford," by Arthur E. J. Legge. The most beautiful poems of the English language are gotten up in exquisite bindings in the various libraries on the lists of the Bodley Head. The Lovers' Library has added the poems of Browning, Burns, Byron, Herrick, Shelley and Tennyson; and admission to the dainty Flowers of Parnassus has been granted to Tennyson's "Maud," Keats's "Isabella, or, the Pot of Basil," William Morris's "Defence of Guinevere," James Hogg's "Kilmeny," and Elizabeth Chapman's "A Little Child's Wreath." Any of these little classics would make a very select Christmas offering. In a new library called The Sacred Treasury are "The Poems of John Henry Newman;" "Divine Considerations," by John Valdesso; "The Hundred Best Poems of John and Charles Wesley;" and "The Spirit of Love," by William Law, and all teachers looking for Christmas gifts for their Sunday-school children of larger growth cannot go amiss in choosing from this newly-opened treasury. For friends of sporting tastes and love of domestic animals do not forget the Country Handbooks, of which the latest are devoted to the "Kennel," the "Gunroom" and the "Stable." Handbooks of Practical Gardening also make useful and acceptable gifts. The house also pays much attention to works on music, and volumes on Henry J. Wood, Sir Edward Elgar and Joseph Joachim are ready in their Living Masters of Music Series. In every department of literature this house selects the best. The advertising pages and the lists of holiday books must be studied.

J. B. Lippincott Company were fortunate when they began to publish their True Biographies, every volume of the six thus far issued having taken its place among the eminently successful books. This year Cyrus Townsend Brady has written "The True Andrew Jackson," which has already been described in our front pages. A very remarkable book that will make many break the tenth commandment and will probably be bought by many who can ill afford it is "Newport, Our Social Capital," by Mrs. John King Van Rensselaer, who certainly knows every side of Newport life, and has made a special study of its history, both as a place and as a great social institution. She has prepared a record of some of the most brilliant chapters in American fashionable life, and her pages are crowded with distinguished names. The publishers bring out the Newport book in a style that will gain it admission to the costliest drawing-rooms of the great watering place. It has a frontispiece in color by Henry Hutt, many illustrations in photogravure and double-tone and from drawings by Edwards Stratton Holloway. It is printed on Arnold's hand-made paper specially manufactured for this book, and it is bound in English buckram with design in gold. The limited edition is in full levant. "Lippincott's New Gazetteer" is an ideal Christmas offering if one can pay the price, which is truly reasonable when the vast amount of work put into this dictionary of universal geography is considered. Angelo and Louis Heilprin have done the revision. Pages of praise could say no more than just the names of these learned and conscientious scientists. Any one with a love of good poetry and the love of a good horse must welcome "Saddle and Song," an anthology of the best verse about the horse by well-known writers of the English language which has been put into a handsome book lavishly illustrated. Very much the same kind of friend will delight in "What Of It?" by Nettie Seeley Murphy, who did such clever work in "Isn't It So?" "What Of It?" is full of caustic wit, shrewd observations of men, women and life generally and humorous transpositions of popular proverbs. It is illustrated by Swinnerton. "Italian Days and Ways," by Anne Hollingsworth Wharton, is written in a series of letters by one of a party of three young women who travel through the less frequented Italian towns as well as the large cities, and take note of quaint customs and curious incidents by the way, and casually a charming love story is revealed in these happy and spontaneous letters, so full of literary and artistic and historic allusion; Louis Becke has in "Notes from My South Sea Log" again produced a series of capital sketches of life on shipboard and on the islands which he knows better than any other living writer; "The Old Road," by H. Belloc, is a superb volume, giving a fascinating review of the great English roads of long ago, with many illustrations and some maps; "The Fields of France," by Mary Du Claux, give charming descriptions of the French country famous in history, especially of poet-sung Brittany, with illustrations in color by W. B. MacDougall; "Facts and Fancies About Java," are told by Augusta De Witt; "Round About Pekin," by Mrs. Archibald Little, with several hundred illustrations, is superb; and "Primitive Art in Egypt," by Jean Caport, has been translated by A. S. Griffith and furnished with 208 illustrations for the most part direct reproductions of photographs. Much information is conveyed in most attractive form in Olga Ragster's "Chats on Violins;" in Hilda Skae's "Life of Mary, Queen of Scots;" in Charles Morris's "The Discoverers and Explorers of America;" in C. C. Bombaugh's "Facts and Fancies for the Curious;" and in "Natural History in Zoological Gardens," by Frank E. Beddard, giving an account of 117 animals admirably illustrated from accurate photographs. "An Orchard Princess," by Ralph Henry Barbour, is worthy to take its place beside the author's "Kitty of the Roses," one of the most popular gift books of last season; and an especially beautiful edition has been made of John Luther Long's "Miss Cherry Blossom of Tôkyô," with nine full-page illustrations in colors and tints, lining papers of cherry blossoms and everything gorgeously Japanese in the way of cover and ornamental box. The French Men of Letters series, edited by Alexander Jessup, commends itself at once to literary people. It is modelled on Morley's English Men of Letters series, and introduces itself with a volume on "Montaigne," by Edward Dowden; and one on "Balzac," by Ferdinand Brunetière, both model biographies by recognized authorities on their subjects. Scientific and medical works are also specialties of this house, and they have recently published some very good fiction, for details of which the advertising pages in this issue must be consulted. There are new stories by E. F. Benson and Rosa Nouchette Carey, both always sure to please all their old admirers.

"YOU SUNG THAT SONG WELL."

LITTLE, BROWN & Co. have made a very beautiful holiday gift book of Lilian Whiting's "The Florence of Landor," which has already been fully described. Specially timely, in view of all the honors lately bestowed upon Paul Jones, is Captain Mahan's new work on "Sea Power in Its Relations to the War of 1812," which appears in two volumes, with photogravure frontispieces, maps, plans and twenty-three full-page plates in half-tone from original illustrations by Stanley M. Arthurs. Captain Mahan presents in a series of vivid pictures the stirring events of the war, and brings to his work the knowledge acquired in a lifetime of expert study, together with an exceptional command of government and private documents, and in such vital matters as the impressment of American seamen and privateer records he has been able to make valuable additions to the world's knowledge. The work is a contribution to American history of the very highest value. George Wharton James, the author of "In and Out of the Old Missions of California," has sought to show the conditions of the Indians before and after the Mission epoch, and has devoted special work to the architecture of the Missions, the story of the Ramona as related to the Missions, and to a pictorial account of the various figures of the saints at the Missions. The illustrations have been reproduced from photographs which were practically made expressly for the book either by the author himself or his friend, C. C. Pierce, of Los Angeles. The chapter on the origin of the Mission architecture was especially written for the work by the author's coworker on The Craftsman magazine, Miss Irene Sargent. A Christmas book that will not go begging is "Ramona," in the Pasadena edition, with photogravure portrait of Helen Hunt Jackson and full-page pictures and chapter headings by Henry Sandham, and an introduction by the late Susan Coolidge. "Two in Italy" is the title of Maud Howe's new book, and it is a worthy successor of her "Roma Beata," the pronounced holiday success of last season, and is equally well illustrated by John Elliott. For lovers of history most welcome gifts will be "The True Story of Paul Revere," by Charles F. Gettemy; "The Brothers' War," by John C. Reed, with chapters on Webster, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," Calhoun and Toombs; and "The Fight for Canada," a sketch from the history of the Great Imperial War by William Wood, president of the literary and historical society of Quebec, very handsomely issued, with portraits, maps and plans of battles. This house has had luck in securing good fiction this year, and if friends like novels nothing better can be found than "The Ballingtons," by Frances Squire, a study of married life in two families, in one of which the husband, in the other the wife, is the financial power; "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," a clever story by Anne Warner, author of "Susan Clegg," telling of adventures in New York City and of the pranks of Aunt Mary's nephew Jack and his chums; "The Divining Rod," a story of the oil regions by Francis N. Thorpe; "The Breath of the Gods," a story of Japan and Washington, by the ever-popular author of "Truth Dexter;" and "Justin Wingate, Ranchman," by John H. Whitson, a present-day Western story presenting the bitter struggles between the Colorado ranchmen and the farmers. Anna Payson Call's "A Man of the World," and Lilian Whiting's "The Joy That No Man Taketh from You" are full of helpful thoughts on life; just the thing to give away in the season that, above all else, teaches unselfishness and true happiness.

LONGMANS, GREEN & COMPANY are fortunate in their holiday offerings. Their leading book of travel is "Two Years in the Antarctic," written by Lieut. Albert B. Armitage, who was second in command of the Discovery in 1901-1904 and of the Jackson-Harmsworth polar expedition in 1894-1897. In this volume he recounts the history of the Discovery's voyage, the hardships and perils, the amusements and good fellowship of these two years near the South Pole, and the results of the expedition. Excellent illustrations and a map make very real this record of daring and pluck. More nearly within the possibilities of most of us is a trip to Spain, and for the intending traveller as well as the arm-chair tourist, we recommend the New Edition of Jerome Hart's "Two Argonauts in Spain," with its numerous pleasing pictures. Written in most entertaining style, it narrates the adventures of two companions in Alhambraland, the letters having been first published in the San Francisco Argonaut. "Cuba and the Intervention" brings us still nearer home. Here we have a critical, impartial account of the American intervention in Cuba and the consequent events, by Albert G. Robinson who has written after close observation and just weighing of facts. A notable addition to the year's books is William Morris's Earthly Paradise," in a fine New Edition, printed in large type and on light wove paper, with introduction by J. W. Mackail with whose "Life" of Morris this is a uniform edition. The four gilt-topped volumes may be had in a box. "American Familiar Verse (Vers de Société)" is a representative collection, selected and edited by Brander Matthews with discriminating and critical judgment. Good fiction in attractive form is always acceptable as gifts. From a long list bearing the Longmans' imprint we may mention Stanley J. Weyman's "Starvecrow Farm," a stirring romance of rural England in the early 19th century, centering in an elopement. "Shakespeare's Christmas" is a delightful collection of short stories by Quiller-Couch; M. E. Francis's (Mrs. Blundell's) "Wild Wheat" is a Dorset love-story in the author's happiest vein; and "Glenanaar," by Father Sheehan, has a setting taken from Irish history at the time when the Fenian uprisings were convulsing the country. The plot hinges on the trial of an "informer" and introduces Daniel O'Connell as the advocate. For a friend of hunting tastes always combined with love of dogs W. G. Eley's "Retrievers and Retrieving" will strike the right chord. It divulges all about early training, work in the field, kennel management and observations of long experience. "My object," the author says, "has been to interest the novice, not to instruct the expert, who is able to break his retrievers without any assistance from me."

take from that class the work they desire to sell most during the holidays. "The Boss of Little Arcady," by Harry Leon Wilson, has already been fully described in these pages. "The Little Green Door," by Mrs. Mary E. Stone Bassett, is a romantic love story that opens in the beautiful private garden of Louis XI. The lovely heroine who is living near it, under the protection of her nurse, is permitted to enter it by the old gardener, through "the little green door." She meets the king unexpectedly in one of her visits, and not knowing who he is, loses her heart to him. He is also deeply fascinated by the charming, innocent girl, many intense scenes of love making being the result. "A Daughter of the South," by George Cary Eggleston, is a romance of the last months of the Civil War when the Mississippi was once more opened to navigation. A refugee Southern girl and a young Kentuckian buying cotton fall in love and the plot tells of lawless speculators and plundering merchants who made the most out of the United States Government and the ruined Southerners. A novel of heart and feeling with much humor and of strong general interest is "David Ransom's Watch," by Mrs. G. R. Alden, whose books are always most eagerly read. "Italy: Her People and Their Story," by Augusta Hale Gifford, is an ideal popular history for the general reader, fully illustrated; and the "Handbook of United States Political History," by Malcolm Townsend, is a book for the library table and office desk that will be as often consulted as the dictionary. Very acceptable Christmas gifts may be made of "The Joys of Friendship," compiled by Mary Attelle Ayer, editor of the "Daily Cheer Year Book," which is most dainty in appearance and contents and looks quite imposing in its de luxe edition in burnt leather binding; of "Life More Abundant," by Henry Wood, which gives scriptural truth in modern application and is a most able study of the Bible from a New Thought point of view; and of "The Only True Mother Goose," which is an exact reprint of the original edition published in Boston in 1833, for which Dr. Edward Everett Hale has prepared an introduction.

JOHN W. LUCE & COMPANY provide for those wise people that occasionally pause in the mad race and take a few hours off to enjoy themselves and see how it rests them to be "foolish" for a little. For such is "The Foolish Almanack," by Nixon Waterman, George Barr McCutcheon, W. D. Nesbit, Arthur E. Parke, Virginia Van De Water and others, containing humorous chronological data, strange weather predictions, odd points on astronomical phenomena, tides and horoscopes; absurdly funny hints on farming, health, beauty, fashion, household matters and much wisdom and foolishness not found in any other almanack, very attractively printed in two colors and liberally illustrated by Wallace Goldsmith, who has also amusingly depicted the troubles and phases of the moon. Any one who knows of the telegraph business will appreciate "All By Wire," a telegraphic explanation of a telepathic union of hearts by Frank P. Sibley, a volume of 100 telegrams which pass principally between a young man and woman who are entirely unknown to each other, but have been obliged to resort to the wire as a means of recovering their luggage, each having taken the other's by mistake in leaving a sleeping car. They are introduced by the telegrams of a happily discovered mutual friend, carry on an odd courtship, become engaged, receive her father's blessing—and all by wire, not meeting until the last telegram is exchanged. The telegrams are facsimiles of Postal Telegraph and Western Union messages, both day and night, done in the four colors required for correct reproduction.

McClure, Phillips & Co. call special attention to "I. N. R. I.," (Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews), under which title appears a prisoner's story of the Cross which has already been described fully in our front pages. When looking for fiction, remember this house has some excellent stories and the theme of most of them is American. "The Ancient Landmark," by Elizabeth Cherry Waltz, is a stirring Kentucky tale, of which the plot hinges on the fact that the heroine is forbidden by the laws of Kentucky to divorce her maniac husband; "The Work of Our Hands," by H. A. Mitchell Keays, is a powerful story of an American woman's struggle against the shams of religion and the selfishness of wealth when she has married a millionaire mill owner's son and wants use of her wealth to better the condition of his people; "The Pang Yanger," by Dr. Elma A. Travis, has its scene in the Catskill Mountains, and has a plot of great ingenuity and some very delightful pictures of the elemental people of the regions the author tells of; and "The Fortunes of the Landrays," by Vaughan Kester, is a big panoramic story of American life, almost epic in its handling, which treats of the great West and all that happened to four generations of a family that battled with Indians, sought gold, fought in the Civil War and were affected by the "frenzied finance" of the present times. The new automobile romance called "My Friend the Chauffeur," by C. N. and A. M. Williamson, of "Lightning Conductor" fame, tells of a young Irish nobleman who finds himself stranded at Monte Carlo with an automobile on his hands. To raise money he advertises to take a select party on a tour, and gets a widow, a daughter and a niece to tour with him and a newspaper friend into Dalmatia, etc. The resulting complications are delightfully humorous and ingeniously imagined. For friends who had the privilege to live when there were homes and little red wooden school houses and open fireplaces Eugene Wood's "Back Home," with illustrations by A. B. Frost, will be a delightful book. Every one who ever had a country home will laugh and cry over these casual, almost lazy sketches of "the house that I remember." A delightfully humorous pictorial panorama of recent events and the people that have taken part in them is contained in John T. McCutcheon's hundred drawings called "The Mysterious Stranger, and Other Cartoons." The artist is cartoonist on the Chicago Tribune, and he has been called the "Mr. Dooley" of the pencil in public affairs. Sporting tastes are considered in "The Horse in America," by John Gilmer Speed. It gives a brief account of the progenitors of the horse, and then takes up every breed for which our country has been noted—Kentucky and Denmark saddle horses, Clay Arabians, Morgans, mules, thoroughbreds, etc. The chapters on "How to Buy a Horse," "The Stable and Its Management," "Riding and Driving," "Training Horses vs. Breaking Them," are full of first-hand knowledge every horse owner will appreciate. Mr. Speed is a practical horse breeder whose expert assistance has frequently been sought by the United States Government. If golf is the favorite sport, give "The Complete Golfer," by Harry Vardon, three times English open champion and once American open champion, who certainly knows all about golf and has the faculty of imparting his knowledge. He goes into the subject with a thoroughness that begins with the very position of the hands on the club, and overlooks no fine point in the player's progress, from the hitting of the ball to the strategy of the game. The stance for every stroke with every club is indicated and illustrated with a photograph and a diagram of foot placements and distances between the ball, head of the club and feet. The book contains also an interesting account of Mr. Vardon's own golfing experiences.

A. C. McClurg & Co. have an ideal book to present to friends that have the modern craze for gardening and out-door life. It is an idyl entitled "A Garden in Pink," telling the story of two young married lovers and their delight in making their garden. They decided that everything was to be pink; even the gardener who looked on them with amazement, for gardeners take slower than most people to new fads and fancies, was brought to change his name from John Brown to Giovanni Pincolini, lest any color but pink should be named among the plants. This pretty love story is written by Blanche Elizabeth Wade, and entering fully into the spirit of her little tale Lucy Fitch Perkins has furnished pink illustrations with their accompanying necessarily green attendants. Among suitable gift publications is "With Shelley in Italy," invaluable as a guide or reference book, edited, with introduction, by Anna Benneson McMahan, and enriched with sixty illustrations from photographs, of which there is also a Large Paper edition in bindings rich, richer, richest, as long as one's means can command. "Bishop Spalding's Year Book," compiled by Minnie R. Cowan, certainly can draw from an ever pure and inexhaustible source for its suggestive, inspiriting quotations; a second series of "Catchwords of Cheer," compiled by Sara A. Hubbard, will no doubt enjoy as great a success as her first series of cheerful thought for each day of the year; and a very handsome offering is "Christmas Bells," with verses by Mary Drummond, and illustrations in colors by Louisa Gibson Pratt. If you want to give a novel, examine "Ben Blair," by Will Lillibridge, a new writer, who shows vitality and originality in his stirring story of a Western cowboy, who has an appealing combination of strength and gentleness; or, "A Sword of the Old Frontier," a story of the Conspiracy of Pontiac by Randall Parrish, illustrated by F. C. Yohn; or, "The Secret of Wold Hall," by Evelyn Everett Green, who writes a most romantic story of life in a mining country and gives satisfactory solutions to all the anxieties and suspicions of a young wife. A popular introduction to the knowledge and understanding of Japanese art may be found in Stewart Dick's "Arts and Crafts of Old Japan," which puts wonderful quantities of information in a very compact form. Lovers of travel will rejoice in "Far Eastern Impressions: Japan, Corea and China," by Ernest F. G. Hatch, with 88 illustrations from photographs; "Home Life in France," by Mrs. Betham-Edwards, illustrated from photographs; and "In the Land of the Strenuous Life," a spirited and interesting view of America as seen through the scholarly French eyes of Abbé Felix Klein, translated for us that we may see how well a Frenchman knows what we do stand for and what we might make ourselves stand for in the great world.

WHEN YOU ARE ENGAGED.

DAVID MCKAY has made ready for the holidays three different editions of "Shakespeare." The Handy Stratford edition gives the complete dramatic and poetical works with life, index to characters and glossary in thirteen volumes, with the text of W. G. Clark and W. A. Wright, printed from new plates and bound in fine cloth or in cochineal fine grain leather, or seal, and boxed to match in all these shapes. The Gollancz edition is a complete reprint of the English Temple edition, with vocabulary and notes to each volume, by Israel Gollancz, and printed in the largest type possible in a handy volume set. It is in ten illustrated volumes. And then there is the Reader's edition in eight volumes, with explanatory notes by Malone, Steevens, Reed, Johnson and others, together with biography and index to characters and a concordance covering 3200 familiar passages. This set is illustrated with steel engravings and also has portraits of modern actors from special photographs. Almost any favorite book may be found in a new line of books very neatly gotten up that is to be called for as The World's Famous Literature. John R. Green's "History of the English People" is as interesting as a novel and will please any man of thought and character as much as any thing you can offer him. There are also new additions to those fine libraries of useful art books entitled The Handicraft Series, The Technical Instruction Series, and The Devotional Handbook Series.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY publish in every field of literature, the quantity of their books is staggering and the quality always of highest merit. Choice is difficult. Personal taste must decide. We can only mention which of their books would please us as Christmas gifts. F. Marion Crawford's "Venice" with illustrations by Joseph Pennell, a handsome work in two volumes has already beeen described. "The Life and Writings of Benjamin Franklin" in ten volumes, edited by Albert H. Smyth, Philadelphia, is ready in a limited library edition of ten volumes with many portraits and other illustrations, a rich treasure for all American history students and most timely when the country is preparing for the 200th birthday of this great American. "The works of Maurice Hewlett," eleven volumes are also put into a limited edition uniform with the works of Walter Pater and Matthew Arnold. Art works of great value include "The History of American Painting," by Samuel Isham, edited by John C. Van Dyke, which is brought out uniform with Taft's History of American Art"; and Elson's "History of American Sculpture," with twelve full-page photogravures and 100 illustrations in the text; "Pre-Raphaelitism and the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood," by William Holman Hunt in two richly illustrated volumes uniform with "The Memorials of Burne-Jones" published last season; "Character of Renaissance Architecture," by Prof. Charles Herbert Moore, the author of "The Development of Gothic Architecture," with twelve plates in photogravure and 139 text illustrations; "A Wanderer In Holland," by E. V. Lucas with twenty illustrations in color by Herbert Marshall and thirty-four illustrations after Dutch Old Masters; and Alfred Austin's "The Garden I Love," in which the Poet Laureate's poems are set off with sixteen full-page illustrations in color by George S. Elgood. Fine art work and the finest literature of the world are combined in "English Literature: an Illustrated Record," the work of Dr. Richard Garnett and Edmund Gosse, now complete in four volumes with a superb body of illustrated material. If your friends love travel and adventure the Macmillans offer Miss Agnes Laut's "Vikings of the Pacific," richly illustrated, virtually a continuation of her "Pathfinders of the West," or, B. L. Putnam-Weale's "The Re-shaping of the Far East"; or, James Outram's "In the Heart of the Canadian Rockies," a section comparatively unknown even to sportsmen, all illustrated and of great text-interest as well. Outdoor sport and work are covered by Edwin Sandys' "Sporting Sketches"; W. S. Harwood's "New Creation in Plant Life," which gives an authoritative account of the life and work of Luther Burbank of whose success in creating new varieties of flowers, no detailed account has been published before; and "A Self-Supporting Home," in which Mrs. Saint Maur describes how she set about establishing a self-supporting home in the country without one cent of capital, trusting only to hard work directed to raising profit from the soil of her little piece of land. Much thought is now given to the problem of right living, keeping in view the best efforts of mind and body and our responsibility for the conditions of life about us in home and country, and dealing with these lines of thought are "Rational Living," by Henry C. King, President of Oberlin College, who draws his practical conclusions from modern psychology; "Jesus Christ and the Christian Character," by Prof. Francis Greenwood Peabody, of Harvard University; and Henry George, Jr. "The Menace of Privilege," which covers the whole ground of social economic conditions in America and teaches many lessons needed to correct our besetting sins of exaggeration and extravagance. For those who best like fiction the house has been generous. F. Marion Crawford has written another of his joy-giving tales of modern life in modern Italy about a woman singer and calls it "Fair Margaret;" a "Miss Desmond" is a novel of society life by Marie Van Vorst, who did such good work in "The Woman Who Toils;" "Heart's Desire," by Emerson Hough, is a perfect love-story of a contented town, certain peculiar citizens and two fortunate lovers; and "The Fair Maid of Greystones," by Beulah Marie Dix, is a historical novel of the year 1648, and the author again tells one of her strong, vigorous tales of the Cavaliers and Roundheads. No more bewitching heroine has appeared for many days than "Yolanda: the Maid of Burgundy," described by Charles Major, who is ever welcome since he gave us "When Knighthood Was In Flower"; and "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," and who again tells a most romantic story of the days when Louis XI. ruled France and Edward IV. ruled England, and Charles the Bold made all the trouble he could think of in both those war-ridden countries. A novel for men is "The Road Builders," by Samuel Merwin, one of the joint authors of "Calumet K," and "The Short-Line War" and he again tells a railroad story of what men did and dared in opening up the Great West by means of laying tracks in most unpromising natural conditions, made worse by most dangerous intervention of human craft and jealousy. No book has provoked more discussion this year than Elizabeth Robins's "The Dark Lantern," a most original story of the psychology of love in man and woman told in masterly manner and this book also bears the Macmillan imprint.

MANZI, JOYANT & Co. (Goupil & Co.) have as usual the magnificent volume of "Goupil's Paris Salon" for the current year. Issued in the same sumptuous style as its predecessors, in an edition of limited numbered de luxe copies, this beautiful volume presents the most remarkable paintings and sculptures shown in the Salon exhibitions of 1905, by means of reproductions and descriptive text. There are over one hundred full-page illustrations, including several hand-finished water color facsimiles, remarque proof etchings and a tinted photogravure, while the text is written by the well known French critic Maurice Hamel, and the English translation is by Paul Villars. There are 500 copies of the French text edition, of which but 75 are reserved for America, and 150 copies of the English text edition. Two other notable art works are offered by this firm. "Marie-Caroline, Duchesse de Berry, 1816-1830," by the Vicomte de Reiset, is a new volume in Goupil's Historical series, a stately quarto with beautiful illustrations comprising 50 hand painted goupilgravures, text illustrations, head and tail pieces, and two hand-finished water color facsimiles—all devoted to the courtly and sprightly figures who moved through the brilliant scenes of the French Restoration. It is issued in an edition of 130 copies on Imperial Japanese vellum paper and one of 800 copies on special hand-made vellum paper, reservations of 30 and 75 copies respectively having been made for this country. The other work is a presentation of "British Portrait Painters and Engravers of the Eighteenth Century," running from Kneller to Reynolds, for which Edmund Gosse has furnished an introductory essay and biographical notes. The most famous productions of this period of British art are here shown in a remarkable series of illustrations, including reproductions direct from the original paintings and exquisite renderings of the choicest of the old mezzotints. This volume also is a limited publication, with 100 copies on imperial Japanese paper (30 copies for America), and 400 copies on vellum hand-made paper, with 100 copies for the American market.

OLE ANN.

G. & C. MERRIAM COMPANY, Springfield, Mass., assert quietly each year without fear of contradiction or dispute that "Webster's International Dictionary" is the best Christmas gift on the market and if one does not already own this useful reliable, attractive, lasting, up-to-date and authoritative dictionary their claim cannot be disputed. Its 2380 pages show 5000 illustrations. It has recently been enlarged with 25,000 new words, a new Gazetteer, and a new Biographical Dictionary, edited by W. T. Harris, and it won the Grand Prize at the St. Louis World's Fair. The Webster is now a standard in the United States Supreme Court and in all the courts of the nation, as well as in the colleges and public schools. If a smaller book is wanted, all the words he will ever require can be presented to a student friend in "Webster's Collegiate Dictionary," the largest of the many abridgments, a book unsurpassed for convenience and steady use.

MOFFAT, YARD & Co. present an attractive array of holiday books, notable for their art features. The first collection ever made of Howard Chandler Christy's celebrated drawings is published as "The Christy Book," in a handsome oblong volume, finely printed and bound in white vellum with a charming "Christy girl" smiling on the cover. The drawings are a remarkable and varied asssortment, representative to the full of Mr. Christy's powers. They include the famous "summer girl" series, the sympathetic portrayal of musical life, characteristic pictures of society life and dainty sentiment, the well known war drawings, and spirited sketches of frontier life. The volume is remarkable in its range of sympathy and of subject, and as an example of the work of one of the foremost American illustrators. Tom Masson, the editor of Life, is represented by an attractive volume entitled "A Corner in Women, and Other Follies," in which are gathered sketches, dialogues, verses, and dainty essays, title, it will win the heart of the holiday book-buyer. Art lovers also will welcome the new and beautiful edition of that classic for young and old, Æsop's Fables, with an introduction by Elisabeth Luther Cary, and remarkable color illustrations by J. M. Condé, who has succeeded in a wonderful degree in all bubbling with laughter and sentiment, hiding wholesome truth under the guise of extravagant fun, and expounding every day philosophy with satirical charm. Mr. Masson's themes centre in home and love, and the daily round of work and play, and they are interpreted in a series of over sixty illustrations in line and half-tone, by such artists as Gibson, Flagg, Blashfield and Gilbert. In its binding of green and gold, with a Gibson cover design, carrying out the conceit of the imparting human characteristics to the animals he portrays; and the charming Centenary edition of Hans Christian Andersen's masterpiece, "The Ugly Duckling," daintily bound, with exquisite color illustrations and black and white drawings by M. H. Squire. A striking novel of American life by a new writer is offered in "Stork's Nest." J. Breckenridge Ellis has chosen Northern Missouri as the setting for this tale of sentiment, mystery and humor, and he has produced a book of strong dramatic quality and abiding interest. "Stork's Nest" is the house of mystery, where the brothers Stork move as chief actors in a series of absorbing and perplexing incidents, all woven into an effective plot. The Middle West again is the scene of another story in lighter vein—"The Larkins Wedding," which Alice McAlilly has invested with charming sprightliness, gayety and wholesome shrewd philosophy. Its lively plot ends in a complete and most ingenious surprise. Of great interest in a novel field is Eleanor Hoyt Brainerd's "In Vanity Fair," a brilliantly written chronicle of the making and unmaking of modern fashions, of Paris as arbiter of woman's dress, of Worth and the famous ateliers in which "style" is created, of all the channels of vanity, frivolity, social ambition and shrewdness which make up the full stream of modern fashion; a more serious contribution to the history of our own times is made in Richard Barry's absorbing narrative of "Port Arthur: a Monster Heroism," giving in vivid panorama the story of that wonderful siege, with many illustrations from snapshot photographs; while literature finds representation in Henry Lane Eno's strong poetic drama of Italy, "The Baglioni." There is besides a varied array of charming colored drawings and calendars from which to choose holiday remembrance. For separate titles see the advertising pages.

THOMAS B MOSHER, Portland, Me., makes a line of books for gift purposes that he chooses personally from the world's greatest literature and then has manufactured into little booklets that show the very finest technique of up-to-date bookmaking. They are printed on Japan vellum and bound in delicately tinted paper with turn over edges or in the finest of flexible leather of the most artistic coloring. The most fastidious literary and artistic friends can be satisfied with treasures from Mosher's establishment. Look at Fiona McLeod's "The Isle of Dreams," and Sir Philip Sidney's "Astrophel and Stella" in the Old World Series; Oscar Wilde's "The Fisherman and His Soul," and Marcel Schob's "The Children's Crusade" in the Brocade Series; and "A Little Garden of Celtic Verse," and "A Little Garden of Christmas Verse" are in The Lyric Garden Series. Ask to see Mosher's publications if you want something exquisite for a friend able to appreciate it. The Mosher books are printed from type upon genuine hand-made paper; no electrotypes or machine-made deckle-edge imitations whatever being used. Every volume has its parchment wrapper and slide case, properly labelled, ready for the library shelf.

MUNN & COMPANY, New York City, have a work that has held its own for a year with the fortunate ones that can build themselves fine houses and like to know just what others have done before them in getting up fine residences and beautiful surroundings. Barr Ferree, editor of the Scientific American Building Monthly, brought together descriptions of the American houses of importance and they were published in sumptuous style under the title "American Estates and Gardens." There had before been no adequate attempt to describe and illustrate these great homes of American millionaires, but the information is desired because the whole edition of the rich book was sold out last season and a second, limited to 1000 copies, is also almost exhausted. The work is a volume of 350 pages, enriched with 275 illustrations, of which eight are in duotone printed on heavy plate paper and gorgeously bound in green, black and gold. Although the exteriors of some of the houses shown may be familiar to certain readers, few have had the privilege to visit the interiors, and therefore special attention has also been given to the reproductions of many of the sumptuous halls and rooms of people of wealth, and in no better way can be learned how the very rich people of our land live within their homes of luxury.

THOMAS NELSON & SONS have Bibles of all kinds and whoever wants to make a present of a Bible should look carefully into their supply. They have just published an "American Standard Revised New Testament," in 24mo minion type, and the 24mo Sunday-school Scholar's edition, with new practical helps, especially prepared for this book, and twenty-four full colored illustrations of scenes in the Holy Land. The Pulpit edition, now being ready, this version may be had in minion 24mo, fourteen styles; same, in Sunday-school Scholar's edition, four styles; bourgeois 8vo, Reference edition, thirteen styles; bourgeois 8vo, Reference and Concordance edition, four styles; and Teacher's edition, with complete helps and concordance, eleven styles; also, long primer 4to Reference edition, in twelve styles. The Reference edition can also be had interleaved. The Concordance used in this edition has been specially prepared for the American Standard and is said to be the only Revised Bible Concordance in the market. The Old Testament is also made in two styles, and the Pulpit edition, English 4to, in three styles. The "Concise Bible Dictionary" and "Combined Concordance to the American Standard Revised Bible" can be supplied separately. The 32mo minion "American Standard Revised New Testament" is made in ten bindings without the Psalms, and in nine, with. The "Psalms" are also to be had separate in three bindings. The "Selected Responsive Readings," from this version, is specially prepared for church use. They also have the King James version in over four hundred styles, and have added a "Red Letter Testament" in four bindings. The Nelson's "Sunday-school Scholar's Bibles," with practical helps and a new "Bible Catechism," especially prepared for young people is a very attractive and useful volume. Their Prayer-Books and Hymnals are put up in a very large variety of styles and bindings and are printed on both white and Nelson's India paper. The Oblong edition is particularly attractive and convenient to carry. They have a full line of church books, such as Carter's "Treasury of Devotion," "Steps to the Altar," "Private Prayer Book," "Proper Lessons" and "Church Services." In books for altar use they have "Altar Services" and "Fald-Stool Book." Among miscellaneous books, the New Century Library of standard authors has been augmented with a Shakespeare in six volumes, bound in red cloth and red limp leather, gilt top and gilt back. Such a dainty set of Shakespeare! So pretty to look at; so delightful to read! So specially fine to give to your dearest of all friends at Christmas! The type is long primer bold face.

THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS, (American Branch.) have now ready an entirely new series of Oxford Teachers' Bibles, with new and up-to-date helps, being a practical Bible dictionary, including index, concordance, glossary, weights, measures, coins, botany, etc., all arranged under one alphabet. These helps in one alphabet also appear in "The Oxford Sunday School Scholars' Bible," making this a very useful and practical Bible for study. Also among the triumphs of Bible making are the two new black-faced type editions of "Oxford Text, Reference and Teachers' Bibles" on fine white paper and also on the famous Oxford India papers, or printed in pearl and gotten up as a 32mo, the other in brevier as a 16mo. These books seem to solve the problem how to get large type in a handy size. There are ten editions of the Oxford Prayer Books and Hymnals, and also the recently issued Oxford Elongated Red Rubric editions. There is also a new edition of "The Altar Service," printed in great primer type on exquisitely fine paper. The house is now publishing Oxford Bijou editions of "The Four Gospels," "The Book of Psalms" (prayer-book version); "Dickens' Christmas Books," and the "Ellen Terry Shakespeare," in forty volumes. You cannot appreciate these marvels of twentieth century printing at second hand. You must see them and handle them and stand lost in surprise and admiration. "The Four Gospels" in Venetian limp, round corners, red under gold edges and put up in a morocco slip case will make one of the daintiest prizes that could be given a Sunday-school scholar for a well-done year's work; and the Prayer-book version of "The Book of Psalms" would go straight to the heart of a faithful chorister. Forty of these little booklets make up the "Ellen Terry Shakespeare." What could please a true lover of Shakespeare more than always to have his favorite play in his vest pocket? And if only Dickens could have seen his immortal "Christmas" books in the five volumes that hold them in the Oxford Bijou edition! The Standard Oxford editions of poetry and prose now include Browning, Burns, Byron, Milton, Scott, Shakespeare, Tennyson, Wordsworth, and "Pilgrim's Progress," with Cruikshank's illustrations. The Oxford University Press also issues Archibald Little's "The Far East," a new volume in Regions of the World series: "The Elements of Railway Economics," by W. M. Acworth; volumes 11 and 12 of the "Letters of Horace Walpole;" and "The Complete Poetical Works of Shelley," edited by Thomas Hutchinson. Beautiful editions are also forthcoming of Grimm's "Fairy Tales" and the Lambs' "Tales from Shakespeare."

L. C. PAGE & COMPANY'S holiday books are rich in artistic features. "The Bible Beautiful," Estelle Hurll's pictorial history of biblical art, is fully described in our front pages; but with this should rank the two beautiful new volumes in The Art Galleries of Europe Series, "The Art of the National Gallery (London)," by Julia DeW. Addison; and "The Art of the Venice Academy," by Mary Knight Potter. Both are treated by art critics of established reputation and graceful style, and the descriptive text is the thread upon which are strung a representative series of fine reproductions in duogravure of the masterpieces of these famous galleries. Each volume is appropriately bound and neatly boxed.

Travel lovers are richly provided for with two delightful volumes devoted to "Rambles in Normandy" and "Rambles in Brittany," by Francis Miltoun, with illustrations by Blanche McManus, who with rare harmony of pen and pencil portray the charms of those famous regions of fair France, their churches and châteaux, their peasants and gentry, and their many quaint and curious scenes and customs. The same author and artist are represented also in the Cathedral series by "The Cathedrals and Churches of the Rhine," with eighty illustrations from original drawings and a sympathetic account of the wealth of legend and story enveloping these wonderful monuments of art and architecture; while in the same series Charles Rudy, the famous art critic, treats of the "Cathedrals of Spain." In this series the art lover will find authoritative and scholarly exposition, combined with beautiful drawings, from original studies of the chief beauties and characteristics of the great cathedrals, while for would-be travellers or general reader the volumes are gift books of permanent value. "China," by Col. Charles Denby, is a new volume in the Travel Lovers' Library. Col. Denby was American minister to China from 1885 until 1898, and in his official position was able to amass a fund of unusual and intimate knowledge of Chinese character and customs, religious, political and social conditions. His book is a clear and comprehensive account of the country and its people, with supplementary chapters contributed by the late author's son, Mr. Charles Denby, who from the vantage point of his Chinese residence is able to note and explain graphically the present conditions of the empire, and the great crisis now overshadowing it. "Among French Inns," by Charles Gibson, is a delightful Little Pilgrimages volume, telling of a tour through rural France, and issued in companion form to its predecessor of last year, Miss Tozier's "Among English Inns." History, romance and politics alike are mingled in a volume whose issue testifies to the great public interest in all relating to the Czar's empire. This is Alexandre Dumas's absorbing record of "Celebrated Crimes of the Russian Court," now first translated into English by Mikael Gortshakof, and brought out in rich illustrated form. It is a thrilling chronicle of mysteries and crimes of Russian history, from the days of Ivan the Terrible to the great Revolution of 1825, imparting a vivid realization of the secrets of court life and the evils and inevitable degeneration of an absolute autocracy. Art, music and literature have representation in half a dozen other volumes. Of Mrs. Jameson's famous series on "Sacred and Legendary Art," two volumes, "Legends of the Madonna" and "Legends of the Monastic Orders," have been issued, with the third in preparation; Benvenuto Cellini's "Memoirs" may be had in a handsome edition, with limp brown leather binding; in the Music-lovers' series there are three new books—"Lohengrin," by Bernard Capes, "The Valkyries," by E. J. Benson, and "Siegfried," by Baring-Gould; while Bliss Carman's new volume of essays, "The Poetry of Life," the beautiful collected edition of his "Poems," and Richard Le Gallienne's exquisite rendering of "Odes from the Divan of Hafiz," are all full of literary charm and poetic spirit. "Red Fox," Charles G. D. Roberts' first long animal story, is a strong and moving drama of an "animal hero" from babyhood to old age, fully illustrated with remarkable drawings by Charles Livingstone Bull; fiction readers will welcome Robert N. Stephens' brilliant historical romance, The Flight of Georgiana," and Grace MacGowan Cooke's vital story of labor problems, "The Grapple"; while calendars, and "little classics" in gift book form make the holiday buyer's task of selection difficult.

PILGRIM PRESS, Boston, have a new story for the holidays by William A. Knight, entitled "St. Abigail of the Pines," a tale of Old New Bedford whaling days, based on historic facts and touching the deeps of human life. Dean G. F. Peabody of Harvard who read it in manuscript says: "It is the real thing. It moves with vivacity, lucidity and pathos. The mastery of seamanship surprises and delights me." By the same author was "The Song of Our Pilgrim Guest," that poetic interpretation of the 23d psalm of which 75,000 copies have found their way into home-life and of which there are now new editions in various styles, plain cloth, leatherette and pamphlet-form. For friends among the clergy try "Sermon Briefs from the Manuscripts of Henry Ward Beecher;" "The Bible a Missionary Book," by the Rev. Dr. R. F. Horton; "Educational Evangelism" speaking of the religious discipline for youth; and the "Monday Club Sermons for 1906," by eminent Congregational preachers. There is also a new edition of the very popular "Good Cheer Calendar."

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS always provide for every field of literature at the Christmas season. We can only briefly put before the reader the most notable volumes in each class. In descriptive books there are Elizabeth W. Champney's "The Romance of the French Abbeys," a delightful blending of history, art and romance with two colored, nine photogravure and fifty other illustrations and ornamental headpieces; "The St. Lawrence River," by George Waldo Browne, presenting in a consecutive narrative the most important historic incidents connected with this great waterway, descriptions of its most picturesque scenery and also making delightful excursions into the legendary lore of the river, all made clear by upwards of 100 illustrations; and "Australian Life in Town and Country," by E. C. Buley; and "Philippine Life in Town and Country," by James A. Le Roy, both new volumes in Our Asiatic Neighbours. Pure literature is represented by Sainte-Beuve's "Portraits of the Eighteenth Century" translated by Katharine P. Wormeley and George Burnham Ives; "A Literary History of the English People From the Earliest Times to the Present Day," by J. J. Jusserand Ambassador from France to the United States; French Classics for English Readers, edited by Adolphe Cohn, in which "Rabelais" and "Montaigne" are now presented; "Proverbs and Phrases of All Ages," classified by subjects and arranged alphabetically by Robert Christy in a new edition; and in the Ariel Booklists to which thirty-seven new volumes have been added; and the Vest Pocket Series which has added seven little classics of the world's literature. Specially desirable gifts in this line are "Talks in a Library With Laurence Hutton," recorded by Mrs. Isabel Moore, a most spontaneous record of Hutton's opinions on his clearly loved books, illustrated with sixty-five pictures of the interesting possessions of Hutton and of his friends and visitors; and "The Companionship of Books and other Papers," by Frederic Rowland Marvin, full of reminiscences of interesting people and of ideas suggested by wide reading. Historical tastes can be satisfied with "American Political History 1763-1876," by Alexander Johnston, edited and supplemented by James Albert Woodburn of Indiana University; and "History and Civil War in the United States: 1861-1865," by W. Birkbeck Wood and Colonel Edwards; an authorized English version of Arvède Barine's "Louis XIV. and La Grande Mademoiselle" will be received with avidity. All French history is interesting, but there are few of its pages more fascinating than the kaleidoscopic career of La Grande Mademoiselle. She was related to Louis XIII., by both father and mother; she was the richest heiress in France; she aspired to be an empress, a nun, a political power. Her memoirs gave unique and valuable pictures of life at the Court of Anne of Austria, and of the wars of the Fronde, in which she played a manly part. The history of Europe for the last thirty years is perhaps for the first time definitely focussed in Gabriel Hanotaux' "Contemporary France" of which two volumes are ready, covering from 1870 to 1878. The volumes cover certain periods completely and are sold separately. E. P. Schuckburgh's "Story of Greece" covering from earliest times to A. D. 14 is ready in the Story of the Nations. Biography will be enriched with "The Life of Goethe," by Albert Bielschowsky, acknowledged the foremost authority of recent times. The leading German papers are unanimous in declaring it to be the most important life of Goethe, from the standpoint of scholarship, sympathetic interpretation, and literary art—in fact, the most important biography of any man written in German for many years. It is generally conceded by scholars that we now have for the first time a thoroughly reliable and satisfactory life of Goethe. The translation by William A. Cooper of Leland Stanford University is pronounced a very fine one. Who will not welcome "The Life of Charles Lamb" in two volumes, by E. V. Lucas, who did such excellent editorial work in "The Works and Letters of Charles and Mary Lamb"; or "The Life of Kate Greenaway," by M. H. Spielmann and G. F. Layard, who show the woman generally only thought of as the maker of pretty pictures of children and for children as among the best artists and critics of Europe, considered one of the artistic geniuses of the 19th century, who came in contact with all the leading figures of art and literature of the rich Victorian era; or "Mohammed," by D. S. Margoliouth, Professor of Arabic at Oxford, the latest volume in the Heroes of the Nations series. Religion and theology, science and economics are all represented by important books, for which our lists and advertising pages must be consulted. Some of your friends like novels better than all other reading. When buying for them look at "Peter and Alexis," by Dmitri Merejkowski, the third in the great trilogy known as "The Christ and the Anti-Christ," of which "The Death of the Gods" and "The Romance of Leonardo da Vinci are already published; or, "At the Sign of the Jack o' Lantern," the story of the adventures of a New York newspaper man, by Myrtle Reed; or, "Our Best Society," so good a satire on present conditions and so outspoken that the author thinks best to remain unnamed; or, "Lady Bobs and Her Brother, and I," a tales of the Azores, by Jean Chamberlin; or, "Love Alone Is Lord," in which F. Frankford Moore veils the story of Lord Byron; or others to be found in the lists elsewhere. William H. Drummond's "The Voyageur, and Other Poems," in the Canadian dialect he has used in such fascinating manner, is ready in two editions, one with sixteen full-page photogravures and ornamental head pieces, the other in a more simple Popular edition.

DAVID BISPHAM AS WOLFRAM VON ESCHENBACH.

THE REILLY & BRITTON CO., Chicago, have two novelties that can be used to advantage for presentation purposes. "The Washee-Washee Laundry List," a "shape-book," designed and planned by W. M. Rhoads, is cut out with a die on the outline of a Chinaman and contains scores of maxims, quibs and aphorisms and weekly laundry lists for a year, printed on fire-cracker-red paper with covers in gay colors and silk cord hangers strung with genuine Chinese coins. Especially for women is "Recipes: My Friends' and My Own," an attractively made book arranged for the preservation of recipes which all women collect. The book has sixteen illustrations, is printed on fine paper and done up in art binding with ribbon-marker and handsomely boxed.

FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY have among this season's books some excellent books to present to people who believe in home and children. Such will delight in them, and others who do not yet know this wholesome truth may be awakened by the same books. Coulson Kernahan has written a story for thoughtful women and men in "A World Without a Child" which will attract much attention. He is daring, for he has had the courage to put in vivid language the logical outcome of race suicide; "When Joy Begins," by Clara E. Laughlin, a study of a woman's life, is a charming sequel both in point of story and period of life to "The Evolution of a Girl's Ideal;" "A Mother's Year," a collection of poems and paragraphs inspired by the universal human emotion expressed in "A Wife!" "A Mother!" and of which the sentiments are drawn from President Roosevelt, Lowell, Dickens, Bryant, Holmes, Whittier, Riley and others of like feeling; and "The Rock-a-Bye Book," charming poems of childhood by a famous lover of children. A right attitude towards life is also put with vigor and literary finish in William George Jordan's "Self Control; Its Kingship and Majesty," under which title are now brought together in a pretty book the robust essays of the cosmopolitan mind that edits The Searchlight; "Paths by the River," by Rev. Dr. F. W. Gunsaulus, to whom Professor Wilkinson has assigned a place with Beecher, Brooks and Spurgeon; and "Young Men Who Overcame," by Robert E. Speer, a set of fifteen condensed biographies exhibiting the power and beauty of Christian principle in strong and active natures who made their mark in what they undertook—athletics, scholarship, business and Christian missions. A book sure of appreciation in this novel reading time is "Makers of English Fiction," by W. J. Dawson, who knows his subject thoroughly and possesses a memory like Macaulay's for the thoughts he has had about books and authors. And good fiction also is on hand in Norman Duncan's "The Mother," a novelette of New York life and of a young widow's struggles with misfortune; "St. Cuthbert's," a parish romance by Robert E. Knowles, who tells of the primitive folk among whom he worked in his American parish; "The Village Artist," by Adeline M. Teskey, who tells of a home-loving woman who makes her neighbors see the bright and pleasing in their commonplace lives; and James M. Ludlow, the author of that great success, "The Captain of the Janizaries," has written another historical novel laid in the thirteenth century, entitled "Sir Raoul," which tells of the great crusade of that time and the capture of the city of Constantinople. A work that will make the Christian world think is Charles Cuthbert Hall's "The Universal Elements of Christian Religion," and it would be appreciated by every thinking clergyman no matter what his denomination; and "Rosa's Quest," by Anna Porter Wright, goes straight to the heart of old or young who read how Rosa found "the beautiful land." William Elerov Curtis, who knows the Far East so well, has written a book on "Modern India" and one on "Egypt, Burma and British Malaysia," in which he gives his fascinating pictures of life, men and affairs in out-of-the-way places, and moreover he tells one just the things most worth knowing about everywhere he goes, whether it is scenery, politics, business or religion. Two books more must not be forgotten, "Dr. Grenfell's Parish," by Norman Duncan, who describes life among the deep sea fishermen off the coast of Labrador; and "The Harvest of the Sea," in which Dr. Grenfell himself tells tales of North Sea fishermen, their deeds of courage, their temptations and their pastimes.

SAALFIELD PUBLISHING CO. have a gift book of unusual attractiveness in Adah Louise Sutton's volume of love poems, "Sweeter Still Than This." The illustrations are full-page drawings by Carl Williamson, and each page is decorated with daintily tinted borders, while in binding and printing nothing has been spared to ensure artistic results. Another charming holiday volume is "A Chronicle of Christmas," in which Jeannette Grace Watson tells with skill and sympathy of Christmas legends and old-time customs of merrymaking and good cheer, every page of text being set in pretty colored borders; while an immense circle of friends and admirers will welcome the handsome Joseph Jefferson souvenir volume, "Immortality," in which is presented the touching poem on eternal life written by the great actor just before his death, and beautifully illustrated by H. H. Bennett. There are three new books for the novel reader, each overflowing with plot and adventure. Headon Hill's "Millions of Mischief" is a stirring tale of mystery, hair-breadth escape and dramatic adventure; "Dolly, Daughter of New England," is the romance of a feminine soldier of fortune, told with abounding spirit by Ruth L. Sheldon; in "The Silver Pin" Alfred Wilson-Barrett unravels a murder mystery from one slight clue through a devious labyrinth of perplexity; while St. George Rathbone's books, known to all who find enjoyment in novels of plot and action, hold their place with all newcomers in the field. William Eleroy Curtis has a notable volume, devoted to "Denmark, Norway and Sweden," of particular interest in view of the recent dissolution of union between the two latter countries, and of permanent value in its clear-cut descriptions and graphic glimpses of historical and social conditions; and Frank Abial Flower has made a welcome contribution to American history in his "Edwin McMasters Stanton," the biography of the great statesman who played so noble a part in the later history of the Union.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS are not at all behind other years in their lavish provision for the Christmas-trade. The place of honor in their list is given properly to the President of the United States, but his book on "Outdoor Pastimes of an American Hunter" has already had full description; as has also Ernest Thompson Seton's book on "Animal Heroes." Charles Dana Gibson always furnishes one of the most eagerly sought holiday volumes of the year. This year he calls it "Our Neighbors" and it includes his best work for the year and also a number of hitherto unpublished drawings full of the sentiment, satire and humor that characterize the most popular American illustrator. A very prettily made book, with text by F. Hopkinson Smith, and eight illustrations by Alonzo Kimble, is entitled "The Wood Fire in No. 3." The painter MacWhirter, who had moved into an old art studio building, could not live without a wood-fire, so his intimate friend arranged one for him, and around it gathered night by night the congenial spirits of the building and they grew confidential and told many of their secrets and MacWhirter told of the "Girl of the Steamer Chair." The true Christmas spirit caught from his old Dutch ancestors keeps young in Henry Van Dyke, and a collection of his stories and essays that have gone to so many hearts are now put into covers and called "The Spirit of Christmas," making a pretty little book with fitting frontispiece. No more perfect interpretation of Stevenson's "A Child's Garden of Verses" could be imagined than has been given them by Jessie Willcox Smith in drawings as beautiful and satisfying as those made by Maxfield Parrish for Eugene Field's "Poems of Childhood," and the publishers have made the two volumes of the same general appearance. Among the very important illustrated books stands "A History of Egypt," by James Henry Breasted, Professor of Egyptology and Semitic languages, who covers the subject from the earliest times to the conquest of the Persians and bases his work entirely upon original research. Thrilling adventures with the big game of the Far East are the salient features of Caspar Whitney's book of travel and observation which he calls "Jungle Trails and Jungle People." Nearly all the illustrations are from photographs taken by the author and in themselves fill a unique pictorial record of a novel enterprise. Carolyn Wells, who is a master of compilation, has glanced through the world's satire from Aristophanes and Horace to the present time and has chosen with rare discrimination "A Satire Anthology" ranging from the bitterest to the gayest and making a thoroughly representative showing of the best work that has been done is this wide department of literature. A very valuable work is the story of the most remarkable and successful of Antarctic expeditions entitled "The Voyage of the Discovery," and written by the captain of the Discovery, Robert H. Scott of the Royal Navy. Two years were spent below the Antarctic Circle, many important discoveries were made in geographical, botanical and other sciences and a new Farthest South record made. The agreeable and informal way in which the most interesting discoveries and dangerous adventures are described in those two great volumes, and the wonderful accounts of the new lands, mountains and glaciers seen for the first time, make this book a very valuable and entertaining one. Just now all the novel reading world is discussing a Scribner book—Mrs. Edith Wharton's "The House of Mirth." This work of fiction pictures with great vividness the social conditions of New York society to-day. "A Thief in the Night," by E. W. Hornung, gives further episodes in the career of A. J. Raffles who has already made himself so interesting in "The Amateur Cracksman" and in "Raffles." The celebrated cricketer and cracksman and his faithful Bunny again rival, if they do not surpass in ingenuity, audacity and humor their earlier experiences in the older books. "The Deep Sea's Toll," by James B. Connolly, illustrated by W. J. Aylward and H. Reuterdahl tells of the tragedy and comedy of the lives of Gloucester fishermen, of their pluck and their daring, their sorrows and their pleasures, and he tells of these facts of which he knows more than any other man to-day with the vigor and the breeziness that brought such success for "The Seiners," and "Out of Gloucester." For lovers of short stories there are "McAllister and His Double," by Arthur Train, with illustrations by F. C. Yohn, in which the matter is taken from personal observation of the criminal side of New York life by the author, who is Assistant District Attorney of New York City; "Mrs. Radigan," by Nelson Lloyd, is composed of a series of sketches describing the career of "a climber;" and James Huneker, the eminent literary and art critic, has written a set of stories which he calls "Visionaries," a book in key with all the advanced movements of art and literature, "occult and pagan, mystical and Gothic."

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS' IMPORTATIONS.—Fine art works are generally the leading books imported by the Scribners, and all who understand music, painting, sculpture, architecture and design will find rich treasures again with the Scribner imprint. "The History of Ancient Pottery: Greek, Etruscan, Roman," by H. B. Walters, is in two volumes, based on the work of Samuel Birch, and furnishes an authoritative and exhaustive work with 300 illustrations, including eight colored plates. It is good news that there is a smaller and much cheaper edition of Sir Walter Armstrong's "Sir Joshua Reynolds" and that there is a work on "The Royal Academy and Its Members," a history covering from 1768 to 1830, written by the late J. E. Hodgson, and F. A. Eaton, Secretary of the Academy, and full of portraits and illustrations. To the Library of Art have been added "Pisanello," by G. F. Hill; and "Constable," by M. S. Henderson; to the Famous Art Cities is added "Florence." by Adolf Philippi, translated from the German by P. G. Konody and beautified and explained by 170 illustrations; a fitting book to take its place with those already published: "Pompeii," "Venice," and "Nuremberg"; and the new volumes in the Langham series are "Jean François Millet," by Richard Muther; "Rome As an Art City," by Albert Zacher; "Italian Architecture," by J. Wood Brown; and "The Eighteenth Century in English Caricature," by Selwyn Brinton; a new series is called Drawings by Great Masters; in it the drawings will be reproduced on a page 11¾ x 8½ inches, and each volume will contain forty-eight reproductions, many of them printed in tints. Six volumes are ready: "Burne-Jones," by T. Martin-Wood; "Albrecht Dürer," by Dr. Hans Singer; "J. M. Swan, R.A.," by A. M. Baldry, who also writes "Holbein;" "Dante Gabriel Rossetti," by T. Martin-Wood; and "Sir E. J. Pointer," by Malcolm Bell. "Pictures In Umbria," by Katherine S. Macquoid, has fifty original illustrations by Thomas R. Macquoid, and "The Gardens of Italy" are a series of illustrations from photographs by Charles Latham in two volumes, with descriptive text by E. March Phillips. "The Story of the Harp," by W. H. Gratton Flood, is the new volume in the Music Story Series; and there is a fine historical study in two volumes of Julian the Apostate, in which Gaetano Negri has given an impartial and exhaustive judgment of the great imperial apostate. The Duchess Litta Visconti Arlse has translated the work and Prof. Pasquale Villari has furnished the introduction. New colored books show fine work and the matter chosen for them is full of interest both literary and artistic. Lamb's "Tales From Shakespeare" has 20 plates by Norman M. Price; Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress" has 30 plates by Byam Shaw; "In and Around Venice," by Horatio F. Brown, has fifteen illustrations; and other works include "The Confessions of Lord Byron"; "Mary Queen of Scots," by A. H. Millar; George Gissing's "By the Ionian Sea"; "Carnations and Pinks"; and "The Crown of Pine," a story of Corinth and its games, by A. J. Church, with eight illustrations. Lovers of sport must look in the "Country Life" Library of Sport for "Big Game Shooting," a fine work in two volumes with many illustrations, and a perfect manual of instruction for the golfer may be found in "Golf Faults Illustrated," by G. W. Beldam and J. H. Taylor.

SMALL, MAYNARD & COMPANY, Boston, have made ready several books that if given with judgment to the right person will give enduring pleasure to the receiver. Alvan Sanborn, late special Paris correspondent of the Boston Transcript, is well-known as a sympathetic and intelligent student of modern social conditions. In "Paris and the Social Revolution" Mr. Sanborn offers a study of the revolutionary element in the various classes of Parisian life from the anarchist laborer to the leading writers and artists of France, many of whom while in no way classified as socialist or anarchist, are just as truly revolutionary in spirit. The remarkable drawings by Mr. Vaughn Trowbridge, who accompanied Mr. Sanborn during his journeys of observation in the preparation of the book, are so closely related to the text that the interest of both is greatly enhanced. Together author and artist have produced a work as true to real life as a Verestchagin painting. The publication of the initial volume of Mr. Traubel's diary of Walt Whitman's conversations entitled "With Walt Whitman in Camden" is one of the most important events in the literary history of America, and one which should attract wide-spread interest, not only among Whitman students, but among all classes of readers. For nineteen years Mr. Traubel was most intimately associated with Walt Whitman in Camden. During the greater part of this period he saw the poet daily, often several times a day. In 1888 he began to record, consecutively and faithfully, the conversations and events of each meeting, whatever the subject-matter, whether important or seemingly trivial; and this diary record was continued until the poet's death in 1892. The work contains a wealth of letters, bits of manuscript, and other documents, both by Whitman himself and very many of the greatest of his contemporaries. In its entirety this diary will extend to several volumes, but each will be complete in itself and sold separately if desired. Other important contributions to biography are "Josiah Warren," by William Bailie, a fine sociological study of the first American anarchist; and "John Fiske," by Thomas Sargeant Perry, the new volume in the Beacon biographies. A very important contribution to the science of government is "Colonial Administration in the Far East," in which Alleyne Ireland, the foremost English authority on comparative colonization, covers exhaustively the fields of British, French, Dutch and American government in the tropical regions of the Far East. The countries to be studied in this great work are Burma, Hong Kong, British North Borneo, Sarawak, the Federated Malay States, the Straits Settlements, French Indo-China, Java, and the Philippines. It will extend to ten or twelve volumes, of which the first is ready this season. A representative collection of prose extracts, radical, but constructive, treating of the economic situation of the day, is by Horace Traubel and entitled "Chants Communal." This dispassionate, broad-minded presentation of true socialism should be widespread. It is optimistic and more in the nature of heart to heart talks with those who desire to learn and to know. An appeal for fair treatment of the subject of the authorship of Shakespeare is made in Isaac Hull Platt's "Bacon Cryptograms in Shakespeare and Other Studies" which fully explains and elucidates the vexed question as it stands to-day; and poetry is supplied for holiday gifts in "The Fleeing Nymph and, Other Verse," by Lloyd Mifflin; "The Lover's Rubaiyat," edited by Jessie B. Rittenhouse; "The Norse Nightingale," being the lyrics of a "Lumberyack," by William F. Kirk; "The Rosary in Rhyme," by John B. Tabb; and a new edition of Bliss Carman's "Low-Tide on Grand Pre" with which are bound "The Ballads of Lost Haven." Very good novels are Nathaniel C. Fowler's "Gumption: the Progressions of Newson New," a story of newspaper life and Yankee push and energy; and James North Wright's "Where Copper Was King," a tale of the mining interests of Lake Superior. And if amusement pure and simple is sought for, do not overlook a new Library edition of "Mr. Dooley: In Peace, In War, and In the Hearts of His Countrymen"; and "Figure Skating," by George H. Browne, with 600 diagrams and illustrations and suggestions for 10,000 figures.

STITT PUBLISHING CO., New York City, have some books that are sure to please. "The Kindred of the Wild," a book of animal life, by Charles G. D. Roberts, is a book full of delight with 50 full-page illustrations, by Charles Livingston Bull, which are faithful and graphic and tell their own story of the wild life, illuminating and worthily supplementing the pen pictures of the author. "Abroad With the Jimmies," by Lilian Bell, a clever novel full to the brim of adventure and amusement; and "The Motor Pirate," by G. Sidney Paternoster which has a triple interest—romance, detection and crime, making ingenious use of the latest and newest fashionable method of rapid locomotion. Fiction is always enjoyed by average minds and if you do not know your friend's special tastes it is always safe to give a bright novel of love's troubles and pleasures.

FREDERICK A. STOKES CO., among their many and varied holiday publications, have a group of books that will delight the sportsman and charm all lovers of nature. "The Basses, Freshwater and Marine," is a beautiful volume, similar in style and treatment to "The Brook Trout," published several years ago. Like its predecessor, it is written by William T. Harris and other authoritative contributors, and is edited and illustrated by Louis Rhead, the well-known artist-sportsman. Tarleton H. Bean has furnished an introduction. The work is an exhaustive treatise upon this gamiest of all game fishes. Willard Nelson Clute has supplemented his previous work on American ferns with a handsome volume on "The Fern Allies of North America," describing the allied forms of plant life not included in the fern families in its scientific accuracy, its interest, and its comprehensiveness. This, like its predecessor, will be welcomed as a standard work in its field. It is illustrated with colored plates and nearly two hundred other illustrations, drawn directly from the living plants by Ida Martin Clute. Arthur H. Beavan's two books, "Animals I Have Known" and "Birds I Have Known," are also notable additions to nature-literature, presenting the experiences of a trained and sympathetic observer with many delightful illustrations. The splendid volumes by N. Hudson Moore on old china and old furniture have been augmented by another work from the same author, dealing this time with "Old Pewter, Brass, Copper and Sheffield Plate." Besides this lovers of antiques will welcome "Chats on Old Furniture," by Arthur Hayden, the well-known expert, whose new volume is an indispensable practical guide for collectors, richly illustrated and remarkably comprehensive. In the literature of travel there is nothing more adventurous and absorbing than the chronicles of exploration, as is proved by H. R. Mill's new book, "The Siege of the South Pole." This gives what otherwise is to be found only in scattered and cumbersome reports, an account of the many intrepid efforts made to explore "the bottom of the world" and discover the South Pole. It is illustrated with many half-tones and a colored map. In literature that veteran man of letters, Edmund Gosse, is represented by a scholarly exposition of "Modern English Literature," illustrated with many fine photogravure portraits; autobiography of the most fascinating kind is supplied in "The Memoirs of Rose Eytinge," giving the reminiscences and experiences of an actress famous in her day on the American stage, and a friend and associate of the most interesting figures of the dramatic, musical and literary worlds; while for the art lover there is a sumptuous volume devoted to "Women Painters of the World," edited by Walter Shaw Sparrow, presenting the most characteristic work of women artists from the days of Caterina Vigri in the fifteenth century to Rosa Bonheur and our own times; and three charming little parchment booklets in The Painters series, presenting respectively the work and most famous pictures of Rubens, Van Dyck and Rembrandt. Novel readers have been remembered in several new books of high quality. Anthony Hope's latest story, "A Servant of the Public," is a skilful and absorbing study of the private life, temperament and emotions of a famous actress, revealing not only the nature of the artist but the soul of the woman, and remarkable in its psychologic insight and brilliancy of touch. "The Speculations of John Steele" is an absorbing tale of business adventure, plot and mystery by Robert Barr, centering in a tense struggle with "the greatest money power in the world;" Agnes and Egerton Castle have a charming new romance of "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," called "The Heart of Lady Anne," full of the spirit of old-time English comedy and beautifully illustrated in color by Ethel Franklin Betts; while Robert Hichens has followed his glowing romance, "The Garden of Allah," with a volume of striking short stories, entitled "The Black Spaniel," touching upon problems of psychological manifestation with grim power and intense realism. Lillie Hamilton French has a little volume of bright and wholesome thoughts for daily living, called "The Joy of Life;" in "Ideals for Girls" Mrs. Frank Learned, better known perhaps as "Priscilla Wakefield," talks simply and sweetly to girls and their mothers upon the things that count for most in life and in woman's experiences; while the very spirit of Christmas lore will be found in Henry Van Dyke's beautiful and reverent study of "The Childhood of Jesus Christ," now appropriately issued in a dainty gift edition, with many illustrations, as well as in the familiar and attractive Masterpiece series.

THOMPSON & THOMAS, Chicago, have several publications that can be used for gifts, and if selected with judgment for the right friend they will give a great deal of pleasure. Any travelling salesman will find "Tales of the Road," by Charles N. Crewdson, with sixteen drawings by J. J. Gould, full of the horse-sense of salesmanship and as good a business tool in attractive shape as can be put in the hands of any man or woman on the road. It is full of points as a porcupine, and in its full morocco dress is a very sightly Christmas offering, already in its third edition. If you have friends of Christian Science leanings give them "Merciful Unto Me, a Sinner," the story of a young girl's life in a city as told by herself, where after many dark hours she felt herself redeemed by the doctrines of Christian Science. Amusement pure and simple will be found in "An American in New York," by Opie Read, already in its second large edition; "Peck's Bad Boy Abroad," of which the fourth edition is ready for the holidays; and the second edition of "How to Hustle," by J. P. Johnston. Friends of artistic tastes will be pleased by "Painting Pastimes," by Edith O'Donnell, a high-grade painting and drawing book, with verses by Girard Chapman; "The Visitor's Sketch Book," by Frances Carruthers, a decided novelty made up of sketches of animals for each day of the month, and every visitor is expected to draw the animal corresponding to the date of the call; and by the same arranger "The Twentieth Century Cook Book," with menus for all seasons, and sections for chafing-dish cookery and food for the sick.

THE VIRGIN WITH CHILD AND ANGELS.—Botticelli.

HERBERT B. TURNER & Co.'s imprint on a novel always means a story of interest and originality written in excellent English. "Sir Galahad of New France," by William Henry Johnson, has for its background the attempts of the French Huguenots to settle in Florida, in which the author, who is professionally a historian, vividly portrays the contrast between troubled France and the Acadian simplicity of the American primeval forest.

"Back to Arcady" is a pastoral love story in which Frank Waller Allen has almost a touch of Ik Marvel and George William Curtis; "Broke of Covenden" is a literary masterpiece by J. C. Snaith, telling an inimitable story of an impoverished English family and their matrimonial mistakes; "The Storm of London," by F. Dickberry, takes its idea from "Sartor Resartus," but tells an up-to-date story of social and political life in London when the people all find themselves "naked and not ashamed" when they have become accustomed to it, and in spite of the audacious subject keeps thoroughly within good taste and points its moral; "The Hundredth Acre," a detective story of John Camden, written by a very competent hand, tells its ingenious story of mystery in a manner to puzzle to the end the most expert novel reader; and "The House of Merrilees," by Archibald Marshall, is also a story of mystery and fine detective work with well-drawn and finely contrasted characters. The house has a new limp leather Stevenson, with photogravure frontispieces of Stevenson portraits which is pretty and reasonable. A very fine work for those interested in psychic investigation is "Science and a Future Life," by Prof. James H. Hyslop, which treats of the scientific investigation of psychic phenomena and asks proof that man survives bodily death.

FREDERICK WARNE & Co. have gotten ready some very fine art works for the holidays. A very important publication which has been in course of preparation for the past two years is "The National Gallery (London)," and it embodies an immense amount of labor and care. The text by Gustave Geffroy, the well known art savant, is sufficient guarantee that this portion of the work is worthy of the fullest confidence; the opinion has been freely expressed by critics that few experts would be so competent to deal with his great subject and that no one man among them could bring more independent knowledge to bear upon it. The illustrations which consist of 57 full-page plates in photogravure and 155 smaller half-tone illustrations interspersed in the text, have been produced with every possible care. The volume, handsomely bound in white vellum, makes a Christmas present to make an artist hunger and thirst. Nobody can hope to have all the Newnes Art Library, but any one volume is a generous gift. The new volumes for the year included "Dante Gabriel Rossetti" judged by Ernest Radford; "Puvis de Chavannes," by Arsène Alexandre; "The Early Work of Titian," and "Filippino Lippi," each with 64 reproductions in half-tone and photogravure frontispieces. A treasure for lovers of the old books that are books is a set of three volumes of "The Essays of Samuel Taylor Coleridge" divided and separately titled "Aids to Reflection," "Table Talk," and "Shakespeare and the Elizabethan Dramatists"; or, a choice reprint of "The Legends of King Arthur and His Knights," compiled and arranged by Sir James Knowles. For fiction devourers there are "The Conquering Will," a romantic story of a young artist who receives a commission to paint a portrait, falls in love with his model and is nearly driven to suicide by the Calvinistic sister of his love; and "Pioneers," an exceptionally powerful novel dealing with the present struggle for freedom in Russia.

A. WESSELS COMPANY have a very fine gift book in "The Hundred Best Pictures," a collection of the most celebrated paintings in the art galleries of France, Italy, Holland, Spain, Germany and America, reproduced according to the highest art of modern photogravure by which the texture of the canvas and the brush-marks of the painter can be plainly seen and the brilliancy of a picture and its most subtle gradations of tone can be faithfully reproduced. In size these pictures are 15½ x 11½ inches, a truly wonderful offering to an artist friend, or to some town library. Another exquisite gift is the new edition of "Barbizon Days" in which Charles Sprague Smith gives his descriptions of Millet, Corot, Rousseau and Barye, illustrated with forty-two pictures and four photogravures, a book that breathes the atmosphere of Barbizon; and there is also a holiday edition of "Christmas Carols, Ancient and Modern," edited by Joshua Sylvestre, with pictures of the Madonna and text decorations by Theodore Brown Hapgood, who holds an honored place among the leading designers of the day. Very interesting to those now so eagerly watching Russian conditions would be "Contrite Hearts," by Herman Bernstein, consisting of stories of Jewish life which have been honored with the praise of Zangwill, Nordau and other experts on Jewish life. Three calendars are also ready for grown people.

W. A. WILDE Co. give their chief strength to books for young people, but always have one or two books of a high grade of interest for the young people's parents. "Hector, My Dog: His Autobiography," tells a wonderful story of life in the Northland, with the secrets, dangers and beauties of which the author, Egerton R. Young, is so familiar from his long years of romantic adventure in semi-arctic regions. The dog tells of the intimate association with his master and of many perils in the wanderings through the snow and ice. "Camp-Fires on the Scioto," by Charles S. Wood, also tells a thrilling story of the courage and hardships of the winners of the West in opening up the great Northwestern territory. As always a fitting gift for any Sunday-school teacher will be found in the "International Sunday School Lessons for 1906," by Peloubet and Wells, which in spite of all new comers hold their own among those who know. Rev. Dr. Peloubet's co-worker, Amos R. Wells, has also an important book on "Sunday School Problems," which he solves practically for teachers and officers.

THE JOHN C. WINSTON Co., Philadelphia, have a wonderfully timely new volume for their magnificently illustrated Photogravure Series this year. The eyes of all the world are on the Slavonic Empire, and her history is ready in Théophile Gautier's "Russia." Populated originally by wild, nomadic tribes, and finally conquered by the Norsemen, who gave the country its present name, Russia's history is perhaps the most fascinating among the stories of the nations. The Western world can hardly appreciate the autocratic government which is now receiving such unexpected aggression, nor can outsiders understand how resistless has been her expansion in territory and resources until she met a foe that kept her in check in the wilds of China. Her disastrous conflict with the Japanese is covered in the book by another hand. The work is in two volumes and illustrated by fifty photogravures, printed on special ivory finish paper, and they are bound in cloth with rich gold side and back decorations. The companion book in the Photogravure Series is naturally "Japan and Her People," written by Anna C. Hartshorne, manufactured outwardly just like the work on "Russia," in two volumes, also with fifty photogravures. This house puts great strength into its International Bibles, and gets them out for the holidays in every variety of new binding. They have new and attractive editions of the "International Self-Pronouncing Bibles: the Christian Workers' Bible," which is indexed and marked in red by the best methods of Bible marking on all subjects connected with the theme of salvation, to enable any person to turn rapidly to verses on these subjects, and to read in consecutive order the passages relating to any one of the passages chosen, or to give Bible readings at a moment's notice on this most important theme. This is a book in great demand by Sunday-school teachers, Y. M. C. A. workers, ministers and students of the Bible. "The International Complete Red Letter Bibles" have markings in Old and New Testaments in red, showing all the types and prophecies in the Old Testament and all the words of Christ in the New Testament in red, gotten out in two editions with different sizes of type, with references and map, with and without teachers' helps. Specially suited for the holiday booktrade are the "Red Letter Art Bibles," with illustrations in color and black; and a book made ready for this year is "The India Paper Reference Bible," only three-fourths of an inch thick, including the cover. Improbable as it may appear, this house carries 500 different styles of Bibles and Testaments, and before deciding what Bible you will buy be sure you have seen the "International." A most beautiful gift book is "The Quakeress," by Max Adeler, (Charles Heber Clark,) which has been among the great fiction successes of the year. The poetic tale of the quiet young Quaker man, and the more sprightly girl who had a little touch of the world's spirit, is told with rare literary skill, and the book is illustrated in colors by George Gibbs. Other titles of good fiction include "Threads," by Garrett W. Thompson, a story of American life, introducing a striking picture of modern college days and adventures connected with them; "Sawdust, or, a Romance of the Timberlands," by Dorothea Gerard; and "The Embarrassing Orphan," by W. E. Norris, who always has a fine plot and lovable characters. A very useful gift also would be the revised edition of Charles Morris's "Handy Dictionary of Biography," giving sketches of 5000 famous people, past and present.

CAREFUL TENDING MAKES A GARDEN GROW.

Books for Young People.

UNDER this heading is given, in alphabetical order of their publishers, a descriptive summary of all the new books offered as specially suitable for young people.

HENRY ALTEMUS COMPANY offers good cheer for all the year for boys and girls in "A Little Garden Calendar," of which so excellent a critic as Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin says: "A sweeter or lovelier book, within and without, it would be impossible to find, or one more suggestive and useful to children, parents and teachers." It is by Albert Bigelow Paine, whose delicate, whimsical humor is brought into play in this year book of the garden. Instead of being a dry treatise on seeds and flowers, it is written in a story-book style, introducing two little children and their father as characters, who have long talks on the wonders of plant life. Each month of the year is taken up, telling the seeds that should be planted and the work that should be done in the garden, interweaving traditions, fairy tales and the like relating to plants in such a manner as to both interest and stimulate the child's mind from the very first. There are forty-six excellent illustrations and both type and binding are good. As usual we may look to this house for a number of good stories, healthy in purpose, entertaining, and prettily illustrated and bound. For instance, here is M. R. Housekeeper's "Face the Lions," with the scenes laid in and near London during the latter half of the 17th century when the Civil War, Oliver Cromwell's Protectorate and King Charles's Restoration gave abundant opportunities for fighting, plotting and rescuing. As may be surmised, this story abounds in rapid action and cannot fail to please the adventure-loving young people who dream at home of daring deeds. "The Middleton Bowl," by that delightful writer for children, Ellen Douglas Deland, describes what befell a priceless heirloom, a bowl, which was found broken. Concerned in its history are five elderly women who are as quaint, lovable and amusing as one hopes to meet, and a dear little girl whom one would like to know in the flesh, though Miss Deland has made her so real that one is inclined to believe that she has actually lived. Four other girls figure in Marion Ames Taggart's "The Little Women Club," in which the characters in the immortal "Little Women" came to life agan. Each of the girls in the club assumes the name of one of Miss Alcott's characters; and of course, as there are a "Meg" and a "Jo," a "Beth" and an "Amy," later a "Grandfather Lawrence" and a "Laurie" have to appear also. And so the play is carried to its happy ending. No less satisfactory in its conclusion is "Del's Debt," wherein Julie M. Lippmann tells the story of an orphaned girl who finds a lovely home in a family who are not only wealthy and wise, but also charming. It is discovered that Del has a fine voice, whereupon her good friends make it possible for her to have singing lessons, and her later success is a rich compensation for all the kindness shown her. There is always room for another Sunday book for restless little folks. Gertrude Smith's collection of Bible stories, entitled "Robbie's Bible Stories," are unusually good, retelling in simple language the grand stories which can never grow old. Illustrations, over thirty in number, vividly picture the characters and events of Bible history.

"A BOY CAME RUNNING UP, AND TRIED TO CATCH ME."

Phelps' college life, and wind up the attractive Winner Series for which the young people are indebted to Everett T. Tomlinson, one of the most entertaining writers of "juvenile" stories as well as one of the brightest and most vivacious teachers of all a manly boy should make his own in the way of desirable qualities and virtues. That Mr. Tomlinson is a college man, and was for some time a successful teacher, is the secret of his minute knowledge of school matters evinced both in this series and others from his pen. He presented Will Phelps in the first volumes of the series, "The Winner" and "Winning his 'W'" as a type of the best of our college boys—not so faultless as to be a "prig," nor so bad as to need any severe criticism. He makes his mistakes, but he owns up to them bravely, and takes his punishments like a man. As freshman and sophomore he has already been depicted. To his career as an upper classman, "Winning his Degree" is dedicated. While we have had plenty college stories even outside of the Winner Series, few writers before have gone into the work, struggles, and experiences of a college junior (and senior). If the book has its lesson in uprightness and truth, and the frank honesty that so becomes a boy in his first manhood, the moral is not disagreeably to the fore. Winthrop College, is of course again the scene and Will Phelps again a leader in class and in games. His chums are amusingly described and their pranks made as laughable as in earlier years. A theft that implicates innocent students, a tennis contest full of spirited incident are among the many events that occur before Will is no longer a student of Winthrop and telegraphs to his father: "Educated! Yours Truly, W. Phelps, B.A." The seniors will read this story with as much pleasure as the juniors; it cannot but recall the happiest days of their lives, in pictures as humorous as they are invigorating.

"NOW I UNDERSTAND WHAT A TOUCHDOWN IS."

D. Appleton & Company have fulfilled generously all the promises of the early fall made to young readers in search of enjoyment and instruction. Their line of Christmas books embraces works of the best American writers of the day, suitable for both girls and boys and for all ages, from the little ones in the nursery to the readers of more mature years. The charming nature books by Robert W. Chambers — "Outdoor-Land," "Orchard-Land" and "River-Land" — have a successor in every way worthy of them in "Forest-Land." It is an attractive quarto, printed in large type, and with many illustrations in color by Emily Benson Knipe. The pictures mostly represent little Geraldine and Peter of the story and are exceedingly graphic. The plan of the book is somewhat similar to its predecessors, its aim being to let children imbibe through a simple, unconscious method facts about nature. Here the woods and their insect denizens are the subjects, the trees often being the talkers and talking to very good effect. Another quarto for the same age children is "The Yellow Cat and Some Friends," by Grace V. R. Dwight. Stories and colored pictures by Edith Dimock, the one illustrating the other, abound. Not only is the yellow cat a character full of joy to the little ones, but there are stories about robins, and rabbits, and sunflowers, dolls and dolls' houses and all the other things the inmates of the nursery revel in. This also is a big type book, having like "Forest-Land" a picture cover of bold design, with fancy linings, and numerous graceful head and tail pieces to the chapters in addition to the page pictures in color. Gabrielle E. Jackson, one of the most popular of "juvenile" authors, has prepared a new story for the girls that has a leading place in this house's holiday volumes. "Little Miss Cricket," as the book is called, stands for the dearest little heroine—bright, brave and beautiful. Separated from her mother in a steamboat accident, she falls into the care of a hard, gaunt spinster, who though not heartless, has never before come into contact with any one of the sunshiny, poetical nature of "Miss Cricket," and so in making a drudge of the little girl comes near breaking her heart. There is a happy ending, though, that will bring tears of joy. The Appletons have taken over other books of Miss Jackson, upon which their imprint appears this season. Do not forget them in making your purchases, as they each have an unusual individual charm. Pictures fully illustrate all Miss Jackson's stories.

"I'LL NOT DO IT!"

"Little Miss Sunshine" is a delightful companion to "Little Miss Cricket." The others are "Big Jack, and Other True Stories of Horses," "Little Comrade, the Story of a Cat," and "The Colburn Prize." "Fifty-two Stories for Girls," edited by Alfred H. Miles, represents the best English and American authors, as does "Fifty-two Stories for Boys," collected by the same editor. Four boys' books complete Appleton's juveniles for 1905. "The Boy Lincoln," by W. O. Stoddard, and "The Young McKinley," by Hezekiah Butterworth, are biographical sketches of two of our great Presidents who died by an assassin's hand. Both writers have high ideals that find ready response in the details even of these boys' youthful days. Boys will like the books; they are rich not only in incident but in inspiration. Camp life in summer is one of the most fascinating subjects for boys. Ralph Henry Barbour, the author of "The Halfback" and so many other books in which sport of various kinds takes a leading place, has added "Four in Camp" to his desirable list. "Four in Camp" tells of the doings of the leaders in a summer camp in New Hampshire, where some thirty or more boys have been collected under the care of a grown man, who puts them through a daily programme of bathing, swimming, walking, etc. They are able to devise mischief enough of their own to keep up their spirits and amuse readers. Kirk Munroe's "The Outcast Warrior" is a tale of the Red Frontier, in the days of the late fifties just before the Civil War. It takes one into the very midst of Indian life, the hero being an Eastern man and a college graduate and a physician, who seeks forgetfulness of an unhappy episode in his career in the camp of the Aricarees, the hereditary foes of the Dakotah Indians. In time he takes a wife from among his friends, and becomes the father of a little girl. While on a hunt in search of a white Buffalo he loses his scalp, though not his life. He dare not return thus disgraced to his people, and is hereafter known as "the outcast warrior." His subsequent adventures are equally exciting, including his return to civilization. As may be conjectured, the story is one for a boy pretty well advanced in his teens.

THE BAKER & TAYLOR COMPANY fall in line with a delightful contribution to this department that should claim as sincere appreciation from the "grown-ups" as from youthful readers. While a man looking backward will no doubt see the humorous side to his boyish pranks as he never did in his knickerbocker days, and will often be found with moist eyes as some pathetic incident (not at all pathetic when it happened to the "kid" in trousers) is brought back to his memory—the boy of to-day may seek and successfully discover no end of fun extremely to his taste in this pretty book—whose name we had almost overlooked mentioning is "When You Were a Boy," the author being Edwin L. Sabin and the artist Frederic Dorr Steele. The one supplements the other capitally. All through the text are the quaint figures of the narrative—"Fat Day," Spunk Carey," "Hen Schmidt," "Doc Kennedy" and other chums of "You." Do you not remember when you were a boy, the ball games you played, the first dog you owned, the circus you inaugurated in the garret, the time when you ran away, and the other times when you went fishin'? And finally when you fell in love? Do you recall these episodes of your youthful days as you read their counterparts in Mr. Sabin's most amusing and charming sketches? Based no doubt on scenes in his own boyhood, their realism is their chief attraction. These sketches first appeared in leading magazines, such as the Century, Everybody's, and also in the Saturday Evening Post, from which periodicals he received permission to reprint them. The book is printed on thick paper, with wide margins, and is bound in green, with artistic design on front cover. The capital illustrations of Frederic Dorr Steele number fifty separate pictures of boyish pranks and interests, all full of high spirits.

A. S. BARNES & COMPANY add a new volume to Captain Bonehill's Outdoor Series called "The Winning Run," a stirring story of out-door life and healthy sport. In the first volume of the series, entitled "The Island Camp," the author took a number of the boys of Lakeport into the depths of the forest during the winter months. Here, in company with a trusted old hunter, they succeeded in bringing down game of various kinds and in learning many of nature's secrets. With the coming of summer the thoughts of the boys turned to baseball, and it was not long before an amateur nine of no mean ability was organized. Challenges were both sent out and received, and in this volume—"The Winning Run"— a number of the games played are described in detail. The rivalry, as in all small towns, was of the "red-hot" variety, and the particulars are also given of a plot to injure the Lakeport nine and thus make them lose the most important game of all. The book is one that all boys will like—as all boys like baseball, our "national game" as it is called. This house's most elaborate book for young people, "The Shakespeare Story Book," by Mary MacLeod, will be found reviewed at length in front.

BENZIGER BROTHERS have various books of devotion and some lighter reading specially fitted for young Catholics. "Mary, the Queen," is a life of the Blessed Mother for her little ones; "The Catholic Girl's Guide" is edited by Rev. F. X. Lasance; and "Light for New Times," by Margaret Fletcher, is a book for Catholic girls full of good advice. In lighter vein are "The Juvenile Round Table —Third Series," full of good short stories by special favorites of the children; "The Catholic Home Annual for 1906," with astronomical calculations, tables of feasts and fasts, etc. "The Violin Maker," from the original of Otto von Schaching, by Sara Trainer Smith, is a most fascinating story full of information of violin making in the seventeenth century. Young Matthias Klotz, the son of a poor tailor in the Mittenwald of Old Germany, is consumed with ambition to become a violin maker, but his father is too poor to let him learn the trade. By chance he meets Stainer, a maker of violins, and he agrees to teach him free of charge. After graduating from this school he goes to Cremona and here learns his art in higher form under the great Amati. Later Mattias married and had three sons, all of whom he instructed in the art of which he had made a religion. He first brought violin making to honor in Germany, and his name still lives among the people, for he furnished them with a means of living from which their descendants still derive the benefit. "The Children of Cupa," by Mary E. Mannix, is the story of a family who came to Lower California for their mother's health, and there become interested in the Indian natives and learned much of their history, manners, and customs. "For the White Rose," by Katharine Tynan Hinkson, retells the thrilling story of the Stuarts and Whigs in the seventeenth century; and "The Dollar Hunt," from the French, is a story of the true value and great use of money and its attendant dangers. "Wayward Winifred" is the most recent work of Anna T. Sadlier, the gifted and favorite writer. It opens in Ireland, in the midst of a most romantic country surrounding a ruined castle, introducing at once the beautiful little heroine Winifred. That she is the centre of a mystery is evident at a glance. An American lady visiting Ireland is fascinated with her and gradually unfolds her story.

THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY are standing sponsor for another of L. Frank Baum's inimitable books, wherein the author's rich humor and quaint imagination have full play. His "Mother Goose in Prose" will answer all those questions that have been simmering in the minds of countless little people whose first introduction to fairyland has been made by dear old Mother Goose. Here Mr. Baum explains why King Cole had such queer tastes for a monarch, how Humpty Dumpty happened to be sitting in so precarious a position, what made Jack Horner go to the corner, and the reasons which made Bo-Peep's sheep lose themselves and yet hold on to their tails. The author has been ably seconded in his investigations in Mother Goose lore by Maxwell Parrish. This artist's fancy has caught the very spirit of the tales and his skill has depicted it in exquisite color and form. Not content with issuing this fascinating book, the Bobbs-Merrill Company also have ready a new edition of Mr. Baum's "Father Goose: His Book," with Denslow's original illustrations, and printed on tinted paper. For older children there is an entertaining book by Cornelia Baker, entitled "The Queen's Page," recounting the experiences of boy and girl twins, descendants of a noble family of Navarre. They are brought to the court of the resplendent French king, Francis I., in the suite of Jeanne, Duchess of Cleves, the king's niece and a very self-willed young princess in the bargain, and they meet all manner of famous folk known to history and take part in royal shows, proving themselves brave-spirited children, worthy of their lineage. Josephine S. Gates's "The Story of the Lost Doll" will appeal to almost any youngster with its account of the mysterious disappearance and reappearance of a doll. A year or more ago there was published a charming collection of animal folk-tales told by two old darkey "mammies" to three children on a Virginia plantation after the war. Anna V. Culbertson is the author of "At the Big House," which this season is issued in a new edition, with many full-page colored pictures and marginal drawings as amusing as the stories, by E. Warde Blaisdell. All boys will approve of "Pipetown Sandy," by the "March King," Sousa. Pipetown Sandy did not take kindly to learning in the village school; but when a rich invalid boy becomes his teacher, a new world of nature is opened to him. Sandy later does his teacher great credit by becoming an inventor and also a large-spirited man.

H. M. CALDWELL COMPANY signalize the holiday season by introducing a new juvenile series, sure to please hosts of animal lovers. It is called the Animal Autobiographical Series, and each volume contains the story of an animal as told by himself, the incidents, as far as possible, having been taken from life and showing accurate knowledge of the traits of animals. This year's numbers include "Pup," by Olive Hurd Bragdon, telling the story of an English greyhound; "Yoppy," by Mollie L. Clifford, giving the adventures of a clever little monkey who was stolen by an organ-grinder; and "Neddy" by Gertrude Sellon, relating the true history of a much-tried donkey. Each of the books has a frontispiece in colors as well as pleasing half-tones. The old-time favorite Pleasant Street Series has three additions, two being animal stories. "The Bird Hospital" is by Caroline C. Bascom, who brightly discusses the various wild birds that have come under her care; "A Tale of Two Terriers, Crib and Fly," is edited by Charles Welsh, who stands as authority for all the canine pranks here recounted; and "Little Mildred's Secret," by Grace Squires, is a pathetic story of a wee girl, saddened by separation from her family, but determined to put a brave face on it. Pretty pictures and binding lend attraction to the stories. For the little toddlers, this house has ready The Nursery Hour Series, each volume being made up of familiar rhymes, parodied, and illustrated and printed in colors with a gorgeous cover. The first three volumes are "Bunny's House and Other Rhymes," "Santa Claus' Rat and Other Rhymes," and "Farmer Fox and Other Rhymes." There are four new titles added to the well liked Six to Sixteen Series; four also to the Editha Series; and several each to Famous Books for Boys and Famous Books for Girls, consisting of stories that have stood the test of time.

THE GOLDEN GOOSE.

THE CENTURY COMPANY have ready a delightful surprise for little folks in "Queen Zixi of Ix." With L. Frank Baum of "The Wizard of Oz" fame as guide we are introduced into a fairy kingdom, and are told of a magical cloak which grants to each wearer just one wish. Now the king of this land, called Noland, is a little peasant lad who quite unexpectedly becomes ruler of this wonderful kingdom. But soon the magic cloak, passed from hand to hand, begins to create very strange complications, and, in the midst of the confusion, a queer race of mischief-making monsters, known as the Roly-Rogues, descend upon Noland and—but that would be telling. So we shall instead recommend every one to get the book itself and find out all about it, and see the lovely pictures in color that Frederick Richardson has painted. Those older boys and girls who long years ago, so they think, passed beyond the fairy tale age, will find instructive and, at the same time, entertaining reading in Tudor Jenks's "Captain Myles Standish," telling the history of that brave, true soldier, who while not a Puritan, joined his fortunes with the Mayflower Pilgrims and gave his military skill, wise counsel and indomitable courage to the struggling Plymouth colony. Mr. Jenks has not only achieved a sympathetic portrayal of this little known man, but has also recounted the early history of the colony and the events in England which led up to the desperate expedition to the New World. The author of "Pinkey Perkins" is without doubt a man who is still three-quarters a boy—one who has not forgotten how it feels to be bubbling over with mischief which must be let out. In "Pinkey Perkins" Captain Harold Hammond has presented a bona fide American boy, full of pranks and original nonsense, but sound of heart and quick of brain. Pinkey's life in school and village was hardly in line with the standard set by Sunday-school book heroes; still there is nothing malicious, underhanded or really wrong in any of his adventures. Again bound volumes of St. Nicholas are ready, the last, alas, which will bear the imprint of Mrs. Dodge's able editorship. No better present can be chosen than the two volumes of the current year or a subscription for 1906, which will mean a Christmas present twelve times a year. And in this connection it may be noted that the Century Company have in preparation a series of "Historical Stories" culled from St. Nicholas, and can now offer a volume of "Indian Stories." This project has been suggested by the success of a similar series of "Animal Stories," published a year ago.

T. Y. CROWELL & COMPANY have several collections of standard works for young people, that are in selection and in make-up among the very best in the market. Their Children's Favorite Classics comprise works that delight all young readers, and should be included in their permanent library. There are too many of them to do more than mention a few, such as "Alice in Wonderland," "Black Beauty," "Jackanapes," "Tanglewood Tales," "Tales from Shakespeare," "Robinson Crusoe," "Swiss Family Robinson," and many, many others all bound in durable cloth, in uniform style, with special designs in colors for each volume. The Handy Volume Classics include works always in demand that would make charming presents for young people as well as old. Then there are the Standard Books for Young People, the Golden Hour Series for Young People and the new and cheaper edition of Jacob Abbott's famous "Rollo" books, the delight of a former generation, all offering a choice of unusual richness and variety to Christmas shoppers. The latest little volume of child verse to bid for popular favor has an apt title and comes in alluring dress. It is entitled "Rhymes of Little Boys," by Burges Johnson, and is bound in a striking plaid gingham, with pasted label and decorative wrapper. The table of contents also is attractive, containing "Goin' Barefoot," "Bein' Sick," "Gettin' Well," "Cookin' Things," "Apple-Pie," "Ketchin' Rides," "Gettin' Washed," "Pirates' Cave," and numerous other things of perennial interest. And Mr. Johnson has preserved the boyish flavor to an admirable degree. The verses impress one as being true to life, as well as pleasing on their own account. The bulk of them are in the small boy language; while others at the end of the book are addressed to boys. This is one of the Crowell's leading gift books. Along with it are ranged their Twentieth Century Juveniles so pretty in appearance, so well-written and from the best authors. The additions to the series this year are "Beaufort Chums," by Edwin L. Sabin, having its scene on the Mississippi River, when it has overflowed the levees and destroyed much property; two boy friends rescue a dog, deserted by its owners, and from that time onward, the boys and the dog make history. Besides the hunting, fishing, camping, swimming, and skating adventures, which are related with all the fidelity of a fellow adventurer, we find a good picture of a river town, especially as viewed by its younger population. "The Family on Wheels," a story adapted from the French by J. MacDonald Oxley and illustrated by E. Boyd Smith, tells of the unique way in which a group of orphan children earn a living. Travelling with a trained elephant, dog and horse, they stop on the road and give exhibitions. The little mountebanks are pretty and witty and have really a good show, which attracts attention everywhere, their own personalities making friends for them, and leading on to fortune. The story is delightfully told. the spirit of the French provinces being well retained. the pathos of some of the situations giving way to flashes of humor and excitement, the ending being all that could be desired. The illustrations fit the story, and add to the quaint flavor. The third Twentieth Century juvenile is "The Story of the Big Front Door," by Mary F. Leonard, and has for characters a group of lively, healthy, spirited youngsters ready for any kind of fun, and most ingenious in inventing pastimes. The girls start a club called the "Merry Knitters" and the boys in return start another with the motto "helped every one his neighbor." The chronicles of the clubs will both help and please young people.

DODD, MEAD & COMPANY have been especially thoughtful of the girls, the majority of their Christmas books having girl heroines, though an occasional boy is permitted to take part in the fun. Their "leader" is "The True Story of Humpty Dumpty," by Anna Alice Chapin, author of "Babes in Toyland" and other successful "juveniles." Ethel Franklin Betts, the well-known illustrator, furnishes the many lovely page pictures in color and the decorations—that is the head and tail pieces, the cover design, the charming design on the linings of cover, etc. The story relates to three little children who not only did not believe generally in fairy tales, but even were daring enough to scoff at Santa Claus and Mother Goose. They all fell asleep one evening on the rug before the nursery fire, and some very strange things happened. A queer little green sprite visited them and announced he was Bizzybuzz, sent by Mother Goose to summon them all three to Make Believe Land! Though frightened, they cannot resist the command, and make the journey directed by Bizzybuzz on the back of a huge white owl. Arrived in Make Believe Land and confronted with Mother Goose, they are scolded well for their unbelief, and each is set a task as punishment, that a more healthy state of mind may be arrived at. One child is told to go in search of Humpty Dumpty, and release him from the enthralment of a wicked magician, who has changed him into an egg. The two little girls, and the swaggering little boy start on their pilgrimages, and have wonderful things happen to them, meet the queerest birds and fairies and altogether have a bewildering time. The story is full of poetry, and has a moral too, though carefully disguised. Altogether in reading matter and pictures it stands as one of the most important of the holiday books. Second only in beauty and desirability is "The Wild Flower Fairy Book," compiled by Esther Singleton from the folk tales of all nations. There are tales from the French, and the English, the German, Danish, Norwegian, the Japanese, Arabian and Hindu. Some of them have been heard before, not one, however, but will bear a second and a third reading. The artistic side here is in the hands of Charles B. Falls. Each text page has a flower design in outline, covering the page and printed in a green tint. The illustrations embrace many page pictures in colors. A group of busy, happy, healthy minded children dance through Barbara Yechton's "Some Adventures of Jack and Jill," making reading matter of the best kind for other children. The book is not in any way sensational, dealing with the doings of the average girl and boy. In this case the scene is on a coral island belonging to Great Britain, the illustrations being characteristic. For genuine humor, of the most mirth-provoking kind, the author who writes under the name of "E. Nesbit" (Mrs. Herbert Bland), is warmly recommended. Those who read her "Phœnix and the Carpet" and "The Wouldbegoods" know just what to look for in "Five Children and It," a delightful fairy tale of five children upon whom a certain fairy bestows the power to have all their wishes come true. The story in spite of its unsubstantial basis, is so modernized as to be most acceptable to children. Amanda M. Douglas has written another "Little Girl" book, Martha Finley another "Elsie" book, and Carolyn Wells another "Patty" book. What better news can there be than this to the adorers of these popular and charming heroines? Each writer puts into her story just those fascinating details of a delightful home life, that all young people revel in. No tears are demanded for the fortunes of the three girls introduced—everything going as merrily as wedding bells to the end. Miss Wells in "Patty in the City" depicts a happy winter spent by winsome Patty Fairfield in New York City with her widowed father and "Grandma." Hard study at a finishing school alternates with Saturday afternoons that are dreams of delight, and Patty has her romance as well as her handsome young father, that girls will read and envy. "A Little Girl in Old San Francisco" is, we think, one of the best, if not the best of the Little Girl Series. It makes the San Francisco of fifty years ago so real, and is so rich in information that older people will be as eager to read it as young ones. The "little girl" was a native of Maine, who travelled with her old family friend to the Pacific coast in the beginning of the outbreak of the gold fever. She sees many strange sights, discovers a father she thought dead, who is rich enough to take her abroad, where she refuses a lord, preferring the lover she had left in California. "Elsie and her Namesakes" makes the twenty-seventh volume of the Elsie books, and yet it is just as much in demand as if it were among the first volumes of the chronicles of this popular heroine, whose first entrance into the realms of romance was read by the mothers of this generation. Many old friends are brought together again at Woodburn and Grandma Elsie is as charming as of old, making delightful evenings for the young folks in reciting stories of Washington, Lincoln, etc.

TO-DAY IS MY TENTH BIRTHDAY.

DODGE PUBLISHING COMPANY have made books for children and they know what pleases children, and this year they have made a most satisfactory supply of tempting Christmas attractions. Robert Louis Stevenson's "A Child's Garden of Verses" appears in an illustrated edition. The chief feature of this new edition of Stevenson's child verse is the numerous charming colored illustrations by Bessie Collins Pease. The delicate and captivating work from the pencil and brush of this artist is in strong sympathy with these old favorite verses which continue to delight both young and old. "Gammer Grethel's Fairy Tales" come from the provision of the inexhaustible Brothers Grimm. They are translated by Edgar Taylor, the first translator, and have the original thirty-four full-page illustrations by George Cruikshank and others. Anne Batchelor has in "Old Nursery Rhymes" a collection of taking little verses that at once impress themselves upon the child's memory; and in "The Story of Jesus" a collection of charmingly put Bible stories, both with many illustrations in color; and "Lamb's Shakespeare" is a new version of the famous "tales," with many charming illustrations by Helen Stratton. A beautiful wall card for the nursery is "Who Entereth Here," by Max Ehrmann, author of "A Prayer." It is printed on Japanese wood in two colors and forms a most beautiful companion to the former work.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & COMPANY have ready four particularly good books for holiday selection. A mine of fairy wealth will be found in Violet Jacob's collection of fairy tales under the name title, "The Golden Heart." This gifted author has turned her story telling faculty to good use in helping to gladden the lives of countless children with these eight delightful stories, rich in fancy, absorbing in interest, and characterized by unusual literary excellence. Miss May Sandheim has added many pleasing illustrations. The line of demarkation between fairy lore and myths is so slight as to be undiscoverable; therefore, Hamilton W. Mabie's volume of "Myths Every Child Should Know" has many of the qualities of fairy literature. Dr. Mabie has laid tax upon the mythology of Greece, Rome, Germany, and Scandinavia, culling from each such myths as will especially appeal to a child's imagination. He has made his selection with rare judgment and taste, so that one finds between the covers of this book the tale of "The Dragon's Teeth," and "The Quest of the Hammer," "The Argonauts" and "How Odin Lost His Eye," as well as a dozen other titles. Blanche Ostertag's skilful pencil has visualized the very spirit of the myths. The volume is gotten up in uniform style with Dr. Mabie's Poems and Fairy Tales that "Every Child Should Know." Meredith Nugent's "New Games and Amusements" will be a treasure trove to distracted mothers at their wits' end to know how to keep the children out of mischief. Put this book in the youngsters' hands and they will be kept occupied for days. They will learn how to make giant soap bubbles that will last five to ten minutes; sunshine engines, circus kites, tops, automobiles, egg-shell clowns, etc., etc., numberless new toys that will delight the jaded taste of twentieth century children. The directions are supplemented by numerous drawings showing how the various devices should look in parts and when completed. Similar in purpose is "The Child's Rainy Day Book," wherein Mary White Talbot has turned her practical and inventive knowledge to excellent account. She describes in simple language how to make paper flowers and toys, what can be done with beads, how to make baskets, how to model in clay and various other useful and pretty occupations for little fingers, only kept in order when kept busy. And again the pictures are a most effective part of the book.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. have children's books that are things of beauty, and appeal to children from the days when they know only color and shape until they reach an age when the standard literature of the world can be put before them enriched by color, print and bindings that make them long to enjoy and to possess. "Dutton's Holiday Annual" has reached the eighteenth year of its continued and increasing success, and this year has accomplished what would seem an impossibility; it is more full of good things and prettier than ever. All the old favorite names show in its contents—G. Manville Fenn, L. T. Meade, L. L. Weedon and hosts of others have done their best, and the equally familiar names appear among the artists. The adventures of Shipwrecked Jumbo and his bear Friday are told in "Jumbo Crusoe," with irresistibly comic pictures by G. H. Thompson; "The Little People's Book of Wild Animals" teaches natural history in the words of G. Manville Fenn and Geraldine Glasgow, and is full of pictures of truth and beauty besides; "The Jingle Book" has rhymes by J. R. Monsell that at once fasten on the nursery memory; and "The Old Woman Who Rode on a Broom," by T. Butler Stoney, contains many humorous drawings that will delight the parents as much as "the kids." Does not the title "The Fairy Bird and Piggy Wig, and Other Stories" promise lots of fun and Mabel Chadburn's words and the pictures in color and black and white more than realize expectation; "The Children's Christmas Treasury" is edited by Edward Hutton, and contains about thirty old new fairy stories and the same number of bright illustrations also in colors and black and white. And when you come to cater for your little nephews and nieces of larger growth remember "The North Pacific," by Willis Boyd Allen, who tells the entrancing story of the just ended Russo-Japanese war, with its Japanese hero, who was present in every kind of danger and adventure; or, "The Lost Treasure Cave," in which Everett McNeil takes his schoolboy heroes on a visit to Southern Colorado and shows them Indians, bandits, cowboys and big game, and all the delights and perils of ranch life; or, "The Diary of a Girl in France," kept by a girl of fourteen in the year 1821, who also made her own pictures of all the strange things she saw, and now shares her experiences with other girls of fourteen; or, Theodore Wood's "A Natural History of Mammals," and "A Natural History of Birds, Fishes, etc.," which teach natural history so it can never be forgotten, and show all the animals in fine, accurately colored pictures. And now we come to the dear old stories, and the Duttons have put many of them into a series called Told to the Children, beautifully printed and illustrated in colors, and in these little volumes they can learn the stories the world has always loved of "Robin Hood," "King Arthur's Knights," "The Faerie Queen," "Kingsley's Heroes," "The Water Babies," "Old Testament Stories," and "Stories from the Life of Christ." And three new volumes are added to Alice Spencer's delightfully told "Stories from Shakespeare for Children," and they can now learn of Julius Cæsar, "Hamlet" and "Macbeth," with footnotes of the "hard words" and many artistic illustrations. "Stories of King Arthur and the Round Table" are presented by Beatrice Clay, with illustrations by Dora Curtis; "Child Characters from Dickens" are presented by L. L. Weedon, chiefly in the words of Dickens, with illustrations by Arthur A. Dixon; and there is a new edition of "Robinson Crusoe," with J. Ayton Symington's celebrated illustrations. Good news for the boys is the reissue of Captain Mayne Reid's stories, which will please them as they did their fathers and mothers. Does it not fire even an up-to-date boy to hear such titles as "Afloat in the Forest," "The Death Shot," "The Headless Horseman," and "The White Chief"? The Duttons also control the Nister color books made in Nuremberg, Germany. Finer color printing does not exist in the world today. It's so good for the little tots to see such animals as Nister prints. Get them "Cat Tales," "Dog Tales," "Moo-Cow Tales" or "Horse Tales," and when they go to sleep just sit down and look at them yourself. You'll envy the children.

DUNSTER BROWN WAS AWAITING THE COMING OF A SMALL BOAT.

PAUL ELDER & COMPANY have ready for the little tots "Teddy Sunbeam," by Charlotte Grace Sperry, illustrated by Albertine Randall Wheelan. "The Menehunes," by Emily Foster Day, illustrated by Spencer Wright. "A Book of Nature"; "A Letter to the Little" and "Flowers of Fate," a book of fortune telling, are all calculated to interest. "The Long Tale of a Short Tale" is thirty verses long; "Children of the Thornwreath," by Gertrude Le Page, illustrated by Marion Holden, tells a very pretty story; and "Some Children's Letters About Wild Animals I Have Known" show the observation of bright minds and a quaint childish way of putting their discoveries. Every book on Paul Elder's list is a little model of book-making, and nothing is better for children than to have all their books tasteful and well-made. Parents and guardians do a great wrong when they give children books on poor paper with figures out of drawing and coloring that "cries to heaven." All publishers that spend money for fine illustrations and do artistic color printing are really benefactors among the little ones. And then these publishers always have cheerful books, and that also is a boon and a blessing. Young people cannot learn early enough to look on the bright side of life, and nothing grows more rapidly than a cheerful spirit when properly fed by bright tales of bravery and content.

"I NEVER GO OUT TWICE WITH ANYONE WHO CANNOT PRODUCE A GOOD ROLL."

DANA ESTES & COMPANY always know what kind of stories young people will like and enlist the help of such favorite authors as Ellis, Otis, Harriet A. Cheever, Evelyn Raymond and the like to provide Christmas surprises. For the boys' share this year there is "The Minute Boys of the Mohawk Valley," told in James Otis's most stirring style, recounting the adventures of two sturdy American boys during 1777 when Joseph Brant, the great Mohawk chief, entered New York from Canada, hoping to combine with the Royalists against the patriots. "Plucky Jo" is also a story to delight any ordinary boy, especially as it is written by another of the boys' own authors. Edward S. Ellis has drawn a picture of a fine manly fellow, a good fighter, a better friend and an all-round honest, bright chap, whom every one likes. He is introduced as a freckled-face youngster; and we do not part with him until he has been graduated from Princeton and has started in business; and right sorry we are to say good-bye even then. A new volume in The Young of Heart Series is about a country-loving boy whose father buys a two-hundred-and-ten-acre farm, where Charley has the time of his life, raising crops, fishing, hunting and lumbering. This book is entitled "The Old Monday Farm" and is written by Louise R. Baker. "Mr. Penwiper's Fairy Godmother," also in this series, is a droll little story, wherein there is plenty of action, by Amy Woods, a new writer. "Tommy Joyce and Tommy Joy" is, on the contrary, by the well-known and greatly liked Harriet A. Cheever. She has spun a delightful yarn about two youngsters, one a street Arab, the other an indulged child of wealth, both of whom find themselves on a ship sailing the ocean which they find very frequently is not at all blue. The friendship formed between these boys and the incidents of their voyage make an intensely interesting tale. Mrs. Cheever's name is also on the title-page of "Josie Bean: Flat Street," but in this case she has written for girls who will undoubtedly be absorbed in the history of the poor girl who first became a milliner's assistant, and later, because of her many winning qualities, was offered the chance to study art and even go to Paris. Quite different are the surroundings of the heroine of Evelyn Raymond's "The Brass Bound Box." She lives in a big, old country house, furnished with traditions and a mystery as well as furniture, and there she and a jolly young boy have all manner of adventures, leading to a happy ending. Laura E. Richards, beloved of girl readers, has ready a new Christmas tale, called "The Armstrongs," composed of letters written to their mother by three city girls who go to spend the summer with their mother's spinster cousin on a big ancestral farm. And there they have all varieties of good times, assisted by the girls' older brother. For smaller girls the Estes have ready "Mary 'n' Mary," a poor Mary and a rich Mary, both fun-loving little girls who are, like all healthy children, in and out of mischief. Almost all young girls love to fuss around the kitchen, getting very much in cook's way, and producing dishes that even doting parents find difficult to digest. "A Little Cook-Book for a Little Girl," by the author of "Gala Day Luncheons," is for just such little girls. It explains how to make plain and pretty things to eat; how to prepare cereals, eggs, soups, salads, desserts and candies, the directions being given in simple, understandable language suitable to girls from eight to fourteen years old. No more useful gift can be selected for aspiring cooks than this. Several new titles have been added to the Boys' Own Authors' Series, which is made up of old favorites well bound and sold at a uniform price. The Little People's Series is designed for children from seven to ten years of age, and contains stories by popular authors, prettily illustrated and neatly bound. And, as usual, there is the yearly volume of "Chatterbox," a mine of wealth to children of all varieties of taste.

HOPE LAY ON THE SOFA, WATCHING.

Fox, Duffield & Company have on their list some books as dainty and original as one can hope to find. "Verses for Jock and Joan" is a square quarto, encased in picture covers and charmingly illustrated with full-page illustrations in softly blending colors by the skilful brush of Charlotte Harding. And there are also marginal pictures depicting the joys, woes and diversions of youngster-hood. But have we said that the verses are written by the gifted Helen Hay Whitney? Some five years ago Mrs. Whitney published her "Little Boy Book," which showed an exquisite lightness of touch, sympathetic imagination and keen appreciation of the child's point of view. All these qualities are observable in this new collection of verses. They seem to sing themselves from the very heart of a child and touch on older heart strings at the same time. In Virginia Gerson's "More Adventures of the Happy Heart Family," we meet old acquaintances come to life again, and very glad we are to meet them. One of last season's prettiest surprises was the "Happy Heart Family," wherein gay and lively Hearts, pictured in dainty colors, disported themselves in amazing adventures. In this new book we first come across Mother-Heart, Papa Good-Heart and the little Hearts cast up on the beach after having been tumbled out of the Catama-nanny-boat by a high wave. Later on they meet the Valentine family, and the amusing story ends, as all holiday stories should, with Kris Kringle, a tree and loads of presents. Miss Gerson is responsible not only for the fascinating illustrations but also for the no less original text. Mrs. Candace Wheeler tells us in "Double Darling and the Dream Spinner," that Doubledarling was so named because she was twice as good and twice as beautiful as any other little girl—or, so her family thought. And as her father gets for her a wonderful dream spinner, we have here a group of thoroughly entertaining stories which were first told by the dream spinner to Doubledarling, and are now shared with other boys and girls who are undoubtedly thrice-darling to their mothers and fathers. Certainly Mrs. Wheeler knows just what kind of a story little folks like; and they will also heartily approve of the tinted pictures provided by Dora Wheeler Keith. One must not forget to menton that Fox, Duffield have ready a new third edition of Kate D. Sweetser's "Ten Girls from Dickens," and another edition also of Mrs. Sangster's "The Little Kingdom of Home," either of which will make an acceptable gift for older girls.

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY have just the book to give to a boy in "The Boys' Life of Christ," by the Rev. William Byron Forbush. The book is made to appeal strongly to the boy nature. Christ is seen playing the games of boys; camping out with the fishermen; sailing the lake in the storm; braving the enmity of the mighty; dying like a soldier for a holy cause. Text and illustration portray the character of Jesus, with the same vividness and movement as are found in the favorite juvenile biographies of popular heroes.

GINN & COMPANY were among the pioneers with nature stories and William J. Long among the first who listened to "the cry of the wild." He is the author of a delightful list of works on the inhabitants of the forest, on the fishes, the birds of the air and other wild things, that are already well known in schools and homes. Children love such books, they while away many restless hours of enforced imprisonment in the nursery, when driven indoors by rain or snow. They not only derive entertainment but information from the reading, crying constantly for "more." "School of the Woods," perhaps more than any other single book, has called attention to Mr. Long's studies of animals and birds, and has shown him to be a keen observer and truthful recorder. Other works along the same line are "A Little Brother of the Bear," "Following the Deer," "Beasts of the Field," and "Fowls of the Air." Mr. Long's Wood Folk Series has become a classic, the titles of its various volumes being "Ways of Wood Folk," "Wilderness Ways," and "Secrets of the Woods," and "Wood Folk at School." A cheaper edition of this series is one of the features of the season. A new holiday edition of the "Seven Little Sisters" is among the other good things they would call attention to. Jane Andrews's books have for years been among the most sought after in this class of literature. Age has not yet told on them or staled their "infinite variety." Looking further through this list are the works of Margaret W. Morley on "Insect Folk" and butterflies, bees and flowers, "Bird Portraits," by Ernest Thompson Seton, "Mother Nature's Children," by Allan Walter Gould, and others too numerous to specify.

HARPER & BROTHERS have in "The Coming of Billy" a work readers of any age would enjoy. Although the story centres around a little boy of seven or eight years, it has its romance brought to a happy conclusion through Billy's intervention. Billy was sent from India to visit five maiden aunts in a small English town. Their efforts to coddle him and treat him as a baby are amusingly resented, the boy being a fine manly little fellow, who has had high ideas of truth and honor instilled into him by his soldier father. He is a regular little George Washington, his very unconventional honesty at times being most laughable. The author is Margaret Westhrup, who thoroughly understands boy nature. The Russo-Japanese war finds timely treatment in Kirk Munroe's "For the Mikado." Two boys, a Japanese and an American, from being roommates and "chums" at Annapolis, become officers in the Japanese navy, at the breaking out of the war in the East, and are figures in a series of unusual adventures, in which the sub-marine boat is greatly in evidence. The growing boy should inform himself thoroughly on all current topics, particularly on one so world-famed as the Russo-Japanese war. "For the Mikado" will throw light on much he never knew before, and will appeal to him with all the force of novelty of subject, and a rattling good story also. The very little ones had prepared for them "Wee Winkles and Wide-awake," by Gabrielle E. Jackson, and "Little Mother and Georgie," by Gertrude Smith. The title of the first book stands for the pet names of a little brother and sister who lived in a pretty town called Shadydale. Their true names were Herbert King and Pansy King, and their ages six and eight. The simple annals of their little lives told in short words and in large type make an appropriate book for little ones just beginning to read for themselves. "Little Mother and Georgie" belongs in the same category. Gertrude Smith will be recalled as the author of "The Roggie and Reggie Stories." This handsome octavo tells of the plays of "Little Mother" Florence, five years old, and "Georgie" who was Grandpa. Grandpa dressed up as a "kid" and mothered by Florence is funny enough. Florrie in mother's shawl and bonnet takes "Georgie" walking, out in the cars, sings him to sleep, and goes through other plays as quaint as they are ingenious.

HENRY HOLT & COMPANY'S "The Peter Newell Mother Goose" will be a fascinating surprise for youngsters all over the land. Peter Newell's pictures were never more droll, more quaint, than these presenting Mother Goose episodes, which Carolyn S. Bailey has cleverly connected in a history of a little girl's adventures in Gooseland. The old, old, favorites are met here, saying the familiar old rhymes under original circumstances, with Peter Newell's queer little men and women appearing in most extraordinary positions. It is a book for young and old to laugh over and enjoy again and again. "The Wizards of Ryetown" is also comic and absurd in spirit. Reversing the accustomed order, the heroine fares forth to seek the prince, and in an enchanted wood meets animals wise and otherwise, as well as a most malicious witch and the many ludicrous inhabitants of Ryetown. But the story ends in the good old way with marriage bells and happiness "ever after."

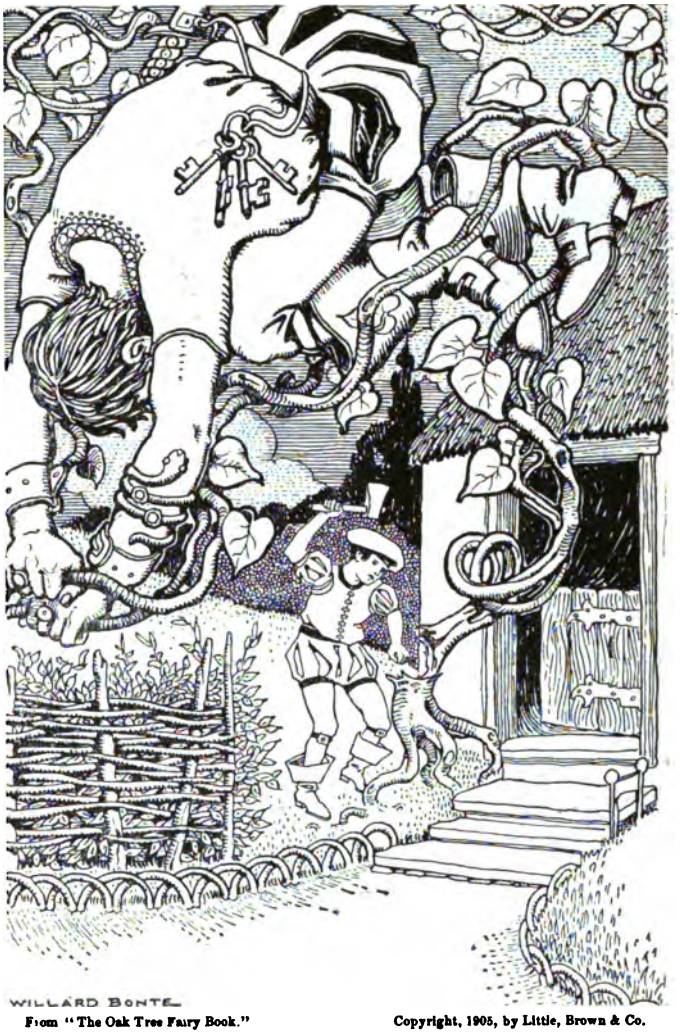
"YOU AIN'T USED TO LONDON, BE YOU SISSY."

Carrol W. Rankin has written a capital story for girls, entitled "Dandelion Cottage," with Florence Scovel Shinn's and Elizabeth Finley's illustrations. It tells of the experiences of four young girls who are given the use of a tumble-down cottage for the summer. What a healthy, happy, jolly time they have playing house! It will make almost any normal girl want to go and do likewise next summer. Marion Ames Taggart's "Nut Brown Joan" is also about a little housekeeper. She is the ugly duckling of a large family, and being an energetic lovable child more than her share of the family burdens fall on her shoulders. But, withal, she manages to have many frolics and to steer the family through domestic and financial difficulties. "The Boys of Bob's Hill," by Charles P. Burton, is essentially a boys' book, though boys' sisters will like it also, we are confident. These New England youngsters have anything but a tranquil life, for do we not all know that where two or three boys are gathered together, there is always something "doing."



HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & COMPANY are unusually fortunate this season in having a brilliantly written book for boys from the pen of Arthur Stringer, hitherto a writer of novels and poems. More or less based upon his own childish days, apparently, as was Aldrich's "Story of a Bad Boy," the air of reality that pervades "Lonely O'Malley" is its greatest charm. Its quaint philosophical reflections and attractive literary style and the many original poems interspersed through the narrative will, however, be quite wasted upon the little seeker after mere amusement. To the "grown-ups" the author must turn for true appreciations of Lonely's most complex characteristics and the underlying humor of many of his escapades. The boys will find enough, too, to satisfy them. Lonely is a "limb," the terror of his neighborhood, and with such a vivid imagination that the "unvarnished" truth is an impossibility with him. His goat has as much histrionic ability as himself, while there is not much in the way of trapping, fishing, playing Indian or raiding a neighbor's orchard that is unknown to him. We are happy to add that with all these undeniable shortcomings he possesses a few virtues, several heroic acts being placed to his credit. Frank T. Merrill's sketches are keenly interpretive of the humor of the many funny and dramatic situations. An almost forgotten chapter of the Revolutionary War—the Cherry Valley massacre in the year 1778—has been made the central theme of Everett T. Tomlinson's "The Red Chief." Brant, the renowned Mohawk chief, is the hero of this tragic story of the cruel murder of the defenceless people on the New York frontiers after the surrender of Burgoyne. The story is not all sad, nor dryly historical, having stirring accounts of experiences and adventures that cannot fail to appeal to all intelligent boys—and their sisters likewise—as we see no reason why girls should be debarred from reading their brother's books. A charming little book made doubly attractive by the fine literary qualities of Eliza Orne White and the artistic ability of Katharine Pyle is "An Only Child." Not only its illustrations, but its cover design are the work of Miss Pyle, making a most appropriate setting to Miss White's story. Lois, the only child, has been brought up by herself, and mourns for companions of her own age. These she finds in the family of the new minister, and in the minister himself, whom the little girl learns to love dearly through his fine sympathy for youth and his companionship. The scene is a country town, and there is little to tell outside of Lois's adoption of a stray kitten, good times at Sunday-school picnics, tea parties and so on, with other joys and sorrows of an only child. Last holiday season was celebrated with the issue of Olive Thorne Miller's "Kristy's Queer Christmas." This popular writer again presents in "Kristy's Surprise Party" a book on similar lines and of similar appearance, illustrated in colors and with a striking pictorial cover by Ethel N. Farnsworth, giving the volume a decided holiday appearance. The friends who participated in Kristy's Christmas give her a surprise party, at which each tells a story and presents to her a story book. There are sixteen independent stories, varying from the deepest pathos to the wildest fun. Short stories comprise the contents of two juveniles to be highly recommended, "The Star Jewels," by Abbie Farwell Brown, and "The Golden Goose," by Eva March Tappan.

From "Lilliput Revels." John Lane Company.

"HE LOVES ME, HE LOVES ME NOT."

Though both are collections of fairy tales, they have points of difference. The initial story of "The Star Jewels" gives an authentic account of the origin of star fish, which were, the author says, "of course originally set in the sky as five-pointed jewels." This theme is carried out both in the text and in the makeup of the book, the whole being in fives, like the points of a starfish. There are five little stories, five tiny poems intimately connected therewith, five large pictures, and five small ones. Each is complete in itself, yet a part of the scheme of the book. Thus the whole makes an acceptable chain of little jewels, strung together for the children's pleasure, like the little mermaid's necklace spoken of in the first story. The second collection, "The Golden Goose," consists of six fairy tales from ancient Scandinavian sources, well told in simple, direct language suitable for little children. An exquisitely beautiful new edition of Hawthorne's "Wonder Book for Girls and Boys," illustrated profusely with colored designs by Walter Crane, in full pages, head and tail pieces, etc., is one of the much-to-be coveted holiday books.

JACK AND THE BEAN-STALK.

HURST & COMPANY fairly revel in books for the young arrived at the reading age. Hurst's Young America Library comprises one hundred and fifty volumes that have all been tested by time. They represent the best efforts of "Oliver Optic," Horatio Alger, Jr., J. T. Trowbridge, Jacob Abbott and other writers whose books have become as familiar as "household words." The additions for this season are two of "Oliver Optic's" stories upon which the copyright has just expired entitled "In School and Out" and "Rich and Humble." They are issued in several other of their series, and may be bought at most reasonable prices and in most attractive form. Hurst's Home Series for Girls has been selected with just as much care as the foregoing series, and contains the very cream of juvenile literature prepared for girls. Hurst's whole catalogue should be carefully examined by buyers for the home, or the Christmas tree of the Sunday-school or the week day school, as it is a most satisfactory one to select from.

GEORGE W. JACOBS & COMPANY are not without one of the popular animal books so much in fashion just at present. "Trixsey's Travels" is designed for a child, the information it contains being imparted in a bright, chatty style. Trixsey is a little tame gray squirrel, who has never known anything of life outside of his cage, when one day his little mistress leaves his cage door open, and he scampers away to the woods. All that he sees there is new and wonderful to him. He learns not only of the habits and life of the great squirrel family, but also of the rabbit, the hare, the fox, the ground hog, and other inhabitants of the woods. The animals all have the gift of speech and carry on most improving conversations with Trixsey. The author is Emily Paret Atwater whose stories of "Tommy's Adventures" and "How Sammy Went to Coral-Land" are permanent additions to young people's libraries. This is an issue of The Lad and Lassie Series, a collection of prettily made little books and original stories by favorite writers, that are most acceptable to children. A similar series on similar lines is the Little Maid Series, to which has just been added "Little Grandmother Jo," by Amy E. Blanchard to whose credit exist stories innumerable. "Little Grandmother Jo," is Eleanor Dallas's Grandmother and it is she who relates the story of her own school life of fifty years ago to her little granddaughter. The severe training of a half century ago is contrasted with the happy school life of to-day with its many pleasures and indulgences—the narrative however is not without gay episodes of his own. Also in the Little Maid Series is another story for girls by Louise Regina Baker, entitled "Mrs. Pinner's Little Girl." The interest centres in a charming little family made orphans, Mary, the elder, a girl of ten years, being adopted by the Pinners, rich, middle-aged people, who have lost their own child of that age. They are very good to her, and Mary learns to love them, but her big, tender sympathetic heart yearns for her little sisters and brothers, and she finds it impossible to be happy. Mrs. Pinner, who is a real mother to the sweet little girl, gratifies her wish at last, and sends for the little ones and Mary rejoices in a re-united family. The child's character is a fine study in gentleness and true goodness In "Dolly's Theatricals," by D. Gwyn Jefferies, five clever children undertake to write and present a little play in honor of their mothers' birthday. They have many strange experiences and funny mishaps, brightly and humorously written up.

JOHN LANE COMPANY offer to the children of today a dainty volume of poetical masques and little plays that gave great pleasure to the English children of thirty years and more ago. "Lilliput Revels" and "Innocents' Island" are products of the pen of W. B. Rand, having been published in 1870 and 1872, in the English periodical Good Words for the Young. The "Revels" consists of a number of fanciful plays, in which little children and characters from fairy land appear. "Innocents' Island" is a child's story in verse, told in most attractive measures. The little book as now sent out, with these literary efforts, has been edited by R. Brimley Johnson, and somewhat abbreviated, though not to the detriment of the delightful material, nothing that is essential to the story or really charming as poetry having been left out. The quaint conceits of the little plays, or "revels," are delightfully interpreted by Griselda Wedderburn in page pictures as original and poetical as the text. "Peterkins, the Story of a Dog," should also be mentioned, written by Ossip Schubin and translated by Mrs. Lane, and "A Year of Songs for a Baby in a Garden," by William Graham Robertson, who is both author and illustrator. Walter Crane's artistic picture books are always in order—no Christmas tree or Christmas stocking is complete without "Mother Hubbard," "Cinderella," "The Little Pigs," or one other of the old nursery tales.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY have made such rich provision for young people, big and little, that one hardly knows what to select. Boys who like adventure properly seasoned with romance will find "Viva Christina," by Edith E. Cowper, entirely satisfying. It is the story of a brave young Scot who joined the British Legion in Spain and helped to put down the Carlist uprising. An English girl and a Spanish maid, as beautiful as she is mysterious, offer chances a-plenty for chivalric deeds. Equally exciting are the experiences of two English boys who fight the white-turbaned Hindu in India as recounted in George Manville Fenn's "Shoulder Arms." English school life is the background of "The Boys of Badminster," wherein Andrew Home unravels the mystery of a case of mistaken identity with a plot for kidnapping included; and in G. I. Whitham's "The White Coats" Cavaliers and Roundheads are involved in the fortunes of two boy cousins, plucky youngsters who are not too young to play their part in the Civil War. For those young people who want to find out the whys and wherefores of life, the Lippincotts offer varied answers, combining simple yet accurate information. Archibald Williams follows up his successful books on exploration and steam locomotion by two others, entitled "The Romance of Modern Mechanism" and "The Romance of Modern Mining." The former is a readable, intensely interesting account of modern mechanical inventions and devices, while the second tells of the thrilling exploits of the workers underground. Charles R. Gibson contributes a kindred work, "The Romance of Electricity," in which he makes clear the wonder-working force which has revolutionized modern life. Nature lovers will find space on their bookshelves for "The Romance of Insect Life," by Edmund Selous, and Agnes Giberne's "The Romance of the Mighty Deep," the latter being an elaboration of a well-known work. Mention should also be made of the excellent illustrations found in all these "Romance" books. As girls are, secretly, as fond of adventures as their brothers, they will hail with delight "Little Miss Robinson Crusoe," a tale of a brave fourteen-year-old girl who is cast on a tropical island, where she has to devise for herself means of shelter, food and protection, and incidentally finds rich jewels and later other human survivors of the wreck. Mrs. George Corbett is the author of this story, as well as "The Adventures of Princess Daintipet," the fanciful experiences of a little royal maid in a fairy forest, where the trees grow bread and butter. "Wilful Cousin Kate," by that beloved of authors, Laura T. Meade, tells of a headstrong, intense girl who finds life very complex when she is sent to live with London cousins during the absence of her idolized invalid mother. Later she saves her mother's life, but almost loses her best reward. May Baldwin's "The Girls of St. Gabriel's" gives an excellent picture of school life in France, introducing also a glimpse of a beautiful old chateau and its inmates; and, by way of contrast, there is "Crab Cottage," in which Raymond Jacberns unfolds the history of two families of young people engaged in poultry raising in England. History has been drawn upon by J. F. M. Carter for the setting and incidents of "Diana Polworth, Royalist," since it is the story of a girl's life in the days of the Commonwealth. Short stories are always welcome, especially such as are found in Brown Linnett's "The Kidnapping of Ettie;" and who will dare say there can ever be too many editions of the wonderful "Grimm's Fairy Tales"? This new edition, translated by Mrs. Edgar Lucas and pictured by Arthur Rackham, is an uncommonly attractive volume. Thousands of children will also be charmed to receive this year's "Wallypug" book, in which Mr. Farrow continues the adventures of this extraordinary and amusing creature in the moon, where things undreamed of by every-day mortals befall His Highness. The illustrations are as funny as the text, and that is the highest praise.

THEN SHE HOPPED AWAY FROM POLLY AND MADE A LITTLE CHEESE RIGHT ON THE SIDEWALK.

LITTLE, BROWN & COMPANY, in preparing their holiday list, evidently have taken into consideration the interest common to us all in the lives and exploits of other real human beings, since four of their leading juveniles deal with persons who have actually lived and wrought. Around the childhood of eight celebrated men—poets, artists and musicians, like Byron, Gainsborough and Handel, have been woven stories based on fact and only colored with imagination. These "Boys Who Became Famous Men," as portrayed by Harriet P. Skinner, are a very companionable, entertaining company. Likewise absorbing as fiction are the narratives presented in Jennie Hall's "Men of Old Greece," in which the lives of Leonidas, Themistocles, Socrates and Phideas are told with the culminating event in the career of each. Heroism and love of country shine forth in "Heroes of Iceland." Years ago Sir George Webbe Dasent translated into English the great Icelandic saga, "The Story of Burnt Njal," and it is this saga that Allen French has taken and recast in more simple form, while retaining all of its vivid reality. It is a tale of Iceland in the tenth century, introducing actual personages, and showing the pursuits and customs of those sturdy, courageous Norsemen at the time of the coming of Christianity. Heroism enters wholly into "With Spurs of Gold," by Frances N. Greene and Dolly W. Kirk, who tell tales of the brave old days of chivalry and of those knights, Roland and Oliver, the Cid and Chevalier Bayard, Richard Cœur de Lion and Sir Philip Sidney, who made their times glorious. The New World is the scene of William Henry Johnson's "French Pathfinders in North America," and if the exploits of Cartier, La Salle, Champlain and many others were less picturesque than those of the knights of Middle Age Europe, the bravery, determination and daring shown by them can never be excelled. Mr. Johnson gives a graphic and comprehensive account of the earliest explorations and settlements of the French in this country, and of the Indians, hostile and friendly, found here. Mary P. Wells Smith has seized upon historical events as the setting of "The Boy Captive in Canada," wherein the experiences of little Stephen Williams, the son of the Deerfield minister, are recounted, his wanderings as a captive with the Indians in Vermont and Canada after the massacre of Deerfield, and his happy release. The book is quite up to the author's "The Boy Captive of Old Deerfield," to which it is a sequel. Exceedingly modern boys figure in "Shipwrecked in Greenland," by Arthur R. Thompson, a story of perils and rescues of stranded travellers in Greenland and along the Labrador coast. Quite different in tone is Helen Leah Reed's "Amy in Arcadia," and if hairbreadth escapes give place to experiences more suitable to American and Canadian girls, the readers of the well-liked "Brenda" books will hardly object. In this story Miss Reed begins a new series, conducting the heroine and her friends to the romantic "Evangeline" country in Nova Scotia. Another writer dear to children of to-day is ready with a new holiday book. In "The Schoolhouse in the Woods" Miss Plympton gives a thoroughly natural picture of boys and girls at their lessons and at play—loving, teasing, wideawake youngsters, who make life a burden to a little darkey child simply because they do not think. Anna Chapin Ray, having completed her "Teddy" books, greatly to the regret of hosts of boys and girls who have become absorbingly interested in the doings of the McAlister family, now introduces in

"Sidney: Her Summer on the St. Lawrence" an entirely new set of characters. Sidney Stayre is a most likable girl, so her cousins find out when she comes to visit them in their St. Lawrence cottage, and it is amazing how much help and courage she gives to her boy cousin, ten years her senior, who is threatened with lung trouble. There are some mischievous little tots who add their quota to the summer's fun. The lover of dogs—and who is not?—will derive much amusement from "The Reform of Shaun" and its companion story, "Mystic and His Master," by Allen French; while budding naturalists are sure to find "Wilderness Babies," by Julia A. Schwartz, the very book they want, with its quaintly told tales of the opossum, the whale, the beaver, the bear and numerous others. No list is complete without a volume of fairy tales, so here is "The Oak-Tree Fairy Book," containing many old favorites which the editor, Clifton Johnson, has shorn of some barbarous details of cruelty and evil doings. Willard Bonte has added some charming pictures. For several seasons Miss Alcott's dearly loved stories have been reissued one by one in fitting manner, pleasingly illustrated and attractively bound. This year this edition is completed by the addition of "Under the Lilacs," pictured by Alice Barber Stephens, and "Jack and Jill," with Harriet Roosevelt Richards's illustrations, both bound in uniform style. Another new edition of an old favorite of many girl readers is M. E. Waller's "A Daughter of the Rich," newly illustrated by Ellen B. Thompson. The Boys' and Girls' Bookshelf has a number of attractive additions this year. "Nan's Chicopee Children" is a story of outdoors and playtimes by Myra S. Hamlin; "As the Goose Flies," by Katharine Pyle, is a pretty fairy story; "The Little Red Schoolhouse" and "A Cape May Diamond," both by Evelyn Raymond; "More Bed-Time Stories," by Louise Chandler Moulton; and "Blake Redding," by Natalie R. Clark, are all tales of boys and girls at work and play, in mischief and well out of it.

LONGMANS, GREEN & COMPANY have in Andrew Lang an apparently inexhaustible font of romance and fairy lore. They add this year the seventeenth volume to their world-famed Fairy Book Series, representative not only of Mr. Lang's industry and research along the highways and byways of the world's literature, but also of that of Mrs. Lang, his faithful collaborator. "The Red Romance Book," in line with its gayly bound predecessors, is designed for the recreation of young people. All the stories in the book were done out of the old romances by Mrs. Lang, as the editor, Mr. Lang, asserts in his preface where he explains "to children and others" what romances are. "We have made," he says further, "the old romances much shorter, keeping the liveliest parts, in which curious things happen. Some of the tales were first told in Iceland eight hundred years ago, and are mostly true and about real people. Some are from the ancient French romances of the adventures of Charlemagne, and his peers and paladins. Some are from later Italian poems of the same kind. 'Cupid and Psyche' is older, and so is the story of the man who was changed into a donkey. These are from an old Latin romance, written when people were still heathens, most of them. Some are about the Danes in England, but there is not much history in them." Mrs. Lang says: "In this book you will read of men, who, like Don Quixote, were often mistaken but never mean, and of women, such as Una and Bradamante, who kept patient and true, in spite of fierce trials and temptations." This pleasant assurance might stand as an endorsement of all the volumes of the Fairy Book Series, which can with confidence be placed in the hands of the young In all the bravery of its red and gold livery, and its prodigal array of illustrations in colors and black and white, the work is a delight to the eye, as well as food for the imagination. Mr. H. J. Ford, is again the illustrator, and a word is certainly in place in praise of his work. The variety and richness shown in his designs and the high level at which they are sustained, is most admirable and delightful. Attention is called this year again to "The Brown Fairy Book," as the most recent addition to the series. "The Red Romance Book" promises to sustain fully the reputation of its fellow volumes. Another child's book with many ancestors of renown is "The Golliwogg's Fox-Hunt," by Bertha and Florence K. Upton, depicting the black-browed Golliwogg and his "girls," on horseback and in riding costumes following the hounds. Their "run across the country" has many ludicrous accidents, which have full justice done them by the artist and verse maker. This is one of the books all children who know the "Golliwogg's" beginnings are impatiently waiting for. It is rich in laughs, and will bear many inspections.

LOTHROP, LEE & SHEPARD COMPANY make generous contributions to the good cheer and happy holiday feeling of the season. Girls and boys have both been thought of in their delightful list of stories by American writers, known wherever children are found on this great continent. A "leader" among girls' books is "When Grandmamma Was Fourteen." Here Mrs. Terhune, better known as "Marion Harland," tells the story of her life in Richmond, where, as a girl of fourteen, she attended school before our Civil War. The lights and shadows are artistically mingled, the book being both amusing and pathetic. Her own love affair, and that of her chum Sidney, a girl of sixteen, with other episodes of a different variety, such as come into the lives of most school girls, continues a narrative begun so auspiciously in "When Grandmamma Was New," both examples of Marion Harland's most charming manner. "Dolly's Double," by Ethel Wood, and "Laura in the Mountains," by Henrietta R. Eliot, are both for smaller girls. The first is about two little girls who bear a striking resemblance to each other. There is a mystery, which is cleared up, and "lots" of good times at the seaside and in the country. The second book has a heroine already met with in "Laura's Holidays." In this story a sprightly account is given of a camping out experience in the Oregon woods. In the detailed record presented through the later Pepper books of the sayings and doings of the "Little Brown House" family, it was quite impossible that Ben, "the quiet, steady-as-a-rock boy," should be omitted. So Margaret Sidney has put this eldest-born of Mother Pepper's brood into a book as chief character, the title naturally being "Ben Pepper," and the volume the tenth of the famous Pepper books. Although Ben was given to effacing himself, he had plenty of fun in him, and an unusually bright mind. Ben had no wish to be a hero, and if he had been listened to no book would have been written, but Polly and Joel and David and Phronsie helped Margaret Sidney accomplish her purpose by lovingly telling her the facts with which the book is strewn. A story of Bunker Hill may be sought within the covers of "Dan Monroe." W. O. Stoddard begins with it a well-planned series—the Revolutionary Series—the hero being one whose name is found in several trustworthy records as the drummer boy of the Lexington militia, his closest friend, Nat Herrington, being the fifer. The Concord fight, the battle of Bunker Hill, and the arrival of Washington are introduced as parts of a carefully preserved historical outline. A splendid gift for any boy or young man is "The Making of a Man," by Dr. Orison Swett Marden, a succession of talks on courage, success and honor and kindred topics, inspiring and helpful. "American Heroes and Heroines for Boys and Girls," by Pauline Carrington Bouvé, including sketches of Molly Pitcher, Paul Jones, Dolly Madison, Daniel Boone, and other famous Americans. "The Runaway Donkey, and Other Rhymes for Children," by Emilie Poulsson, is an ideal book for both home and kindergartens. It tells in illustrated rhymes more about the tricksy donkey Barney Gray, and also narrates the doings of various birds and beasts in a way to please the fancy and arouse the sympathy of children, while gratifying their love of animals. Notable additions have been made to almost every one of their popular juvenile series, the boys being specially favored. "At the Fall of Port Arthur" is another of Edward Stratemeyer's spirited war stories and the third volume in the Soldiers of Fortune Series. It relates, primarily, the adventures of Larry Russell, so well known to countless thousands of readers of the famous Old Glory Series. He joins the Japanese navy, and under Admiral Togo assists at the bombardment of Port Arthur. Life in the Japanese navy is described in detail. The fifth volume of the Colonial Series, "The Fort in the Wilderness," and "Dave Porter at Oak Hall" are both also by Edward Stratemeyer. "The Fort in the Wilderness" is a fine tale of colonial days and the noted Indian warrior Pontiac. A large portion of the action takes place at Detroit and around the Great Lakes. A typical American schoolboy, a manly, thoroughly up-to-day boy, is delineated in Dave Porter, whose fortunes will in succeeding volumes take him to adventures in distant lands. "The Boy Pathfinder," by William C. Sprague, has as hero an actual character, George Shannon, a Pennsylvania lad, who at seventeen left school to become one of the Lewis and Clark expedition. He had narrow escapes, but persevered, and the story of his wanderings, interwoven with excellent historical information, makes the highest type of general reading for the young. This is the second volume of the Making of Our Nation Series, of which the first volume is "The Boy Courier of Napoleon." A story of reaping good by doing good, bright and entertaining and full of life, incident and good sense has been conceived by Emma Lee Benedict in "The Gregory Guards," a boys' club, so-called, whose members are privileged to pass the summer at a rich young man's home on an island near New York. "The Scarlet Patch" is the story of a patriot boy in the Mohawk Valley, told by Mrs. Mary E. Q. Brush, full of thrilling scenes in which a faithful Indian figures prominently. The third volume of the Phillips-Exeter Series is "In the Line," by A. T. Dudley. As his first book, "Following the Ball," gives the fortunes of a player in the back field in connection with his general school life, so "In the Line" tells how a stalwart young student won his position at guard and at the same time made equally marked progress in the building of character. Plenty of jolly companions contribute a strong humorous element, and the book has every essential of a favorite. "The Boy Craftsman" is recommended to every boy, for every real boy wishes to design and make things. He will find this book one of the very best yet offered for the number of practical and profitable ideas which go to the limit of any construction. A. Neely Hall is the author. "Helen Grant at Aldred House" follows this attractive young heroine to the end of her school days, and depicts her gradual unfolding to an enthusiastic young womanhood. Amanda M. Douglas makes this the third volume of her Helen Grant Series. Miss Douglas's book is for older girls, the ones that follow appeal to much younger readers. "How Barbara Kept Her Promise," by Nina Rhoades, tells of the devotion of Barbara, aged twelve, to her little sister Hazel, who is "only eight." They are little English orphans, who are sent from their early home in London to their mother's family in New York. "Cordelia's Pathway Out," by Edna A. Foster, traces the development of quiet Cordelia, who appeared first in the author's story of "Hortense." "Randy's Luck," the sixth in succession of The Randy Books, by Amy Brooks, shows Randy's power for winning and holding friends. The same author sends out her fourth volume in the Dorothy Dainty Series, entitled "Dorothy Dainty at the Shore," depicting happy days at the beach with jolly companions. "My Little Lady in Waiting" is the story of a little girl left quite alone in the world in the tenement house district of New York—she goes through many trials, finally springing from a patient drudge to high honors. At fourteen the author, Louise E. Catlin, leaves her a happy "little lady in waiting" with prospects of a brilliant future.

A. C. McClurg & Company have ready an exquisite fairy story, compounded of the stuff that dreams are made of, by Mrs. Edith Ogden Harrison. "The Moon Princess" is a happy successor to "The Star Fairies" and "Prince Silverwings," books that made children happy some years ago. Again Mrs. Lucy F. Perkins depicts in many softest-toned illustrations the fairy history of this Moon Princess, who, on her marriage to Prince Dorion, begs one boon of her mother, that she may be allowed to spend her honeymoon (though one is sure Mrs. Harrison does not intend to pun) on the earth. The wish being granted, the bride and her prince descend to the earth, where they have all sorts of surprising adventures, meeting the Rainbow Sisters, Princess Sunset, the fairies who are now mocking birds, and the black dwarf, by whom the Moon Princess is taken prisoner. All this Mrs. Harrison describes in simple, unaffected style, weaving in many dainty conceits. More fairy lore may be found in J. Allen St. John's "The Face in the Pool," revolving around the person of a beautiful beleaguered princess who can only be rescued by some prince courageous enough to overcome the most appalling obstacles interposed by a wicked fairy. Eventually the man appears, he who sees "the face in the pool," and they marry and live happy ever after, in correct fairy story style. Mr. St. John is happy in being able to furnish capital illustrations for his book. Events quite as extraordinary as any that occur in fairyland are recounted by Millicent E. Mann in "Lady Dear." Juanita is "Lady Dear's" real name, and her father is a brave soldier who has followed Columbus in his search for the dreamed-of New World beyond the seas. The little maid, left behind in the care of servants in the half-ruined castle, is visited by a baron, a bold, bad man, who has designs on the property. "Lady Dear" only stands in his way, so that it is fortunate indeed for her that the baron's jester takes pity on her and with great cleverness rescues her and secretly conducts her to Queen Isabella's court many miles away. Mrs. Mann holds one's interest from first to last in this winning Spanish girl, a worthy daughter of her father. Cat tales are always welcome, the more so when they introduce us to such a wise kitten as "Tommy Postoffice," so named because of his adventures in the Hartford postoffice. Gabrielle E. Jackson is responsible for this true story; while another animal book, "Adventures in Pondland," is by that well-known English writer, Frank L. Stevens. Here may be had accurate descriptions worked into story form of the denizens of the pond—the water-spider, newts, dragon-flies, beetles, etc., pictured in many illustrations and familiar to us all since paddling days. Also for the serious-minded child is M. Louise Putnam's "Children's Life of Lincoln," in its New Revised Edition, containing some new matter not found in the 15,000 odd copies that have been sold all over the country. That attractive series, Life Stories for Young People, made up of short, simple biographies by standard foreign writers, translated by George P. Upton, this year is increased by volumes on Maria Theresa, Bach, the Little Dauphin and Frederick the Great. The McClurgs have also decided to issue that popular and most amusing book by G. Zollinger, "The Widow O'Callaghan's Boys," in a New Holiday Edition. Florence Scovel Shinn's excellent illustrations in color furnish characteristic glimpses of those incorrigible young people. To older boys and girls Calvin D. Wilson's "Making the Most of Ourselves" will give a deal of help. Hints are given for reading and listening, for manners and conduct—helpful practical thoughts that will be of inestimable value to young people.

THE "SHOW" WAS A TREMENDOUS SUCCESS.

McLOUGHLIN BROTHERS have about as varied a selection of attractive books for children as can be imagined. They have this year a veritable treasure in "McLoughlin's Christmas Annual," edited by Matilda Blair. The book is bright and cheerful in get-up, and generous in contents—in fact it is made up of three or four books, the matter being classified under the headings of "Christmas in Story," "Christmas in Song," "Christmas Games" and "Historical Tales." They have also recently brought out three useful collections by the same compiler, entitled "Wee Pieces for Wee Speakers and Some Older Children," "The Ideal Speaker for Young People" and "The Nonpareil Reader and Speaker." These books will be welcomed by teachers and parents for their fresh material graded for all ages. Each volume is illustrated and attractively printed and bound. The Young Folks Standard Library, containing so many of the old standbys this year adds twelve volumes from new plates to its list, including such favorites as "Treasure Island," "Grandfather's Chair," "Black Beauty," "Christmas Carols," and others. Then there are "Recitation Books"; new "Colored Toy Books"; "Picture Blocks"; "Games," "Scroll Puzzles" and every kind of invention to delight the hearts of the youngest children.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY have in Ernest Ingersoll's "The Island in the Air" something quite out of the line of hackneyed adventure. Travelling over the plains to the gold fields of California, fifty years or more ago, with all the delightful paraphernalia of the emigrant wagons, tents and so on, a band of young people, through a terrible water-spout, are separated from their elders, and the narrative is left in their hands to the end of the book. Brave and resourceful these youngsters prove themselves in the face of Indians, bears, wolves and cougars and other fearful objects, animate and inanimate, and remain jolly and hopeful until their soldier father is again met. Also on their list of books for the young is "Tales of the Fish Patrol," by Jack London. When a boy of sixteen Jack London was a member of the Fish Patrol in San Francisco Bay and its environs. He was even then a splendid fighter and a first-rate small-boat sailor. He has made a book of his encounters and those of his chum, Charley Le Grant, with the law-breaking Greeks and Italians and Chinese of that great region. These narratives are as spirited and as full af entertainment as anything we have had from the author of "The Call of the Wild." An admirable translation has been made of Max Nordau's charming stories for children, by Mary J. Safford, under the title "The Dwarf's Spectacles, and Other Fairy Tales." With its author's fame and its rich gallery of illustrations it should be one of the most attractive juveniles of the season. New cheaper editions of Laura Winnington's "The Outlook Fairy Book" and "The Outlook Story Book" appeal to all who appreciate the best in this line of literature. They are admirably suited to the wants of the very youngest.

MOFFAT, YARD & COMPANY present the most remarkable menagerie of new species ever brought together in John P. Benson's "Woozlebeasts." What is a "woozlebeast" is the most natural question that springs to the inquiring mind, seeking knowledge. We are sorry to say we cannot describe a "woozlebeast," as it is like nothing ever seen on sea or land, being entirely the creature of Mr. Benson's fertile imagination. If you are seeking a hearty laugh, buy "The Woozlebeasts," it will fill in the whole winter with ample merriment, as the family gathers around the open fire. The drawings are in black and white and often in black or tint; the verses descriptive of the beasts are as original as the designs. For the boys especially is "Our Army for Our Boys," by H. A. Ogden and Tudor Jenks. Mr. Ogden who has executed for the War Department an extensive series of large pictures illustrating, in exact color and detail, the uniforms of the army from its beginning to the present time, offers to American boys in this book the pictorial history of the growth and development of the American army. The numerous carefully studied plates are in full color, covering in popular composition essentially similar ground to that of his costly official series. The text, by Tudor Jenks, for years an editor on the staff of St. Nicholas, is an admirable combination of accurate information and interesting narrative, based on extensive study of the subject from original sources. "The Story Bible" belongs to a class that never outlives its charm or usefulness. Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster here retells with deep reverence the old Bible tales consecutively from Genesis to Revelation, covering the entire Scripture within the compass of a child's interest and patience. The publishers believe that this will be, for years to come, a standard book in the homes of many thousands. It is beautifully illustrated with twelve full-page drawings in colors. The Centenary Edition of "The Ugly Duckling," by Hans Christian Andersen, is an exquisite edition of this celebrated tale, illustrated by color and in black and white by M. H. Squire.

MUNN & COMPANY make a notable addition to the already long list of books teaching a boy "how to make something." It is a work by A. Russell Bond, under the title "The Scientific American Boy." It contains matter which is distinctly different from the ordinary, such as bridge building, surveying, heliographing, and the like, subjects which have heretofore been deemed too difficult for a boy to understand. In the present work, however, these subjects have been very simply dealt with. The bridges include half a dozen types described in such manner that any American boy of average intelligence can build them. Directions are given for making a surveying instrument and a heliograph instrument, and the instructions for using them are very simple. Other subjects covered by this book are how to build a windmill, a water wheel, a gravity railroad. The boy camper is given directions for making such shelters as tents, sleeping bags, tree houses, log cabins, straw huts and caves. Among the winter diversions six kinds of skate sails and eight kinds of snow shoes and skis are fully described, besides sledges, toboggans, scooters, and ice boats. The book also contains a large number of miscellaneous devices, such as scows, canoes, land yachts, and the like. For the purpose of making the subject-matter more interesting to boys, a narrative is used for connecting together the various incidents.

THOMAS NELSON & SONS are the publishers of one of the most popular of children's annuals—"Sunday." The volume for 1906 is made up entirely of new reading matter and new illustrations, and makes a fine display in delightful stories and poetry for old and young. "One Hundred Bible Stories," by Robert Bird, is a collection of stories written for children too small to understand the Bible when they hear it, but are quite ready to listen to the same thing told at greater length in simple words, with such touches as every parent makes use of to hold his children's attention. The Nelsons are rich in toy books in stiff paper bindings and quartos in gay board bindings, ranging in prices from five cents to thirty cents. Plenty of pictures with subjects of which children never tire, that is pet animals, little ones at play, alphabets, etc., with simple, merry text, and all the colors of the rainbow inside and outside, are the leading characteristics of all this stock. The buyers of Christmas presents need just such pretty books for the denizens of the nursery and for church celebrations where a Christmas tree is the central interest.

L. C. PAGE & COMPANY as usual have ready an attractive variety of stories to tempt the modern critical child. During the past few years we have been learning to like better and better a young girl from Kentucky, called from her resemblance to her soldierly grandfather, the "Little Colonel." This year Annie Fellows Johnston in "The Little Colonel's Christmas Vacation" presents us to this winsome girl when she is studying at a most inviting boarding-school on the banks of the Potomac, known as Warwick Hall. The forty girls have no end of natural good times together in this stately old place; so when it is decided after the Christmas vacation at home that the "Little Colonel" is not strong enough to return to school, she feels at first that life is without any motive. At length, however, she throws herself into the hopes, trials, and interests of her neighbors and proves she can live up to the ideals she has formed. Some old friends, more than welcome, reappear in these pages. Another excellent story for girls, with a helpful moral lesson skilfully concealed, is Jane S. Woodruff's "The Roses of Saint Elizabeth." It is laid in Martin Luther's town of Eisenach and pictures the simple life of a German boy and girl, one of whom goes out into the big world to seek knowledge. Very different obstacles, undreamed of by this sixteenth century boy, were met by the manly young hero of Burton E. Stevenson's "The Young Section Hand." He also has his way to make, and he begins it by taking a position as section hand in a western railroad. He is annoyed and persecuted by the discharged employee whose place he has taken, and has perilous adventures, narrow escapes and much hard work before promotion rewards him. There is mostly play and precious little work in "The Rival Campers," wherein Ruel P. Smith tells the adventures, surprising and exciting, of two parties of boys on an island off the Maine coast. A burglar chase and capture give the finishing touch to a perfect vacation, so the boy campers think, and boy readers will agree with them. Aside from the "Little Colonel" book Mrs. Johnston has two other pretty stories, half fairy tale, half legend, entitled "In the Desert of Waiting" and "The Three Weavers." Each is daintily bound and decorated, and each has a lesson to teach those who are clever enough to find it out. And, by the way, there is a Special Holiday Edition of Mrs. Johnston's charming "Two Little Knights of Kentucky," to stand side by side with last season's Holiday Edition of "The Little Colonel." The fine colored illustrations by Harold M. Brett will make very vivid the exploits of these young Knights of the Round Table. Encouraged by the welcome given last year to four separate stories culled from Charles G. D. Roberts's store of animal lore, this house has decided to issue two more tales, accompanied by Charles Livingston Bull's delightful drawings and bound in similar style. These are "The Little People of the Sycamore," telling of the raccoons, and "The Return to the Trails," a bear story. It remains to make mention of the additions to two deservedly popular series. The Little Cousin Series this year opens its covers to "Our Little Armenian Cousin," by Mary H. Wade, "Our Little English Cousin" and "Our Little French Cousin," by Blanche McManus, "Our Little Korean Cousin," by H. Lee M. Pike, and "Our Little Mexican Cousin," by Edward C. Butler. There are seven new volumes in the Cosy Corner Series, viz., "Flip's Islands of Providence," by Mrs. Johnston; "The Great Scoop," by Molly Elliott Seawell; "Down in Dixie," by Will A. Dromgoole; "A Little Puritan Cavalier," by Edith Robinson; "Theodore and Theodora," by Marian W. Wildman; "John Whopper," by Bishop Clark; and "How Christmas Came to the Mulvaneys," by Frances M. Fox.

THE PENN PUBLISHING COMPANY divide their good things about equally between girls and boys—four stories for the one, four for the others. All these publications are instructive, having an element of travel or history outside of their little romance that gives them an abiding place on the library shelf. The strange "hermit nation," with its odd people and odd costumes, is the scene of "An American Girl in Korea," by Annie M. Barnes. A party of young people under the care of their elders go to Korea to study the country. One of the young girls is the heroine of an unusual episode, getting herself imprisoned in the underground of a monastery by Buddhist priests, whose mysterious rites she witnesses. California forms a picturesque background to "Polly, the Gringo," by Evelyn Raymond. The story follows the fortunes of a small girl from Maine, who travels to San Francisco alone in pursuit of her father and mother. The time is before California became a State, when the Spanish applied the term "gringo" to all Americans. "Betty Wales, Sophomore," by Margaret Warde, continues the young life of a heroine dear to youthful readers' hearts, she seems so real and inspires an interest so warm and a sympathy so tender. Those who knew Betty Wales as a freshman will be eager to learn of her doings during her second year at college. She and her friends are the same jolly, high-spirited group as formerly, and most creditable representatives of the American college girl. "Marjorie's Way," by Alice Turner Curtis, is for younger girls than the former story. The narrative has for its central figure a girl of twelve who has several laudable ambitions that she succeeds in accomplishing. Stories of adventure and daring deeds have been prepared for the boys. How two brothers carried themselves bravely through unexpected difficulties is the theme of "The Boynton Pluck," by Helen Ward. "The Lost Expedition," by W. Bert Foster, relates the miraculous escape from death of a professor and his two young companions, who happened to be lost on a glacier in Alaska." "Fighting King George" is a tale of the American Revolution and '76. John T. McIntyre, who writes it, gives a chapter of history boys are apt to know little about. The hero, Tom Deering, was one of "Marion's Men," and saw service also under Greene and Gates. Captain Paul B. Malone, of the U. S. Army, has sent out another book relative to his hero, Douglas Atwell, who won his cadetship by his bravery in a Philippine campaign. He calls it "A Plebe at West Point," and throws some light on the hazing incidents there, so much discussed a few years ago. Captain Malone has taught at West Point, and knows thoroughly of what he writes.

PILGRIM PRESS have two excellent new juveniles among their Christmas publications. "Hobby Camp," by Frank H. Sweet, is a story of life in a woodland camp, where all rode their interesting hobbies and managed to learn much natural history through many interesting incidents; and "A Misunderstood Hero," by Mary Barnes Beale, is a story of the Southern mountains, the misunderstood hero being a bashful and somewhat morbid youth who proves his genuine heroism in many quiet ways, which finally compel recognition from his surroundings. He is a manly little hero, and it will do every child good to read about him.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have only one book for young people, but they have chosen wisely in this one. It is a tale of rattling adventure, such as boys like, set against a historical background. "The Adventures of Harry Rochester," by Herbert Strang, recounts what befel a manly, courageous English boy under twenty, who in some mysterious way has incurred the enmity of a rich English squire. But Rochester, after being rescued from a slave ship, manages to get to Holland, where he is employed by a kind-hearted Dutch merchant. But his native daring involves him in various adventures, including the rescue of some unprotected women of quality; and he eventually is enrolled in the army of the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene, playing his part in the war of the Spanish Succession. A pretty love story adds romance to all the fighting and a happy ending clears away the mystery of Rochester's family connection and makes him a wealthy English landowner.

THE REILLY & BRITTON COMPANY may count on an enthusiastic welcome for their Christmas novelty for littliest folks. Imagine any youngster's delight when he finds, tucked in on top of his stocking, a "real for true" little bookcase with real doors that open and latch, through the glass of which he can see six real little books, side by side! And when he opens the doors and takes out these tiny books, he finds that each contains a fairy story and many bright colored pictures as well as others in black and white, and that each has an introduction by L. Frank Baum, telling the origin of this Christmas Stocking Series, and is bound in covers decorated with holly leaves and berries in true Christmas style. For Santa Claus's deputies we explain that the miniature bookcase is made of Japanese wood veneer, the doors are glazed with transparent celluloid and that the titles of these six stories are "Fairy Tales from Andersen," "Fairy Tales from Grimm," "A Child's Visit to the Zoo," "Cinderella and the Sleeping Beauty," "The Night Before Christmas," and "Little Black Sambo." They may be had either in the miniature bookcase or put up in fancy boxes, two volumes to a box. No daintier, more novel gift can be found than this series. L. Frank Baum also has ready another of his inimitable juveniles, entitled "The Woggle-Bug Book," wherein are recounted in the author's most whimsical style the love affairs of the Woggle-Bug. The funniest of pictures by Ike Morgan and many colored decorations complete a mirth-provoking book. It is a tale oft told that another edition of "The Marvelous Land of Oz" is ready, and yet it is only by these frequent new printings that the demand can be met.

FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY have two books which in view of recent events in the Far East are most timely. They should be embraced in all young people's libraries, desiring to keep up to date. Belle M. Brain has written "All About Japan," a young people's history of Japan from the earliest days down to the present. The picturesque story of the little "Flowery Kingdom," with its wonderful development into a first-class power among nations, is depicted with rare skill and attractiveness, a great amount of information, historical and otherwise, being cleverly condensed within the covers of a small volume. A sister nation is the motive of "With Tommy Tompkins in Korea"—one whose life as a nation was seriously imperilled by the recent war. Dr. L. H. Underwood, the author of the book, has successfully aimed to portray life in Korea, through a vivid story. Although the central figures are Tommy Tompkins and his father and mother, native life is most graphically and humorously presented in connection with the experiences of this American family, entertainment and accurate information about things Korean being admirably blended. A dear little red-haired girl who rises above her sordid environment of life in an alley is the heroine of "Saint Cecilia of the Court." It is a story of irresistible pathos and humor, reproducing pictures of many sides of life in the whirling metropolis. The author is Isabella R. Hess. Charming poems of childhood by a famous lover of children make up "The Rock-a-Bye Book." William Sinclair Lord in a handsomely decorated quarto has brought together pretty verses and lullabies mothers will delight to read or sing to their little ones.

THE SAALFIELD PUBLISHING COMPANY have a lovely quarto by Frances Trego Montgomery, the favorite writer of the boys and girls, and it represents a true story, that is, it is in scenes and characters a reproduction of a real place and real people. "Frances and the Irrepressibles at Buena Vista Farm" is its title and it is no doubt a chapter out of the author's life, she being the "Frances," the excited little girl, who heads a band of young people bound for a summer in the country. It is a real farm they go to, well stocked with horses and cows, pigs and guinea pigs, pigeons and fancy fowls of all kinds, and besides these there are dogs and cats wthout number, so that each child may have a pet The illustrations are taken from photographs of real boys and girls, and their various pets figure as large as life; the cuts are generously interwoven in the text, and there are many full pages. "Flower Babies," by Elizabeth May, the author of "Animal Life in Rhymes and Jingles," presents a handsome book for the little ones containing bright colored pictures on every page, showing over one hundred of the most common flowers of our land in their natural colors, while in the centre of the pages appear charming scenes of the children at play, each one in keeping with the flower verses, a most dainty little gift book, that should please any little man or woman fortunate enough to receive it. A few days spent at Christmas time in the home of Santa Claus is the central motive of Frances Trego Montgomery's "Christmas With Santa Claus." The little waifs that Santa Claus carries to the North Pole in his wonderful sleigh meet Mrs. Santa Claus, have a coast with a polar bear, and other exciting experiences. The three foregoing books are flat books, handsome quartos in boards, with attractively colored covers and plenty of pictures. The same description applies to Burton Stoner's "Jim Crow Tales," a collection of stories on the order of the Br'er Rabbit tales in which Jim Crow, a farmer's pet, tells about the doings of his friends, the fox, the beaver, the bear, the squirrel, the owl, and other denizens of the forest. Older people would find this delightful reading. The half-dozen twelvemos on the Saalfield list are especially for boys, having all the qualities that they find so fascinating. Adventure and travel characterize them all, and a popular author name is on every title page. "Captain Tip-Top" is by Fred E. Janette, being a story of Lake St. Clair and the Detroit River. It tells of smuggling and other unusual things, having a mystery well sustained to the end. It is presented as the diary of the captain of the sloop-yacht Tycoon. "Ramrod Jones," hunter and patriot, stands for a tale of the Texas revolution against Mexico, written by Robert Blalock and now set forth by Clinton Giddings Brown. Tales of Indians, robbers, mystery, patriotism and war all succeed each other in its exacting pages. St. George Rathborne, that special favorite of the boys, is down for four books, each one taking the reader to a different part of the world. The "Young Castaways" has two boy characters who find themselves marooned on a sand-key in the Caribbean. Two boys also take a trip through the Brazilian forest, and make a wonderful cruise "Down the Amazon" in a canvas canoe; "Adrift in a Junk" deals with boy sailors of the China Sea; and "Young Voyagers of the Nile" is a tale of a narrow escape from dervishes, Arabs, etc., while floating down the Nile. The boy that would not be satisfied with one of these prettily bound books would be hard to please.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS possess three books for younger readers of exceptional quality, representing three authors who have entwined themselves in the hearts of young and old. Two have been silent for a longer period than any of us care to recall, hence a double welcome is extended to their productions. When Mrs. Burnett dramatized the story of dear little Sara Crewe under the title of "A Little Princess," her much adored heroine, rose on a new wave of popularity. Mrs. Burnett says in making her play, she found there were so many scenes and so many characters in Sara Crewe's story she had omitted, that it was necessary in answer to the demands of her many admirers to write a new story which is now published under the title "A Little Princess, being the whole story of Sara Crewe now told for the first time." It is a beautiful holiday book, with a dozen full-page illustrations in colors, by Ethel Franklin Betts. Equally beautiful is Howard Pyle's "Story of the Champions of the Round Table," which the author himself has illustrated in his own inimitable style. The adventures of Launcelot, Tristram, Percival and other chiefs of the various groups in King Arthur's court are dealt with in a manner at once spirited and poetic. The author of the "Mooswa" tales, Mr. W. A. Fraser, again relates animal stories under the title of "Sa-Zada Tales," which Arthur Heming has illustrated. Tigers, elephants, panthers, and other equally ferocious creatures of the forests and jungles are carried through these pages in a series of most exciting adventures.

THE STITT PUBLISHING COMPANY have a large selection of books by popular authors. There is a new volume of the Rover Boys Series, telling of "The Rover Boys on the River," and their exciting search for a missing houseboat. It is by Arthur M. Winfield, who is also the author of "The Putnam Hall Cadets," a story of sport and hard work at a military school. "Bob the Photographer," again by Winfield, shows how even photography may demand courage and resource. It is good news to thousands of future voters that there is still another Henty book ready for Christmas holiday consumption. Its title is "Redskins and Colonists," being laid in Colonial Virginia when even the youngsters had to know how to defend themselves against treacherous foes. In "The Rival Divers," Ray Rockwood spins a thrilling sea yarn about sunken treasure and deep diving, while Captain Ralph Bonehill's "Lost in the Land of Ice" carries us to the South Pole where there are hair-raising experiences. A reprint edition of Charles G. D. Roberts's inimitable animal stories, "The Kindred of the Wild," will be suitable for either boy or girl, but L. T. Meade's "A Bevy of Girls" will only satisfy one of the author's many girl admirers. An ideal gift book is found in "Tales from Longfellow," wherein Doris Hayman and Frances Brundage retell in prose some of the poet's loveliest verse. The volume is prettily bound and is illustrated by half-tone and colored pictures.

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY never forget the children, and have remembered them with even more than their usual lavish generosity this year, if such a thing were possible. Every child has heard papa and mamma and all who came to them talk of the dreadful war in Japan, and they have often wondered what kind of little girls and boys must be in that country on the other side of this round earth. This is all explained to them in "Japanese Child Life," for which verses and stories full of interest and information have been written by Alice Calhoun Haines, who did such charming work last year in "The Book of the Dog" and "Pets," and for which Alice Mar has made eight full-page illustrations in color, showing the little Japs at work selling flowers, painting lanterns, gathering fruit blossoms and learning their lessons. Every child who has read S. R. Crockett's "Sir Toady Lion" will be overjoyed to get his "Sir Toady Crusoe," for it is the first time this rare author has talked to the children for several years, and Gordon Browne has illustrated his new story; a fascinating collection of stories a hundred years old is gathered by E. V. Lucas in "Old Fashioned Tales," and illustrated by F. D. Bedford; N. Hudson Moore in "Children of Other Days" has made attractive reproductions of famous pictures of children with stories to make them even more interesting to children; Edith Dunham has written the text for a remarkable series of photographs, showing the methods of transportation of goods and passengers in all parts of the world, which is called "Jogging Round the World;" and Mrs. Knipe, who in "The Child" two years back gave us so beautiful and original a pleasure, has now made pictures for "Girls and Boys," four of each, and they are all pictured in colors with all her old art. Alice Calhoun Haines has furnished verses and stories to inspire Mrs. Knipe. Lewis Carroll's "Alice's Adventures" and "Through the Looking Glass" are brought out with all the old illustrations and twelve new ones in colors by Maria L. Kirke, and these two volumes in a pretty box will make as satisfactory a gift as they did when Lewis Carroll's stroke of genius set the whole world afire more than a generation ago. For children quite a little younger are fitted "Stokes's Children's Annual," always full of stories, verses and about 200 illustrations, many of them in colors; and The Christmas Stocking Series, really made to slip into the stocking, in which the new volumes are "Con, the Wizard," by John H. Jewett; and "The Denim Elephant," profusely illustrated in color. Who has not laughed over Buster Brown, Foxy Grandpa and Sammy Sneeze, and what child will not be glad to have those heroes for himself to keep instead of in his father's newspaper? Choose for him R. F. Outcault's "Tige, His Story," or "Buster Brown's Pranks," or Winsor McKay's "Little Sammy Sneeze," or "Foxy Grandpa's Surprises," by "Bunny," (Carl F. Schultze.) All are full of illustrations in bright colors. Another treat from the newspaper is "The House That Glue Built," made up of Clara Andrews Williams's series of "cut outs" of the rooms of a house, the furniture and the family, which are here reprinted from new plates on heavy paper and will furnish lots of amusement for rainy days before the little builders by the aid of papa's glue get their fine establishment ready for the family. George A. Williams has furnished fifteen pages in colors for this box of loose leaves for building purposes. But when we come to the provision for very little children choice is more and more difficult. These books are all manufactured with every attraction that good ideas, skilful artists, fine color printing, gay, original covers and fabulously low price can give to them. Phyllis M. Gotch in "A Romance of a Boo-Bird Chick" and "Tuffy and the Merry-Boo" lets some new animals into the nursery; Helen Bannerman asks admission for "Pat and the Spider;" "Jolly Jumbo" is a heavy-weight, and it takes Harry B. Neilson, Clifton Bingham and W. Boyle to bring him to the children's room; N. and B. Parker don't want their "Baby Birds" frightened in the strange company already gathered, but Charles Robinson and Walter Copeland plead for their "Black Cat;" and Carlton Moore Park thinks even "The King of Beasts" might find a place in some daring baby's heart. And when all once more is quiet Kathleen Ainslee will tell of "Catherine Susan's Little Holiday;" and "Lady Tabitha and Us," or Mabel Mace will sing "Our Ups and Downs;" or the children will be told a little Japanese story in verse, and then will be taught that its name is "O Haru Ka." Perhaps not in the first Christmas day's excitement, but certainly very soon, the children will be content to turn with E. J. Thorley to other beautiful pages of color and learn "An Alphabet."

THOMPSON & THOMAS's "Painting Pastimes," is a combination painting and drawing book, in which entertainment and instruction are cleverly invited. The book is so arranged that the figures to be drawn are on one side while the opposite page is blank for the young artist to copy the design. There is also a series of colored plates representing happy little children at play, animals, butterflies, fruits, flowers, etc, with the same picture given in outline on an opposite page to be painted. An excellent medium for teaching children the first steps in drawing and painting, the studies are graded, each one being a little more difficult than the other. Edith O'Donnell furnishes the drawings, and Gerard Chapman and others intersperse the designs with "taking" verses. Two works by Mrs. Phebe Westcott Humphreys, "Our Feathered Friends" and "Our Animal Friends in Their Native Homes," describe accurately the birds, animals and fishes for young people. "Toyland," printed in many colors, describes the wonderful toys that please the little ones so very much. Also on this list is "A B C Fun," a dainty juvenile illustrating in colors the story of a children's party, written in merry jingles.

THE UGLY DUCKLING.

FREDERICK WARNE & COMPANY as usual have an array of picture books, stories for wee tots and painting books, executed in charming designs, showing real artistic skill and much ingenuity. Harry B. Neilson's book of drawings, "Amazing Adventures," is an oblong volume, containing a series of full-page pictures reproduced in colors, illustrating the comical adventures of a sailor, a donkey and a Chinaman in Borneo. The text in prose and verse, by S. Baring Gould, amusingly describes the mishaps and escapes of this luckless trio, who encounter wild beasts and make more blunders than are really safe in Borneo. "Giddy-Go-Round" is another pretty picture book, the work of Madeline Hall, whose funny text and dainty illustrations make it quite unlike the usual children's book. Miss Hall has a special faculty for drawing ducks, and ducks we find here on every page, illustrating Timothy's adventures at a duck fair. Beatrix Potter's clever little books in the Peter Rabbit Series have given genuine pleasure during several recent years. This season she has ready "The Tale of Mrs. Tiggy-Winkle," Mrs. Tiggy-Winkle being a motherly old hedgehog who does the washing for the Peter Rabbit family and proves a most delightful hostess to a little girl who calls on her. Again there are the pretty pictures done in soft tints which have made Miss Potter's other books so attractive. "The Pie and the Patty-Pan" is also by Beatrix Potter, being the story of a little cat and a little dog, and containing ten full-page pictures in color as well as outline drawings. The initial volume of Leslie Brooke's "Children's Books" is made up of "The Story of the Three Little Pigs," and "The History of Tom Thumb," retold in the good old style and pictured in many colored and black and white drawings. Either of these stories may also be had in separate form in "art" cartridge paper wrappers. A pleasant feature of the year is the reissue of some of Walter Crane's inimitable nursery books, like "The Baby's Opera," "The Baby's Bouquet" and "The Baby's Own Æsop." These exquisite books are among the happy memories of the early days of many old-young people, so it is delightful to know they may now be procured for the new babies. It is also welcome news to hear that Kate Greenaway's seven picture books are again obtainable. Her bewitching little men and women in quaint costumes were a revelation to the children and parents of some twenty-five years ago. We must also note that Randolph Caldecott's artistic picture books, bound in four volumes, each containing four stories, or bound in two-volume form, are ready for weary Christmas shoppers. And we can always expect from this house a full line of new toy books, printed in fast colors on linen or stout paper, gaily illustrated and brightly written. Painting books of many varieties may also be had. For older children beyond the picture book age there is "Aunt Louisa's Book of Easy Poetry," containing many old favorites and a selection of new poems, classified under subjects, well illustrated and suitably bound, altogether a most useful and desirable volume.

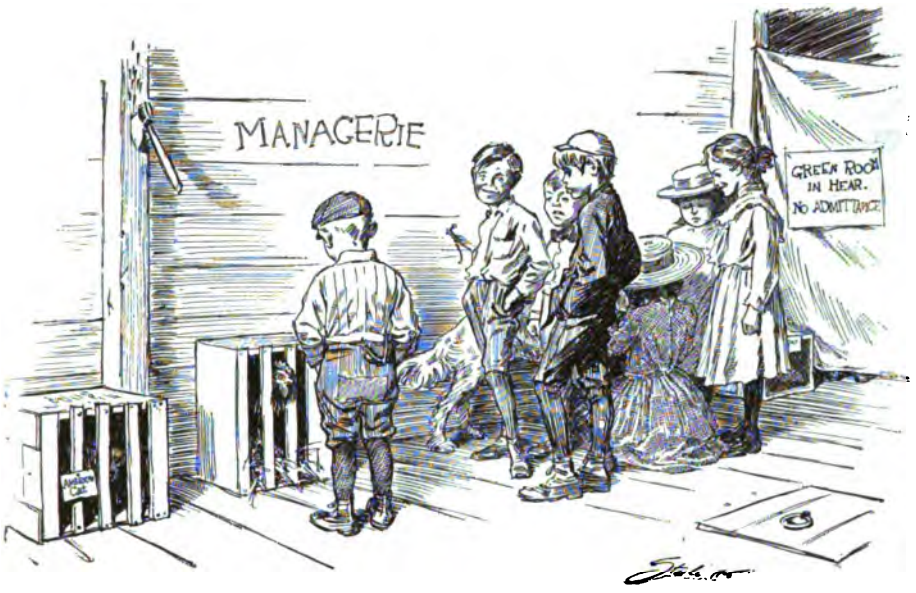
HE SUDDENLY SPRANG AT HIM.

A. WESSELS COMPANY'S new edition in colors of Robert Browning's "Pied Piper of Hamelin," illustrated with full-page pictures and text designs by Van Dyck, is from a literary and artistic standpoint a work of exceptional merit. Although avowedly gotten up for the little ones, it is one of the gift books of the season, every member of the family will delight to pore over. French, German, English and Dutch editions have been already arranged for, and others will probably be added to these. Rats and mice tumble over each other in this big quarto, from its opening pages: the pied piper in his parti-colored garments is weird enough, and the people of Hamelin, perfect studies of the Dutch of five hundred years ago, while the dear little chubby-faced children make one's heart ache as they go merrily and innocently skipping and jumping to their dreadful fate. Browning in this ballad has immortalized an old legend of Brunswick, which will forever remain a part of English literature. Charles Welsh adds the fourth volume this season to his "Famous Battles of the Nineteenth Century." The period covered by it begins with 1875 and ends with 1900, comprising with the other volumes the famous encounters of a century. "The Dollar Juvenile Quartos" is a new series for popular favor, its initial number being "The Wonderful Wishes of Jacky and Jean," by Mary A. Dickerson. The story is really a modern version of Aladdin and his lamp, the magician being in this case a mysterious sparrow, who tells Jacky and Jean to rub his cage and wish for anything they desire and it will be promptly granted. C. B. Falls contributes six illustrations which are in colors, and a striking cover design. Under this series are also gathered new editions of Kingsley's "Water Babies," Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland," and "Through the Looking Glass," in one volume, "The True Mother Goose," illustrated and edited by Bianche McManus, and "Monkey Shines," little tales for little children, by Bolton Hall.



W. A. WILDE COMPANY include a number of favorite authors among the makers of their seasonable books. Delightful home stories may be read within the covers of Mrs. C. V. Jamison's "Penhallow Family," Carolyn Wells' "Dorrance Domain" and Nina Rhoades' "That Preston Girl." The many previous tales of undoubted merit, to these ladies' credit, vouch for the attractive qualities of their newest books. "The Rainbow Bridge," a story by Frances Margaret Fox, follows the fortunes of little Marian Lee—from her entrance as a babe into the orphanage called the Home for Little Pilgrims, until good fortune restores to her her own father supposed to have died. "Hector, My Dog," by Egerton R. Young, is among the most desirable. It not only gives a glimpse of a dog's character and thoughts, being told by Hector himself, but carries the reader into the far Northland offering many pen pictures of life amidst its ice and snows and its busy, hardy inhabitants. Quite a number of volumes having for their motive our own early history are upon this firm's list. Everett T. Tomlinson's name on a title-page is an endorsement not only of its merit as a story, but of its general refinement of tone and reliability historically, making it safe for parents and librarians to recommend. "A Soldier of the Wilderness," his latest work, relates the fall of Fort Frontenac and the disaster under Abercrombie at Ticonderoga. There is a young hero, Peter Van de Bogert, wildly patriotic and seeking excitement in adventure. How the great Northwest territory was won and the Indians driven out by the hardy, courageous pioneers is portrayed in "Camp Fires on the Scioto," by Charles S. Wood, the author of numerous other books of frontier life. This has a manly little hero who, orphaned by the cruelty of the Indians, takes his father's place in the settlement on the Ohio River, and by his own efforts supports his little sister. Texas in the time of the Mexican War is the scene of "A Frontier Knight," by Amy E. Blanchard, a new volume in the Pioneer Series. The story begins with the emigration of a young man and his two sisters to Texas, just after its annexation to the United States. The war with Mexico breaking out soon after their arrival gives splendid opportunity to the author to picture the conditions which went to make up the life in the border country at that time. "The Coming of the White Man" and "Ten Big Indians," two volumes of stories by Mary Hazelton Wade, have their suggestion in the beginnings of American history. "Ten Big Indians" is a companion volume to the "Ten Little Indians" which was issued last year, and proved exceedingly popular.

THE JOHN C. WINSTON COMPANY have a New Deerfoot Series for the boys, a fact that will rejoice them immensely. Yielding to ever-increasing demands and entreaties for a continuance of the adventures of his famous character Deerfoot, the Shawanoe, Edward S. Ellis, the author, has written three more stories called the New Deerfoot Series in which Deerfoot is brought to life again. It may be recalled that he died at the conclusion of the old Deerfoot Series, but this is a succession of adventures that happened between the first and second volumes of the previous series, and omitted there where they chronologically belong. The volumes are called "Deerfoot in the Forest," "Deerfoot in the Prairies" and "Deerfoot in the Mountains," and even surpass in thrilling incident and exciting situation Mr. Ellis's former works on the same line. Deerfoot is a Christianized Indian, who goes to the rescue of two boys, George and Victor Sheldon, who have gone on a hunting expedition, not knowing of an Indian uprising. The fortunes of these three characters are followed through the three volumes. The books are illustrated in colors and half-tones by J. Steeple Davis.

STOKES' NEW HOLIDAY BOOKS

THE BASSES: Fresh-Water and Marine.

By WILLIAM C. HARRIS, DR. TARLETON H. BEAN and Others.

Edited by LOUIS RHEAD, with numerous illustrations in colors and black and white, and a specially decorated cover by the editor.

A new book by the editor of "The Speckled Brook Trout," which was pronounced by the press and such well-known anglers and writers as Mr. Cleveland, Dr. van Dyke, and Dr. Weir Mitchell, the most beautiful angling book heretofore issued, and which received for its drawings and manufacture a gold medal at St. Louis.

With the experience gained, Mr. Rhead now follows this success with a still more admirable volume. From an artistic standpoint, from cover to back the book is notable, containing as it does about fifty original pictures,—several being in colors,—and having a remarkable cover representing the skin of a Striped Bass, painted from a living specimen and reproduced in the natural irridescent hues. There are also several photo-engravings of the fish in repose, as well as reproductions of drawings showing the modes of capture and the fish in action.

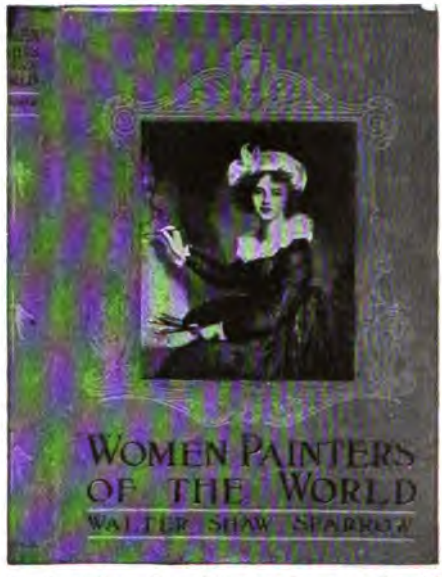
The contribution on Salt-water Basses is written by Tarleton H. Bean, a world-famous scientific writer, the founder of the New York Aquarium, for many years a fish-culturist, United States Commissioner at many World's Fairs, and author of many books. Dr. Bean, in this volume, gives really the first adequate treatise ever written on the Striped Bass, its habits, habitat, and modes of capture. Little has previously been written on this coming, rightly named, game fish, and Dr. Bean writes fully and with authority on this and the other marine basses.

The late William C. Harris was without a peer as a practical angler, and, after fifty years of continuous writing, he took up for this volume, the Freshwater Basses.

Mr. Rhead contributes three short articles; one on The Choice of Flies, one on Basses in the Beaverkill, and another on Cooking Bass, with a few simple recipes.

Mr. James A. Cruikshank, the well-known writer on angling, contributes a practical article on Artificial Lures, based on his expert knowledge of the subject and illustrated by reproductions of many of the most taking lures.

Boards, 8vo, $3.50, net; postpaid, $3.68.



WOMEN PAINTERS OF THE WORLD.

from the time of Caterina Vigri (1413-1463) to Rosa Bonheur and the present day. Edited by WALTER SHAW SPARROW, with 6 photogravures, seven color plates, and more than 200 half-tone illustrations.

Any woman may well be proud of the record shown by this sumptuous book, extending as it does over a period of about 400 years and including hundreds of names that will go down to posterity with those of the most famous of their craft.

The pictures have been reproduced with the greatest care, and while they include many famous paintings that are familiar, the greater part has been chosen from inaccessible sources or rare private collections, and are unfamiliar or unknown even to collectors.

In preparing the text, which is sympathetic and exhaustive, the editor has been assisted by many well-known art critics, both in England and on the Continent. This aims to show the growth of woman's influence on art and the part that she has played in it.

Large 4to, cloth, gilt top, $3.50, net; postpaid, $4.00.

THE CHILDHOOD OF JESUS CHRIST.

By HENRY VAN DYKE.

In this dainty gift-book Dr. van Dyke tells in his inimitable way of the influence of the idea of the Christ-Child upon medieval and modern art. He calls attention to many great and familiar pictures and others as well, and dwells sympathetically on the poetry and beauty of the divine motherhood and the wonderful gifts of imagination that have been inspired by it.

The book contains many beautiful reproductions of the pictures told about in the text.

Cloth, 16mo, with numerous illustrations from famous paintings, $1.00. See the Masterpiece Series, in which also this volume is published.

STOKES' NEW BOOKS

OLD PEWTER, Brass, Copper and Sheffield Plate.

By N. HUDSON MOORE.

Author of "The Lace Book," "The Old China Book," etc.

Old pewter is becoming daily of greater interest to the householder. Old plates, platters and chargers, hollow ware—jugs, mugs, tankards and the like—are greatly in demand for the dining-room.

This book is a satisfactory guide to the purchase and identification of these treasures. All the known marks of the makers are given, the details of manufacture, the style of decoration, and the correct weight. More than one hundred pieces of old ware are illustrated, most of them from rare collections and here reproduced for the first time.

The household articles in copper and brass are treated and illustrated in the same manner, together with the fancy for the antique Russian articles in these metals.

Sheffield plate and other old plated ware are also considered, with a catalogue of the best known makers and many fine illustrations.

With 105 illustrations, cloth, 8vo, $2.00, net; postpaid, $2.18.

CHATS ON OLD FURNITURE. A Practical Guide for Collectors.

By ARTHUR HAYDEN.

Author of "Chats on English China," etc.

This volume enables collectors and those who are interested in old furniture to discriminate between the styles of furniture and to distinguish the features of different periods.

The Elizabethan period and the influence of the Renaissance on domestic furniture are first taken up, and Jacobean, late seventeenth-century, William and Mary, and Queen Anne Styles, are then fully dealt with. The furniture of Chippendale, of Hepplewhite and of Sheraton receives detailed treatment. In addition, separate chapters are given showing the contemporaneous influence of Italian, Dutch and French furniture upon English makers.

With 100 illustrations, large 12mo, cloth, $2.00,

HOME FURNISHING: Practical and Artistic.

By ALICE M. KELLOGG.

The success of this volume is its tried and thorough practicability. In it the author attempts to give from actual experience just that advice most needed to make the home in the first place comfortable, and secondly, artistic.

The first part of the book is devoted to suggestions and ideas for the halls, the various rooms of the house, and the veranda. A more minute, comprehensive consideration of the decorations and furnishings, essential and accessory, follows in Part II, in chapters on Furniture New and Old, Floor Coverings, Wall Hangings, Windows and Doorways, Book Shelves, Plate Rails, Mantels, Bric-a-brac, etc.

With 55 illustrations from photographs, cloth, 12mo, $1.50, net; postpaid, $1.65.

SERVING AND WAITING.

By ELEANOR MARCHANT.

This book, prepared by a well-known writer on domestic topics, is intended particularly to meet the needs of the modest home where only one servant is kept, or possibly none at all. The book covers a wide range of usefulness. Practically every form of table entertainment is considered in its pages, with much attention to the details of linen, china, silver, lighting, and floral decorations; and chapters are devoted to informal functions and unique festivities.

It is not a cook book, and yet it contains many invaluable suggestions in cookery. It is not a book of etiquette, and yet the correct forms of service are fully defined. It is not a book of entertainment solely, but it answers very satisfactorily the problem: How to be a successful hostess. And, most importantly, it is a sure guide to making home and the home table attractive to one's own family. Besides these specific points of value, in its dozen chapters, there is much housewifely information of a miscellaneous character.

With 32 full-page illustrations from photographs,

STOKES' NEW BOOKS

MY FRIENDS AND THEIR GIFTS.

A record for those who give and receive.

By MABEL L. BARBOUR.

For several years the need has been felt for a convenient book of record wherein could be found such information regarding one's friends as the dates of their birthdays and marriage anniversaries, their preferences as to colors, flowers, jewels, etc., the sizes of gloves and other apparel worn by them, and similar data of value when gifts are to be selected. This volume meets this need.

12mo, ornamental, boxed, $1.00; red morocco, full gilt, boxed, $2.50.

THUMB-O-GRAPHS.

The latest volume in the Record Series.

The autograph hunter and the little maid with her birthday book are no longer satisfied with the mere names of their friends and of the world's celebrities. They must now have a "thumb-print" as well, and this latest fad, of combined science and amusement, promises to rival stamp-collecting in its popularity. The hobby has its growth in the great discovery that the lines on no two thumbs are ever alike, and that nobody's thumb ever changes the design of its whorls and lines.

"Thumb-o-graphs" provides a neat little album, with pages for recording "thumb-prints" and autographs, to which is attached a specially inked pad that only needs moistening to be ready for use.

Art Cloth, 16mo, with ink-pad 50 cents, net; leather, $1.00; leather, gilt stamp, $1.50, postpaid, each 8 cents additional.

KRAUSZ'S PRACTICAL AUTOMOBILE DICTIONARY.

(English—French—German; French—English—German; German—French—English.)

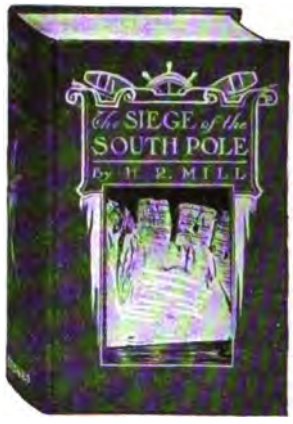
By SIGMUND KRAUSZ.

Containing more than 12,000 technical terms and other words employed in connection with motor cars and motoring.

The remarkable development of the motor car industry, especially in America, England, France and Germany, the prevailing export and import conditions of the market, with the consequent migration of foreign chauffeurs and mechanics, as well as to the ever increasing international sport events, the growing habits of motorists to make pleasure tours in foreign lands, and—last but not least—the impossibility of finding proper translations of technical motoring terms, in existing reference works, have caused an urgent demand for a special and practical automobile dictionary in the English, French and German languages.

The work is invaluable for the engineering, correspondence, sales and other departments of motor car factories, individual mechanics ambitious to increase their technical knowledge, sportsmen, motoring tourists and all owners in general who wish to keep abreast of the times.

16mo, cloth, $1.00, net; postpaid, $1.10. Leather with flap, $2.00, net; postpaid, $2.10.



THE PAINTERS' SERIES.

Each volume contains fifty or more reproductions of famous paintings by an old master, together with a complete catalogue of all his work in existence, with word where it may be found. The plates are beautifully engraved and printed—far superior to anything before offered at such a small price—and carry with them, so far as is possible in a single color, all the strength and spirit of the originals. This series is of inestimable value to all who wish to have at hand a convenient and complete collection of the works of the favorite masters.

Each 16mo, parchment, illustrated in duotone, 25 cents, net; postpaid, 30 cents.

THE SIEGE OF THE SOUTH POLE.

By H. R. MILL.

Dr. Mill has collected in this volume, in consecutive form, a vast amount of material—in fact everything from the speculations of the ancients in regard to the Great Southern Ocean to the twentieth-century explorations of Nordenskjold, Bruce, and Scott. It is a narrative of courage, sacrifice, and adventure that has not been matched.

The real story opens with the voyages of Capt. James Cook and the valuable data collected by the American whalers. Then follow chapters on the work of Bellingshausen, Weddell, the Enderbys, and others, leading up to Durville, for the French; Lieut. Charles Wilkes, of the United States Exploring Expedition, and James Clark Ross, of Erebus and Terror fame. The revival of interest through Sir John Murray's work in H. M. S. Challenger, the voyages of Gerlache, Borchgrevink and Drygalski, and as has been mentioned of Nordenskjold, Bruce and Scott, bring the narrative down to latest possible date.

With many engravings, maps and other illustrations, and an elaborate map in colors by Bartholomew, 8vo, cloth, $1.60, net; postpaid, $1.75.

THE SAINT LAWRENCE:

Its Basin and Border Lands.

The story of their discovery, exploration and occupation.

By SAMUEL EDWARD DAWSON,

Litt.D., F.R.S.C., Author of "The Voyages of the Cabots," "Canada and Newfoundland," etc.

A remarkably thorough, consecutive account of the geographical exploration and settlement of the St. Lawrence basin, including the Great Lakes and the upper Mississippi.

With illustrations from drawings, photographs and maps, and with map in colors by J. G. Bartholomew, cloth, small 8vo, $1.60, net; postpaid, $1.75.

STOKES' NEW BOOKS

THE MEMORIES OF ROSE EYTINGE.

Rose Eytinge was in the hey-dey of her popularity during the Civil War period and later—the Golden Age of the American drama. She was the associate and personal friend of Edwin Booth, J. W. and Lester Wallack, E. L. Davenport, and Augustin Daly, and knew and played with nearly all the greater—and lesser—lights of that interesting period.

Into this little book she has gathered a wealth of anecdote of people and things and throws many new lights upon relationships little understood before.

The book is of interest not only to the dramatic profession and to students of American drama, but as well to the general reader.

Cloth, 12mo, 80 cents, net; postpaid, 90 cents. Illustrated edition, $1.20, net; postpaid, $1.30.

THE JOY OF LIFE.

By LILLIE HAMILTON FRENCH.

As Pastor Wagner is the apostle of simplicity, so does Miss French plead for a little "joyfulness." In this book is a charming philosophy, illustrated with frequent pointed incidents, which will find many a responsive chord, and soothe many an hour at the close of a fretful day. Our worries, our misunderstandings, the annoyances that we cause others and that others cause us, our deep griefs, and our blessings—these are put before us in a way that cannot fail to clear away the dust of daily life from our minds and hearts and leave us more courageous.

Miss French is never didactic, never obtrusive, never choking us with a moral, but always gracious, enlivening, and natural. One can liken the reading of the book to a conversation with a delightful friend.

Cloth, 16mo, 80 cents, net; postpaid, 90 cents.

CHILDHOOD.

By MRS. THEODORE W. BIRNEY.

With an Introduction by G. STANLEY HALL.

The author of this book, the founder of the National Congress of Mothers, has an authority based on wide and thoughtful experience.

Her dominant impulse is to bring parents and children into closer and more sympathetic relations. She believes that discord in the home is in most cases due to a lack of comprehension of child nature and its needs on the part of those who have the care of the child. There is abundant parental, self-sacrificing love, but that it must be supplemented by real knowledge of the child's mental, moral and physical nature.

Through simple, practical illustrations of every-day occurrences the author makes clear to parents the importance of being able to grasp the boy's or the girl's point of view, for only by so doing can they hope to gain the confidence of children and to guide them wisely.

The illustrative cases are such as can be applied with great advantage to the trying conditions existing in many households.

Cloth, 12mo, $1.00, net; postpaid, $1.10.

IDEALS FOR GIRLS.

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED.

(PRISCILLA WAKEFIELD)

This work possesses the charm of an excellent literary style, combined in a high degree with the impress of a noble and gracious personality. The subjects are well chosen, and hold a wide range of interest, which with the qualities of helpfulness, high integrity and sweet womanliness that they inculcate must make the book of value in the development and strengthening of character.

The work has brought to Mrs. Learned hundreds of letters of warm appreciation from readers in all quarters of this continent.

Cloth, 12mo, $1.00, net; postpaid, $1.12.

THE FLOWER SERIES.

By N. HUDSON MOORE.

1 LILIES	4 VIOLETS
2 LILACS	5 ROSES
3 TULIPS	6 CHRYSANTHEMUMS

This series gathers together into attractive volumes all the thousand charming fancies and conceits that linger around the rose, the lily, the violet and other flowers. No more appropriate gift could be chosen for one who loves flowers.

Floral binding, 12mo, with duotints from photographs of natural flowers. Each 50 cents.

THE FERN ALLIES OF NORTH AMERICA: North of Mexico.

By WILLARD NELSON CLUTE.

Author of "Our Ferns in Their Haunts," etc.

Mr. Clute's "Our Ferns in Their Haunts," remains the standard work on the ferns of North America. In the preparation of this sequel, dealing with the allied forms of plant life not included in the fern families, the same careful attention to detail has been given that characterized the earlier book.

It is a complete guide to all the native species found east of the Rocky Mountains and north of the Gulf States, described from natural specimens, and covering a greater range and including more species than any other similar work. Every common, or English, and scientific name is given. Special attention is paid to haunts and habits, uses, folk-lore, structure, growth, abundance, distribution and varieties.

With 8 colored plates and nearly 200 line and half-tone illustrations and diagrams, by IDA MARTIN CLUTE. Large 12mo, cloth, $2.00, net; postpaid, $2.67.

STOKES' NEW BOOKS

New Fiction.

THE HEART OF LADY ANNE.

By AGNES and EGERTON CASTLE.

Authors of "Rose of the World," etc.

Here is what "might be called 'A Tale in Porcelain' of the taming of a shrew. Shrew, no doubt, is too harsh a name for so dainty a piece as my young lady Anne. Taming, again, is perhaps an over-weighty word to paint the conflict of hearts and wit—full of anxiety at times, but always of courtesy."

"In the eyes of some—of those, at least, who followed with any interest the career of 'Incomparable Bellairs' through the Bath Comedy—the lady Anne of the present tale may derive a special luster from her friendship with Kitty," who "still guides the plot and leads the cantrips." With four superb illustrations in colors, by Ethel Franklin Betts, and with decorative title page, head pieces, initials, etc., in two colors, by Frederick G. Hall. A splendid gift book for the holidays.

Cloth, 12mo, $1.50; white cloth, gilt, $2.50.

A SERVANT OF THE PUBLIC.

By ANTHONY HOPE.

Who Ora Pinsent was, what she was and why she was who and what she was; how she appeared to her friends and to the world outside her profession, and how that profession determined her life and actions. An intimate and unbiased story of the private life and personal feelings of a popular public character. While about an actress, this story is not about the stage, and holds nothing in common with the conventional novel of the theater.

"Imagine much that is best in Meredith or James, and all that is best in Anthony Hope, and you have a fair idea of 'A Servant of the Public.'"—New York Globe.

Illustrated, 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

THE BLACK SPANIEL.

By ROBERT HICHENS.

Author of "The Garden of Allah," "Felix," etc.

"The Black Spaniel," the long story that with several shorter ones make up this volume, is as unusual and original as the novels Mr. Hichens has given us previously. Aside from its compelling appeal against vivisection, the story has as its theme a most curious and realistic psychological motive, growing out of the cruel treatment of a little dog, that baffles the reader and, even against his will, holds his attention to the last page.

The remaining stories are chiefly of the Arabian desert—the fascinating background and absorbing presence of "The Garden of Allah."

Illustrated, cloth, $1.50.

THE SPECULATIONS OF JOHN STEELE.

By ROBERT BARR.

Author of "Tekla," "The Victors," etc.

A lively story of business adventure, of mystery and of exciting contest, with a love episode amazing in its originality and cleverness. The struggle of the hero with the greatest monetary power in the world is particularly vivid and interesting.

Illustrated by F. R. Gruger. Cloth, $1.50.

AMERICAN WIVES AND OTHERS.

By JEROME K. JEROME.

Author of "Idle Thoughts of an Idle Fellow," "Three Men in a Boat," etc.

This is Mr. Jerome's latest book, published last autumn, and it has an added interest at this time on account of the extended lyceum tour of the author through the United States during the autumn and winter of 1905-6.

This is Mr. Jerome's first platform appearance in America, and much interest is manifested in his visit. "American Wives and Others," which furnishes several of the readings, contains his best work in this vein since "Idle Thoughts of an Idle Fellow," and is full of the same genial humor and good-natured raillery.

With illustrations by George McManus, cloth, 12mo, $1.50.

New Books for Children.

SIR TOADY CRUSOE.

By S. R. CROCKETT.

Profusely illustrated by Gordon Browne.

This book is the first book for children that Mr. Crockett has published in several years, and all who are familiar with his delightful "Sweetheart Travelers" and "Sir Toady Lion" will heartily welcome the new work. With all the experience of an unusual childhood to draw upon, with a boundless sympathy for the ideals and interests of children, and with a charm of style not surpassed by any modern writer, this new book should be one of the most popular as well as one of the most worthy of the present season.

Large, 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

STOKES' NEW BOOKS

CHILDREN OF OTHER DAYS.

By N. HUDSON MOORE.

With 35 full-page engravings in black and white.

Attractive reproductions of famous pictures of children, arranged in a rough chronological order. The date of the birth and death of both subject and artist have been given when possible. The stories which go with the pictures are so simple that children of six can understand them, and at the same time they impart much information, and the book is a valuable aid to the teacher and parent.

All the engravings are full-page, and have been produced with great care. While chosen chiefly from the masters of different countries and different periods, and including some old favorites, the pictures are in no sense hackneyed and are for the most part new even to art lovers.

Cloth, 4to, $1.50.

JOGGING ROUND THE WORLD.

Riders and drivers with curious steeds or vehicles in strange lands and at home. With thirty-six full-page illustrations, and with appropriate text by Edith Dunham.

Remarkable photographs of actual scenes, designed to give even a young child an idea of interesting characteristics of many parts of the world.

Cloth, 4to, $1.50.

GIRLS AND BOYS.

8 full-page pictures in colors by E. Benson Knipe. With new stories and verses by Alice Calhoun Haines.

This series of pictures, all full-page and of large size, includes the following subjects:

GIRLS	BOYS
The Smallest Girl of All	The Smallest Boy
The Very Little Girl	The Very Little Boy
The Little Girl	The Little Boy
The Big Girl	The Big Boy

These pictures are all of typical American children of the present day, at home and at play. They are full of the scenes and incidents dear to childhood, and of a sentiment dear to every one.

The text is entertaining and shows its author's ability to delight the child as she has done in "Pets," "The Book of the Dog" and in her contributions to St. Nicholas and other periodicals.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

Alice's Adventures in Wonderland.

By LEWIS CARROLL.

2 vols. Each volume contains all the original illustrations and 12 new illustrations in COLORS by Maria Kirk.

Each, cloth, 8vo, $1.50, the two in a box, $3.00.

STOKES' CHILDREN'S ANNUAL.

With 36 full-page illustrations in colors, and many in black and white.

This is one of the most satisfactory books for children ever offered. It contains more than 200 illustrations in black and white in addition to the 36 pages in full color, and many poems and stories for children of all ages.

Large, 4to, boards, covers in colors, $1.50.

OLD FASHIONED TALES.

Selected by E. V. LUCAS.

Frontispiece in colors and many illustrations by F. D. Bedford.

A fascinating collection of the stories that were told to children a hundred years ago.

Cloth, 8vo, $1.50.

JAPANESE CHILD LIFE.

With full-page illustrations in colors by Alice Mar, accompanied by appropriate verses and stories by Alice Calhoun Haines.

In this beautiful series of large pictures, the artist shows tiny Japs at work and at play—the little flower sellers, the little lantern painters, fruit blossom gatherers, and children at their games and their studies. The rich and unusual coloring, the beauty of the accessories, and the Japanese atmosphere that the artist has so well caught, commend these pictures artistically to the most critical.

The verses and stories are well chosen and carry out the spirit of the illustrations, interesting the child in the pictures, and unconsciously imparting a great deal of information in regard to the land, the people, etc.

Large, 4to, boards, covers in colors, $1.50.

CHRISTMAS STOCKING SERIES.

Each illustrated in colors, tall 16mo, boards, with colored picture covers, each 50 cents.

This series is planned really to fit into the stocking; the books are bound in bright colors, are profusely illustrated with brightly colored pictures, and are otherwise designed particular-

STOKES' NEW BOOKS

THE DENIM ELEPHANT.

By EMILY CARTER WIGHT.

This true little picture of child-life, dealing intimately with the plays and objects dearest to the child's heart, has all the directness and sympathy that have given Helen Bannerman's "Little Black Sambo" such wonderful success. Although by a new artist the pictures are of special beauty and interest, portraying a distinct type of child-life with charm and delicacy of manner.

THE HOUSE THAT CLUE BUILT.

By CLARA ANDREWS WILLIAMS.

Illustrated in colors by George A. Williams.

The series provides the rooms of the house —parlor, dining-room, kitchen, etc., with all their furniture. The latter the child can cut out and paste upon the pictures of the rooms according to the suggestions given in the text, or may follow out his own ideas, thus making an attractive and permanent toy. There are fifteen plates: seven of rooms, seven of furniture, and one containing the family.

The descriptions are in the form of conversations of children while furnishing the rooms, discussing the best and most advantageous places for placing the furniture, which gives the "book house" an educational value beyond a mere plaything, while the objects are so simple in detail that a young child can cut them out.

Oblong 4to, boards, with covers in colors, $1.00, loose leaves, boxed, $1.00.

TIGE: HIS STORY.

By R. F. OUTCAULT.

In this new book, as in "Buster Brown Abroad," Mr. Outcault departs from his usual manner of having his pictures tell the story and writes a captivating, humorous, and unique dog-story.

Tige, Buster's faithful companion, tells in an inimitable way the events of his life, from his puppyhood to the time he met Buster, and their adventures afterward.

Mr. Outcault supplies many characteristic illustrations in black and white, and in the story it has been his aim to do in a humorous way for unfortunate dogdom what "Black Beauty" seriously did for the better treatment of animals in general—to show to children the rights of animals, and to teach them to treat their dumb friends kindly.

A handsome portrait of Tige in the roll of "autobiographer" adorns the cover.

Cloth 4to, decorated cover, $1.25.

CON THE WIZARD.

By JOHN H. JEWETT.

Author of "Bunny Stories," "More Bunny Stories," etc. With 8 illustrations in color by Edward R. Little and many illustrations in the text by Oliver Herford.

Mr. Jewett's name upon a child's book is sufficient assurance of its cleverness and its merit. Few books in recent years have equalled in popularity his famous "Bunny Stories," which first appeared in St. Nicholas, and sell in large numbers with each recurring holiday season. It is needless to say that Con is a very interesting wizard; and that this little book will equal in popularity, aside from its unique form and bright illustrations, any other small book for children of the Christmas season.

BUSTER BROWN'S PRANKS.

By R. F. OUTCAULT.

The children's interest in Buster Brown never dies, and his annual appearance in book form is eagerly awaited in thousands of nurseries the world over.

"Buster Brown's Pranks" continues the familiar series of brightly colored pictures, printed from new plates on fine paper. Buster is up to new mischief on every page, and is as fertile in good resolutions as in former years. Tige is still his faithful companion and willing confederate.

Mr. Outcault's pictures delight the boys and girls alike, the older children as well as the younger, and the "Buster Brown Books" have been the most popular children's books of recent seasons.

Oblong, 4to, boards in colors, 70 cents.

FOXY GRANDPA'S SURPRISES.

By "BUNNY" (Carl F. Schultz).

With the children Foxy Grandpa ranks equal in interest with Buster Brown. The good-natured old gentleman and his mischievous grandchildren, who so dearly delight in practical jokes, and known to nearly every child in the land.

"Foxy Grandpa's Surprises" is a companion volume to "Foxy Grandpa Up-to-Date" and "The Adventures of Foxy Grandpa," continuing the series of brightly colored pictures, printed from new plates on fine paper.

It contains many new adventures for Grandpa, who usually, though not always, turns the joke in an unexpected way upon the Boys.

Oblong, 4to, boards in colors, 70 cents.

LITTLE SAMMY SNEEZE.

By WINSOR McCAY.

Sammy Sneeze is a new "comic" character that is rapidly making friends with the children through his appearance each week in the colored Sunday supplement of the New York Herald.

Sammy is a good boy, excepting for his terrible propensity to sneeze at the wrong time and place. This causes him untold trouble wherever he goes, and results in many comical situations, which Winsor McCay has humorously depicted in bright colors.

The book is printed from new plates in the same size and style as the colored "Buster Brown" and "Foxy Grandpa" books, the pictures telling the story.

Oblong, 4to, boards in colors, 70 cents.

ARTISTIC CALENDARS AND PICTURES FOR THE HOME.

Over one hundred varieties of calendars of all prices, styles and shapes. This is unquestionably the finest collection of calendars ever offered. The originals selected for reproduction are not only of higher artistic merit than have been used before, but the method of reproducing these has been considerably improved by repeated experiments.

Among the artists represented are:

Clarence F. Underwood — Elisabeth F. Bonsall
Anita Le Roy — Ethel Franklin Betts
Maria L. Kirk — Jessie Willcox Smith
Anna Whelan Betts — Elizabeth Shippen Green and R. F. Outcault

The pictures can be had separately also.

Illustrated Gift Books

Eve's Daughters

Portrayed by A. G. LEARNED. The handsomest gift book of the year. Epigrams about women from world-wide sources, illustrated with beautiful full-page and marginal line drawings by Arthur G. Learned, one of the best known and most popular of the younger American artists. Crown octavo, cloth, cover design in gold, gilt top, daintily boxed, $1.75.

A limited number of copies bound in full flexible alligator leather, full gold edges, with hand colored frontispiece, boxed, $5.00.

The Lovers' Treasury Series

A new series of illustrated gift books, two volumes of which are now ready. They are:

1. The Art Lovers' Treasury

Edited by CARRIE THOMPSON LOWELL. This volume contains forty-eight beautiful half-tone reproductions of great paintings of representative subjects, printed in double tone ink, accompanied by poems which they illustrate or that have been written about them.

2. The Music Lovers' Treasury

Edited by HELEN PHILBROOK PATTEN. Containing thirty-two half-tone reproductions of great paintings of musical subjects. This dainty volume will appeal to every lover of music, art, and poetry. The most complete anthology of poetry relating to music ever issued.

Each of the above volumes, bound in cloth, handsomely stamped in gold, gilt tops, deckel edges, boxed, $1.20 net; postage extra.

On Life's Stairway

A book of poems by FREDERICK LAERENCE KNOWLES. Third revised edition, containing some of the last works of the author. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

"It seems to me that Mr. Knowles is the real thing—a genuine poet. He has art, heart, thought and imagination."—RICHARD BURTON.

Books for Boys and Girls

Chatterbox for 1905

The only genuine CHATTERBOX, containing a large variety of original stories and poems for the young. More than two-hundred full-page illustrations, including six colored plates. Small quarto, illuminated board covers, $1.25; Cloth, full gilt, $1.75.

The Armstrongs

A tale for girls by LAURA E. RICHARDS. This story, while mainly intended for girls, has a very attractive boy as one of its chief characters, and should be as interesting to the boys of the family as to their sisters. Illustrated by Julia Ward Richards. Cloth, 12mo, $1.25.

The Minute Boys of the Mohawk Valley

By JAMES OTIS. Another volume in the famous Minute Boys' Series. A splendid historical story, combining accuracy, with Mr. Otis' well known delightful style of story telling. Illustrated by A. Burnham Shute. Cloth, 12mo, $1.25.

Josie Bean: Flat Street

By HARRIET A. CHEEVER, the well known author of "Maid Sally," "Madame Angora," etc. This is probably the best story that Mrs. Cheever has ever written and can not fail to appeal to all children. It has for a heroine a healthy, hearty, fun-loving little girl, who, in spite of poverty and obscure surroundings, achieves a successful career as an artist. Illustrated by Diantha W. Horne. Cloth, 12mo, $1.25.

Plucky Jo

By EDWARD S. ELLIS. A story told in Mr. Ellis' usual high class style, which makes ideal reading for boys who admire grit, perseverance, and success. Illustrated by J. W. Kennedy. Cloth, 12mo, $1.25.

The Brass Bound Box

By EVELYN RAYMOND. Illustrated by Diantha W. Horne. In this story Mrs. Raymond has fully upheld her previous reputation as one of the best of living girls' authors. It is well written, well printed, handsomely bound, and should prove to be one of the leading juveniles of the holiday season. Cloth, 12mo, $1.25.

Tommy Joyce and Tommy Joy

By HARRIET A. CHEEVER. Although Mrs. Cheever is most widely known as a writer for girls, this little book will convince her friends and admirers, of which she has many, that she can write for boys as well. The story of the friendship of two boys, whose names are somewhat similar, is sure to please all readers. Cloth, 12mo, $1.25.

Mary 'n' Mary

By EDITH FRANCIS FOSTER, author of "Puss in the Corner" and other rebus books. A sweet little story for young girls, containing more than one-hundred text-cut and full-page illustrations by the author. Cloth. 12mo, $1.25.

The Old Monday Farm

By LOUISE R. BAKER. A new volume in The Young of Heart Series. Charley Swan's father bought a farm and let Charley run it. How he ran it can be found out by reading the book. Illustrated by J. W. Kennedy. Cloth, thin 12mo, 50 cents.

Mr. Penwiper's Fairy Godmother

By AMY WOODS, a new author, but one who, judging from her first book, is sure to become one of the leading writers of children's stories. The tale of Mr. Penwiper and his Fairy Godmother, little Mary, is extremely fascinating, and the book is sure to meet with a large sale. Illustrated by Diantha W. Horne. Cloth, 12mo, 50 cents.

Fiction

Mrs. Tree's Will

(The sixth printing.) By LAURA E. RICHARDS. The admirers of "Mrs. Tree," to which this story is a sequel, will be pleased to learn more about the delightful heroine of that book. "Mrs. Tree's Will" can not fail to establish the author's place in the upper ranks of American novelists, and to obtain a sale greater than that of its popular predecessors. Illustrated by Frank T. Merrill. Cloth back, cartridge paper sides, gilt top, 75 cents.

Jorn Uhl

By GUSTAVE FRENSSEN. Translated by F. S. Delmar. "Gustave Frenssen is a new name in literature. A Lutheran clergyman of Holstein, his story "Jorn Uhl" took the German public by storm. F. S. Delmar has given us an admirable translation.—In breadth of interest, full stage setting, humor and pathos, the story belongs to the school of Dickens.—"Such a story deserves and will repay deliberate and attentive reading——."—The Congregationalist.

..."One who reads this book gains quickly and thoroughly a general idea of the country's possibilities for commerce and human advancement. . . . This is a first-class work of reference"—The Nation, Oct. 19, 1905.

THE ELEMENTS OF RAILWAY ECONOMICS

By W. M. ACWORTH, author of "The Railways of England," "The Railways and the Traders," etc. 8vo, cloth, 70 cents.

"An intelligent man, if he will apply his mind for a few hours to the study of this little book, may have a clearer understanding of the problem of railway rates than is now manifested by most of our public speakers and newspaper editors. Mr. Acworth has explained a difficult problem with such admirable lucidity as to bring it within the popular comprehension, and he would have been censurable had he hid his light under a bushel. While his book may have been intended for his students at the London School of Economics, and while his illustrations and applications are primarily English, the American people stand in especial need of its lessons, and their need has never been so great as it will be during the coming years."—The Evening Post, May 8, 1905.

"Should easily take first place among the cheaper editions of Dickens."—The Dial, Chicago.

Saalfield's Gift Books

Sweeter Still Than This

By ADAH LOUISE SUTTON

A sumptuous book of beautiful verse, marked by the tenderness of truths felt, and all the subtle sweeps of fancy compounding the poetic instinct.

"This book did not need the accessories of beautiful typography and illustration—splendid as these are—to insure for it a hearty and appreciative welcome."—Times-Democrat.

Reduced illustration from "SWEETER STILL THAN THIS."

AUTHOR OF "SEEDS OF APRIL'S SOWING."

"An ideal gift book."

No pains have been spared to present these poetic gems in settings worthy of them. The binding is a work of art. The illustrations, displaying exquisite taste, by Carll B. Williams, fourteen full pages, in softest tones, make the messages twice told—by pen and picture. Dainty borders frame each poem.

Cloth, 8vo, neatly boxed, $1.50

A Chronicle of Christmas

A dainty gift book, full of the Christmas sentiment,—old-time legends, customs, verses all pertaining to the happy Yule-tide. Each text page set in tinted border drawn by H. H. Bennett. Appropriate holly wreath cover design.

Cloth, 12mo, boxed.

Ole Ann

By JEANETTE GRACE WATSON

"Ten stories make up this jolly book; all of them about black folks, written in the raciest, darky dialect, with the happiest appreciation of their childish irresponsibilities. Ole Ann always did despise her husband, but after he was dead, she used to ruminate, 'It do jess beat all how a pusson kin miss such a no-count niggah.'"—Kansas City Star.

Cloth, 8vo, boxed.

$1.00 each.

Immortality By JOSEPH JEFFERSON

The great actor, shortly before his death, embodied in an original poem (an allegory), his view of the future life—the relation between this life and that to come. As was to be expected from one of Joseph Jefferson's life and character, the poem is full of hope, inspiration and promise.

Handsomely bound, hand lettered, every page a picture, it is now presented for the first time in book form. It possesses in an altogether exceptional degree the elements requisite to a satisfactory gift book.

Cloth, 12mo, boxed, $1.00

Millions of Mischief

By HEADON HILL

A mystery novel whose plot embraces a great scheme to rid England of her Prime Minister. Entrancing from the first page to the very last. What the English press says of it:

"Full of dramatic movement and thrilling episodes."—Scotsman.
"A fine busy story without a dull moment."—Liverpool Weekly.
"A striking and vigorous book."—Morning Leader.
"Will fascinate till the last page is reached."—Dundee Courier.
"Will not willingly lay it down until the end is reached."—Sheffield Telegram.

Cloth, 12mo, illustrated, $1.50.

DOLLY, Daughter of New England

By RUTH LOUISE SHELDON

The story of a rich girl, full of fanciful motives, frank, tender, but inclined to throw conventionalities to the winds, winning and captivating at all times. Cloth, 12mo, illustrated by Wilhelmina Frederick, $1.50.

DOLLY

The Silver Pin

By ALFRED WILSON-BARRETT

A story of a great London murder mystery, in which the hero, a soldier lately returned from the Boer War, is opposed to the Scotland Yard men and some of the most skilful detectives of the metropolis. A rival to Sherlock Holmes. Full of neatly managed situations, deeply interesting. Cloth, 12mo, illustrated, $1.50.

Denmark, Norway and Sweden

By WILLIAM ELEROY CURTIS

The country, the climate, people, cities, towns, roads, rural life, literary lights, laws, customs, traditions—all graphically described by this matchless writer, who knows just what the people are interested in and how to tell it.

By ALBERT BIGELOW PAINE

Author of "The Arkansaw Bear" Forty-Six Illustrations

Kate Douglas Wiggin says: "A sweeter or lovelier book, within and without, it would be impossible to find, or one more suggestive and useful to children, parents and teachers."

"'A Little Garden Calendar' is a book that every child will read and enjoy and profit by. In it the story of the seeds is told through the flower. Each month of the year is taken up, what seeds should be planted during it, what attention should be paid after they come up, and so on until the flowering and fruiting season is past. The book is profusely illustrated. The type is excellent, and the 'Little Garden Calendar' is recommended as a valuable text-book, as well as an instructive and delightful addition to the nursery book shelf."—New Orleans Picayune.

"Since Asa Gray published that wonderful book, 'How Plants Grow,' we have seen nothing more likely to attract children to the study of botany than this charming little book."—The Church Standard.

"In the guise of a bright, pretty story of happy family life, the author tells of the way the most familiar flowers and vegetables may be made to grow."—Philadelphia Telegraph

"Such books are good and wholesome for children, and we hope many of them will have this 'Garden Calendar' added to their libraries."—Christian Observer

"The story of a garden during an entire year and of the little boy and girl who owned the garden. It merits cordial praise."—Pittsburg Gazette.

"The path to knowledge of plant growth and characteristics is made very pleasant in this story."—The Congregationalist.

"A year book telling in simple language a few of the wonders of plant life. Young readers are led by the path of knowledge through the garden of imagination."—Boston Advertiser.

"Tells in simple language the wonders of plant life as they may be seen from month to month throughout the year."—Central Methodist.

NEW BIOGRAPHIES

Josiah Warren

By WILLIAM BAILIE. A sociological study of the founder of philosophic anarchism; a Boston philosopher now little remembered, but who was honored by John Stuart Mill and whose mechanical invention included the cylinder press. His life has never before been published, and his writings have long been out of print. 16mo, cloth; net, $1.00; by post, $1.10.

Walt Whitman

By ISAAC HULL PLATT (Vol. 26 of "Beacon Biographies"). The first biography which has appeared since the poet's death, and notable as an entirely adequate statement in brief compass of the life and work of this eminent American. Pocket size, photogravure portrait, chronology and bibliography; net, 75 cents; by post, 80 cents.

OTHER NEW BOOKS

Bacon Cryptograms in Shake-speare

By ISAAC HULL PLATT. A concise and interesting account of certain newly discovered cryptograms which seem to indicate that Bacon was in some way concerned in the authorship or publication of the Shakespearian plays. It makes no extravagant claims and fully explains all points discussed. 12mo, net, $1.00; by post, $1.06.

Towards Democracy

By EDWARD CARPENTER. A beautiful new edition on India paper of the complete poems in Four Parts (including "Who Shall Command the Heart?"). 518 pp. Size, 6½x4½ inches; limp binding; net, $1.50; by post, $1.54.

Graduated Exercises in Articulation

By SAMUEL ARTHUR KING. The object of this much-needed book is to train speakers and singers in accurate and distinct articulation, the essential basis of a good delivery. It also furnishes the teacher with practical elementary exercises, so arranged as to be progressive in their difficulties. 12mo, cloth, net, $1.00; by post, $1.06.

Chants Communal

BOOKS FOR THE HOLIDAYS

NEW BOOKS OF IMPORTANCE

With Walt Whitman in Camden

A Diary Record of Conversations kept by HORACE TRAUBEL, with many important letters, documents, portraits, etc. The publication of this volume is certainly one of the most important events in the literary history of America. For several years the author, one of Whitman's literary executors, recorded faithfully the conversations and events of his almost daily meetings with the poet. The result is a picture of the daily life and thought of Walt Whitman such as we possess of no other great author, possibly excepting Dr. Johnson. Of the many letters and manuscripts very few have ever been published, and they are from many of the greatest of Whitman's contemporaries. The discussion which accompanied them gives Whitman's estimates and opinions of a vast number of men and events in the most delightful manner. Sumptuously illustrated, handsomely bound. Net, $3.00; by post, $3.25.

The Life of John Fiske

By THOMAS SERGEANT PERRY. Volume 27 of the Beacon Biographies. This series once more offers the first published life of an eminently great American, written by one who enjoyed the most intimate personal acquaintance with Mr. Fiske. Pocket size, cloth, photogravure portrait; net, 75 cents; by post, 80 cents.

Paris and the Social Revolution

By ALVAN FRANCIS SANBORN. A study of the Revolutionary Element in the Various Classes of Parisian Life. With 72 illustrations by Vaughan Trowbridge. The New York Mail says of this book: "It is a refreshing thing to read a book written by a man who knows his subject through and through. We do not believe the social student will find a dull page in the book. It presents the very spirit and essence of poetry, music and art of the French Revolutionary movement; the whole quivering world of modern radical Paris is here." Its value is immediate and international. The principles of human nature disclosed are universal, and its interpretations are full of suggestion to those who would understand the trend of radical thought in our own country. Sumptuously printed and illustrated, 8vo, cloth, net, $3.50; by post, $3.75.

The Aftermath of Slavery

By WILLIAM A. SINCLAIR, with an Introduction by COL. THOMAS WENTWORTH HIGGINSON. The most important book yet issued on the Race question. Edward Atkinson pronounces it "the best book ever written by a colored man, if we except the work of Dumas." 12mo, cloth, net, $1.50; by post, $1.62.

NEW FICTION

Gumption

By NATHANIEL C. FOWLER, JR. A tale of Yankee push and progress, with vivid pictures of modern newspaper life. The author describes conditions and people in an inimitable style, full of humor and keen satire, and with all its freedom and ease of style, the story has a serious undercurrent which shows the value of good old Yankee "gumption" in the making of success. It has many of the essential qualities of sound sense which made "The Selfmade Merchant" so great a seller. With illustrations by Charles Copeland. 12mo, cloth, decorative, $1.50.

Where Copper Was King

By JAMES NORTH WRIGHT. A remarkably interesting story, full of adventurous incident and with a delicate vein of romance, which records vividly a fast disappearing phase of Western life. With the immense growth of the mining industries on Lake Superior much of the picturesqueness has gone forever, and the Cornish miner, like the Cowboy has passed away. The author was formerly Superintendent of the Calumet and Hecla Mine, and he describes herein life that he has actually seen, and of which he himself has been a part. 12mo, cloth, decorative, $1.50.

FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS

Foot-Ball Grandma

By CAROLYN S. CHANNING CABOT, with an introduction by COL. THOMAS WENTWORTH HIGGINSON. An Auto-baby-ography as told by Tony, with illustrations from Tony's drawings. A book for every nursery which will delight children and grandmammas alike. Small 4to, cloth, decorative, net, $1.00; by post, $1.10.

Arabella and Araminta

By GERTRUDE SMITH. The continuous demand for this veritable nursery classic has enabled the publishers to issue a new edition containing all of Ethel Reed's full-page illustrations, and handsomely bound in cloth for half the price heretofore charged. Small 4to, net, $1.00; by post, $1.10

NEW EDITIONS

Bliss Carman's Low Tide on Grand-Pre and Ballads of Lost Haven

These two books contain much of the author's best work. In this new edition the entire contents of both books are reprinted in a single volume, with a fine portrait of Mr. Carman. Handsomely bound in Strathmore, Japan boards; net, $1.50; by post, $1.60.

Mr. Dooley: in Peace, in War, and in the Hearts of his Countrymen

A new library edition containing in one volume all the contents of Mr. Dunne's first two books (and his best work), of which over 100,000 copies have been sold. With frontispiece portrait, 12mo, cloth, decorative; net, $1.50; by post, $1.60.

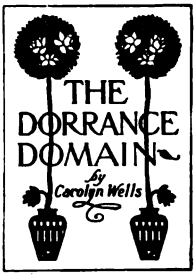
W. A. Wilde Co. New Books

HECTOR, MY DOG: HIS AUTOBIOGRAPHY

Life in the Northland. By EGERTON R. YOUNG. Illustrated. 332 pp. Cloth, $1.50.

A unique volume drawn from the life experience of a writer who has spent long years of romantic adventure in semi-arctic regions.



There are studies in dog nature which every lover of these faithful animals will read with intense pleasure, showing how intimate was the association between himself and his master; how often he was his sharer in his perils and adventures, as well as of his bed in the wintry camp in the snow.

A story which is true to life, and one which will become a classic on kindness to animals.

THE PENHALLOW FAMILY. A Story

By Mrs. C. V. JAMISON. Illustrated. 317 pp. Cloth, $1.50.

This is one of the strongest and most beautiful stories that Mrs. Jamison has ever written. The picturesqueness of its location and the uniqueness of its characters lend peculiar interest to it. It will rank high among the Fall books.

THE DORRANCE DOMAIN. A Story

By CAROLYN WELLS. Illustrated. 301 pp. Cloth, $1.50.

Full of the wit and humor which characterizes this author's books. Never has she written a more entertaining volume than this one, in which she follows the "ups and downs" of the Dorrance family.

NEW PUBLICATIONS

Phyllis Burton

By MRS. S. R. GRAHAM CLARK

12mo. Illustrated. Price, $1.00 net, postpaid, $1.14

A book dealing with life in a common New England village. The center of it is the Doctor's home, and the heroine is the daughter Phyllis, or Phil, as she was universally called. About her and her sister and cousin the other characters are made to revolve, and they act their parts well.

Winning His Degree

By EVERETT T. TOMLINSON

12mo. Illustrated. Price, $1.00 net, postpaid, $1.10

The last book in the "Winner Series." It deals with the advanced years in college, as "Winning His 'W'" did with those of the freshman and sophomore. Mr. Tomlinson holds to his ideal of a boy "not preternaturally good nor unnaturally bad," and Will Phelps still embodies it.

The Appointed Way

By HOPE DARING

Illustrated. 16mo. Price, $1.00 net, postpaid, $1.12

Hope Daring, which is a nom de plume, has given us a graphic description of the characteristic influence and workings of the Seventh Day Advent Church. The apparent fanaticism and the defects of the entire system of Adventism are well set forth. The characters are well drawn, and the literary quality of the book, in its evidence of wide reading and in its expression, is above the average.

The Higher Criticism Cross-Examined

By FRED. D. STOREY

16mo. Price, $1.25 net, postpaid, $1.35

With clearness of statement, with felicity of expression, and with thoroughness of investigation, Mr. Storey considers the various positions of higher criticism and successfully controverts them.

From Out the Flame

By WILLIAM R. BURRELL

Price, $1.00 net, postpaid, $1.13

A narrative of the times of Paul and Nero. It is a book for the home, and pre-eminently for the libraries of our Sunday-school.

BEETHOVEN

The Man and the Artist as Revealed in His Own Words

MOZART

The Man and the Artist as Revealed in His Own Words

Both books compiled and annotated by FRIEDRICH KERST, translated and edited, with additional notes, by HENRY EDWARD KREHBIEL. 12mo, uncut edges, gilt top, decorated cover, each, $1.00 net; postage 10 cents.

The utterances of Beethoven and Mozart on the important events of their life; their views of their art; estimates of other composers and opinions of their own works; religious views, etc. Each quotation is followed by a statement of its source and the circumstances under which it was said or written. The books are, in all but the sordid details of life, autobiographies. They are to the spirit what a chronicle of dates and events would be to the external existence of the men.

A BOOK OF MEDITATIONS

By EDWARD HOWARD GRIGGS. A volume of Personal Reflections, Sketches, and Poems dealing with Life and Art; an Autobiography, not of Events and Accidents, but of Thoughts and Impressions. Including a newly prepared index. Frontispiece, portrait by Albert Sterner. Send for sample pages. 12mo, price $1.50 net; postage 10 cents.

The Sunny Side of the Street

By MARSHALL P. WILDER

Author of "People I Have Smiled With"

"His book—like American conversation—is made up of anecdotes. He talks intimately of Richard Croker, President McKinley, President Harrison, Joseph Jefferson, Senator Depew, Henry Watterson, Gen. Horace Porter, Augustin Daly, Henry Irving, Buffalo Bill, King Edward VII., Mrs. Langtry, and a host of other personages, large and small and medium sized. He tells many good stories. We can recommend his book as cheerful reading."
—New York Times.

"It is replete with anecdotes, and observations relating to the humorous side of life, intimate bits of interesting personalia, and bright and witty chat concerning things in general."

Just the Book to Give to a Boy (or Girl)

The Boys' Life of Christ

By Rev. William Byron Forbush, Ph. D.

Author of "The Boy Problem"

With the same vividness and movement that is found in the favorite juvenile biographies of popular heroes the author portrays the heroic Jesus. He is seen playing the games of boys; camping out with the fishermen; sailing the lake in the storm; braving the enmity of the mighty; dying like a soldier for a holy cause. The book is dramatic; made of short sentences, crisp descriptions, plenty of dialogue; it has poetry, even humor. It approaches the devine Jesus through the human greatness

It will be read and reread not only by boys but by girls and grown-up people. We believe it will become a juvenile classic. There are eight strong illustrations from the most vigorous conceptions by the masters of the personality of Jesus. The book is also supplied with interesting notes on Oriental customs and places which will commend it to Sunday-school teachers, especially for use in the lessons for 1906, which are for the entire year upon the life of Christ.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT TO THE TRADE

JUST PUBLISHED The autobiography of

ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE

One of the leading scientific men of the day. This important work is published under the title

MY LIFE

A Record of Events and Opinions

Two vols., large 8vo, cloth, illustrated, net, $6.00

The publication of the autobiography of a man, so prominent in the great scientific movement of the last century, which brought forth Darwin, Spencer and Huxley ; who preceded these men and outlived them, is an event of importance to the bookseller and the public.

In commenting on this work, which has also just appeared in England, W. Robertson Nicoll says :

> "It goes without saying that it is full of interest, surprise and fascination. . . . A book which ought to be seriously considered by all who are interested in great problems. The personality that shines through these pages is very attractive. The command of facts, the power of generalization, and the freedom of expression everywhere apparent will delight intelligent readers."

The New York Sun in an advance notice says :

> " Since the publication of the ' Life of Darwin ' no book of so much interest at once to scientists and the general reader has seen the light."

Alfred Russel Wallace is the author of Darwinism, The Wonderful Century, and Man's Place in the Universe.

the Trade can offer with enthusiasm

A Garden in Pink

By BLANCHE ELIZABETH WADE

In this book are recounted the experiences of two lovers of the beautiful, dwelling in a picturesque country place, who discourse charmingly upon the plans for a unique flower garden. The pleasures and the trials encountered during the season are told in the keen and quaint conversasations which, for the most part, form the medium of the text, and remind one of "Elizabeth and Her German Garden."

NOTES IN SEASON.

A. C. McCLURG & Co. have just ready the fourth large edition of "Ben Blair," the story of ranch life in South Dakota that has received a warm welcome everywhere. Three large editions have been quickly exhausted—the first one having been 15,000 copies.

DODD, MEAD & Co. have just ready one of the most important autobiographies of the year in Alfred Russel Wallace's "My Life, a record of events and opinions," of which a fastidious critic, who read the advance sheets, says "it is a book which ought to be seriously considered by all who are interested in great problems."

EDWARD J. CLODE will publish early in January Gordon Holmes's new story of mystery and romance, entitled "The Arncliffe Puzzle," now running serially in the Associated Sunday magazines. The story is said to be quite up to the standard of the author's previous novel, "The Mysterious Disappearance," one of the best detective stories of the year.

THE DODGE PUBLISHING COMPANY will publish on the 15th inst. two books on Japan, entitled "Queer Things About Japan," by Douglas Sladen, and "More Queer Things About Japan," by Douglas Sladen and Norma Lorimer. In "More Queer Things About Japan" there are sixteen chapters by Miss Lorimer on "Japan from a woman's point of view," and two remarkable contributions from the Japanese—a life of Napoleon, written and illustrated by the Japanese about 1840, and "The Yoshiwara from Within," an account of the public harems of Japan. The famous letters of Will Adams, written from Japan 1611-1617, are also included.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY will publish immediately "Newport, Our Social Capital," the long-expected volume by Mrs. John King Van Rensselaer, which is a rich and most elaborate publication. It is issued in a strictly limited edition and everything has been done to make it worthy to rest upon the tables of the favored cottagers of Newport. It has a frontispiece in color by Henry Hutt and a large number of illustrations in photogravure and double-tone, and drawings by Edward Stratton Halloway. The book is a decided contribution to the history of Newport, as it covers from its settlement to the present day in an exhaustive manner.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY will publish shortly a volume of "Recollections," by William O'Brien, M.P. for Cork, who has played a considerable part in Irish history, notably in the Parnell movement; "The Re-Shaping of the Far East," by B. L. Putnam Weale, which deals very fully with the progress of the great war, illustrated with a number of full-page plates; "Pre-Raphaelitism and the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood,' by William Holman Hunt, in two handsomely illustrated volumes; "The Italian Lakes," painted by Ella Du Cane and described by Richard Bagot; also, the fourth volume of Herbert Paul's "History of Modern England," covering the period from 1876 to 1885, which promises to be exceptionally interesting, because it narrates many stirring events and records the progress of very far-reaching movements.

O. cl., *$7.50 net.
This treatise by the well known French potter appeared in the form of articles in the "Keramic Studio" during the year 1903. Pt. 1 is a general review of the position of porcelain at the beginning of the twentieth century, divided into chapters on: The ceramic movement in Europe in 1900; Sèvres at the Paris Exposition of 1900; The manufactory of Sèvres—its organization. Pt. 2 is devoted to technical instruction in the making of Grand Feu porcelain and grès.

Douglas, Amanda Minnie. Helen Grant at Aldred house; il. by Amy Brooks. Bost., Lee & Shepard, [Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co.,] [1905.] c. 5+339 p. D. (Helen Grant books, no. 3.) cl., †$1.25.
In the present volume Helen Grant returns to Aldred House. She is not very romantic, fond of study, and has ambitious aims, yet is tender in her friendships, sincere and helpful. In her happy year at school she attracts Mrs. Aldred's regard, which has an influence in shaping her own character and in her effect upon friends. When she is ready for college she has to choose between the career that she has marked out and the proffered loves of more than one.

Introduces the same child who appeared in a former book, "Laura's Holidays." Laura, who is in her eighth year, with her brothers and sisters has a most enjoyable vacation in the mountains of Oregon. The whole family secure a nearly completed cabin, whose owner has changed his plans, and make of it what they term "Holiday camp." Many interesting things are seen and done.

Ellis, E: Sylvester. Deerfoot in the mountains; il. by J. Steeple Davis. Phil., J: C. Winston Co., 1905. c. 363 p. (New Deerfoot ser., no. 3.) cl., †$1.

This the third and last volume of the New Deerfoot Series follows the adventures of the Indian guide and his two boy friends from the Pacific Ocean to their home in Ohio. The party makes the hazardous ascent of the Columbia River, and arrives among the Nez Perces Indians. Here they learn that Deerfoot's wonderful horse, Whirlwind, has been stolen by the Assiniboines, and the dauntless youth starts singlehanded on foot to overtake and recapture him. A thrilling encounter with five warriors is the result.

"I have chosen the title, 'Canada as it is,' for three reasons. Firstly, because the popular idea about the great Dominion is that it is a region clasped most of the year in ice and frost, which it is not; secondly, because the Canadians themselves, by means of government pamphlets and subsidised lecturers, would like the world to believe it the most delightful land to live in, which it isn't; and thirdly, because Canada has just emerged from its adolescence as a nation, has reached lusty manhood, and has become conscious of the great rôle it may play in the history of commerce."—Author's Foreword.

The inequality of rights among American citizens owing to privilege or private laws bought with money dishonestly made, which enable one-sixth of the community to keep the other five-sixths in bondage is the subject. The author piles up a startling array of facts. His remedy would be a very heavy land-tax which would make it impossible to hold unused land, would furnish a capital for the government, lower the price of commodities and give the poor man a chance to work land for himself. Great dangers are prophesied if this injustice continues.

Grey, E: C. W. St. Giles of the Lepers. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1905. 6+252 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A large parish of London, containing bad slums and formerly many notorious resorts, like Seven Dials. It is so named from the Hospital of St. Giles of the Lepers, founded in the 12th century by Queen Maud. The author, whose charitable work during thirty years has made him familiar with all aspects of this district, traces its history, describes its changes, and in a series of walks points out the many buildings and localities interesting from association.

The author sees nothing terribly new or strange in present economic conditions. He thinks they differ in degree, but not in kind. He recommends as solution Christian sociology, which in its broad sense he takes to mean a recognition of the rights of others and obedience to existing laws, with just punishment of each individual offender. He is not afraid of corporations and trusts, but thinks every individual concerned should be conscientious and do his duty in making others so. The indifference and laziness of individuals he arraigns with force.

The author is an Inspector-General of Hospitals for Queensland, Australia. These volumes embody his investigations during many years on the effects of food in various diseases. He discusses both nitrogenous and carbonaceous metabolism, the income of carbon to the blood, and its disposal, and the results that occur when there is too much carbonaceous material in the blood, and the treatment to reduce it. The diseases resulting from this condition are examined and suggestions made for cure.

Lodge, Sir O: Life and matter: a criticism of Professor Haeckel's "Riddle of the universe." N. Y., Putnam, 1905. c. 9+175 p. D. cl., *$1 net.

Haeckel did service to scientific thought in introducing Darwinism into Germany. The author points out that to advanced students of logical minds Haeckel's writings can only be beneficial, but he thinks general readers must be warned against their somewhat hasty and destructive portions. He does not attack Haeckel's work so much as he offers a supplement, "an extension of the more scientific portions of that work into higher and more fruitful regions of inquiry."

This is the first attempt that has been made, the writer believes, since Talfourd's day to write the life of Charles Lamb in full. While many monographs and sketches have been written of him, he holds them all to be incomplete. "The new material that has come to light since the publication of Talfourd's "Final Memorials" alone would justify a new biography," he says, "apart from the removal by the lapse of time, of many of the restrictions which prevented Lamb's first biographer from quoting as freely from the letters as he might have wished, and from entering fully into all the particulars of his friend's life and friendship." It has been the author's aim to collect and fuse into a single narrative the sum of this scattered information.

First volume covers from earliest accounts, 600 B.C.-A.D. 1436. The author was also the compositor, stereotyper and printer of his work. To make the necessary studies required for an exhaustive work on the many little principalities that have come under Austrian rule requires a knowledge of the German, Bohemian, Hungarian and Slavonic languages. The work is timely as the Austria-Hungarian empire is held together by gradually loosening bonds. The personality of Francis Josef is of these the strongest. Author is librarian, equipment department, Navy Yard, Brooklyn.

Ryan, T: Curran. Finite and infinite. Phil., Lippincott, 1905. c. 351 p. D. cl., $1.50 net.

The author belongs to the Wisconsin bar. He compares the philosophies of Hume, Kant, Spencer and John Fiske. He believes in a personal God, but he believes the great natural laws of matter are independent of the force that rules humanity and is wholly love. He does not think that anything which produces disaster in the world should be traced to a beneficial Creator. His points are closely argued.

Sedgwick, H: Dwight. A short history of Italy, (476-1900.) Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1905. [N.] c. 443 p. map, O. cl., $2 net.

Claims to be but "a mere sketch in outline." The author says further "it makes no pretence to original investigation, or even to an extended examination of the voluminous literature which deals with every part of its subject. It is an attempt to give a correct impression of Italian history as a whole, and employs details only here and there, and then merely for the sake of giving greater clearness to the general outline . . . I have laid emphasis upon the matters of greatest general interest, the Papacy, the Renaissance, and the Risorgimento; and my special object has been to put in high relief those achievements which make Italy so charming and so interesting to the world."

Shuckburgh, E. S. Augustus: the life and times of the founder of the Roman empire, (B.C. 63-A.D. 14.) N. Y., A. Wessels Co., [imported,] 1905. 12+318 p. D. cl., *$1.50 net.

The author who is librarian of Emanuel College, Cambridge (Eng.), thinks that the greatness of Augustus has been somewhat obscured by comparison with the brilliant genius of his uncle, Julius Cæsar. "Yet Augustus was the most successful ruler known to us;" he evoked order out of chaos, established a new government—was, in fact, the founder of the Roman Empire. This biography is based on first-hand study of ancient authorities.

Rules for the various uses of marks of punctuation, with illustrations. Under each rule, twenty-five unpunctuated examples are given as practise material. At the end of each chapter are a number of miscellaneous sentences covering the uses of the mark treated of in the chapter.

Smithers, Jos. P. Argument demonstrating existence of deity. N. Y., [Peter Eckler, 1905.] c. 8 p. D. pap., 15 c.
Matter and force or motion are the only entities of which science takes cognizance. The author thinks a third entity could be demonstrated as clearly as science demonstrates its theories and this entity the demonstrator would be justified in calling God. "Matter has either existed forever, or it was created at some time out of nothing. If it was created it required a Creator, who is God, but if it was not created it has existed forever," which scientists deny.

Sonneck, O. G. Bibliography of early secular American music. Wash., D. C., printed for the author by H. L. McQueen, 1905. c. 10+194 p. 8°, cl., *$5 net. (200 copies, of which 175 are for sale.)
This book aims at a complete collection of titles of secular music and books, pamphlets, essays, etc., relating to secular music: (1) Issued by the American press prior to the19th century and extant in the principal libraries of the Eastern States; (2) Issued, but not extant in these libraries; (3) Written by native or naturalized Americans and extant in manuscript; (4) Written by the same but apparently neither published nor extant. In the index biographical notes on many unknown or forgotten American musicians are added.—Preface.

Sonneck, O. G. Francis Hopkinson, the first American poet-composer, (1737-1791,) and James Lyon, patriot, preacher, psalmodist, (1735-1794:) two studies in early American music. Wash., D. C., printed for the author by H. L. McQueen, 1905. c. 222 p. il. 8°, cl., *$5 net. (200 copies, of which 175 are for sale.)

Spinoza, Benedictus de. The principles of Descartes' "Philosophy" (the philosopher's earliest work); from the Latin, with an introd. by Halbert Hains Britan. Chic., Open Court Publishing Co., 1905. 86+177 p. il. D. (Philosophical classics, Religion of Science lib.) cl., 75 c.; pap., 35 c.
The translation was made from the text in Vloten and Land's editions of Spinoza's works, published in 1895. In the introduction the translator has not attempted to make an exhaustive analysis of "Descartes' Philosophy," so much as to throw light upon Spinoza's Pantheism. Spinoza's thought and method of study of the Philosophy are the important points, and parts of his work have been condensed and parts omitted with a view of studying Spinoza more than Descartes.

Sprague, W: Cyrus. The boy pathfinder: a story of the Oregon trail; il. by A. B. Shute. Bost., Lee & Shepard, [Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co.,] [1905.] c. 6+316 p. D. (Making of our nation ser., no. 2.) cl., †$1.50.
A romantic story of the Lewis and Clark Expedition. The hero is an actual character, George Shannon, who was the only member of the famous expedition that was not of mature age. It is well established that young Shannon was born in Pennsylvania, but went with his parents to Ohio in early boyhood, where his father died. At the age of fourteen, the boy was sent back to Pennsylvania to attend school in Pittsburg, and at seventeen left school to join with Lewis and Clark. Mr. Sprague follows actual records of the party very closely, thereby making his story valuable without lessening its interest.

Stead, Alfred. Great Japan: a study of national efficiency; with a foreword by the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rosebery, K.G., etc. N. Y., J: Lane Co., 1906, [1905.] 12+483 p. O. cl., *$2.50 net.
Japan is the object-lesson of national efficiency. Lord Rosebery in his foreword points out how England won the empire and her liberties by genius and daring in an inefficient world and warns his countrymen that one or more nations are now striving after efficiency and that if England does not strive also she may lose her heritage. Character and courage cannot continue to storm and conquer trained efficiency from ruler to most menial office. Alfred Stead shows what a stimulating example has been set to the nations by Japan.

Stephenson, J: W. Cutting and draping: a practical handbook for upholsterers and decorators. N. Y., Clifford & Lawton, [1905.] c. 82 p. il. diagrs., F. bds., $2.
Practical and exact directions are given for making and hanging portières, lace curtains, shades, draperies, wall hangings, etc., with a concluding chapter on workroom auxiliaries.

Stratemeyer, E: Dave Porter at Oak Hall; or, the school days of an American boy; il. by Harold Matthews Brett. Bost., Lee & Shepard, [Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co.,] [1905.] 6+312 p. il. (Dave Porter ser., no. 1.) cl., †$1.25.
Gives a faithful picture of a boy's life at an American boarding-school of to-day. It contained clever and stupid boys, upright and cunning ones and among them Dave Porter spent his school life. He distinguished himself specially at baseball. This is the first volume of a new series calculated to teach manliness and business life.

Stratemeyer, E: The fort in the wilderness; or, the soldier boys of the Indian trails; il. by A. B. Shute. Bost., Lee & Shepard, [Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co.,] [1905.] 10+306 p. (Colonial ser.) cl., †$1.25.
The fifth volume of the series directly continues "On the trail of Pontiac." The larger portion of the action takes place at Detroit and around the Great Lakes. Gives the history of the culmination of the French and Indian wars.

Hübmaier lived from 1481 to 1520. "The Anabaptists were the most universally troublesome of all the anti-Catholic parties. They were most vexatious to the Catholics because they were the most logical, consistent thorough-going and determined opponents of the Papacy and all its works." Hübmaier was burned at the stake. Only two biographies of Hübmaier are known and only one has been translated. The author is professor of church history in Crozer Theological Seminary. He has worked twenty years on this book. He has had access to Hübmaier's works in the Rochester Theological Seminary. Bibliography (9 pages).

Seven short essays, intended to state in a simple and practical manner the essential principles of religion, and to clear it from the confusion arising from theological changes and historical criticism. The author starts with the conception of religion as a universal, inevitable human experience; distinguishes it from other things with which it is often confused—as theology and morality; shows its intimate connection with the life of society; and suggests how its essence may be kept in spite of changing views on minor points.

In this charming little book, two girls, Dolly and Isabelle, have such striking resemblance, that they can hardly be told apart. They are not supposed to be related, but they live together, and later, by the clearing up of a mystery, it appears that they are really sisters. They have lots of pleasant times and doings at the seaside.

Woodberry, G: E: Swinburne. N. Y., McClure, Phillips & Co., 1905. [N.] c. 117 p. por. S. cl., 75 c. net.

Born April 5, 1837, Swinburne has been for half a century above the critics. His education was the best that England and abundant means could supply. He is a scholar and he knows literature of every race and time. The writer explains fairly Swinburne's attitude towards the Christian religion, and traces his meditative power that finally displaced the passionate impulse of the senses in his verse and his special genius as a poet of nature.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

EDWARD STANFORD, 12 Long Acre, London, W. C., has just brought out a new and revised edition of "A Descriptive Catalogue of Historical Novels and Tales," by H. Courthope Bowen. The system of classification in geographical divisions has been retained, while the number of books included has been considerably increased.

H. L. MCQUEEN, Washington, D. C., has privately printed, in an edition of 200 copies, a "Bibliography of Early Secular Music," by O. G. Sonneck, chief of the Division of Music in the Library of Congress. This work, the author says, grew out of material collected for a "History of Early Secular Music," and includes a collection—as complete as it was possible for the author to make it—of the titles of secular music and books, pamphlets, essays, etc., relating to secular music (1) issued by the American press prior to the 19th century and extant in the principal libraries of the Eastern States; (2) issued but not extant in these libraries; (3) written by native or naturalized Americans and extant in manuscript; and (4) written but apparently neither published nor extant. In the Index biographical notes on many unknown or forgotten American musicians are added. The author frankly admits the limitations and shortcomings of his work, which nevertheless should be found useful to bibliographers, collectors and dealers who are now often at a loss to locate, date and identify certain pieces or to determine their relative commercial value. (10+194 p. 8°, cl., $5.)

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

DECEMBER 2, 1905.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter for advertising pages should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers and librarians depend on the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalog," and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE COMMERCIALIZATION OF LITERATURE.

THE booktrade this year has been treated to a course of heart-to-heart talks, which caused some discussion here and abroad, though neither the text nor the discussions of it were particularly convincing. The articles we refer to were those published in the Boston Transcript under the heading of "A Publisher's Confession." The "confession," as we pointed out when the articles first made their appearance, if it divulged anything at all, was a confession of weakness—an admission, in short, that the booktrade had been put into a hole through the weakness of a number of its members, without, however, suggesting a remedy as to how to get the trade out of the hole again.

The book, while it made a surprisingly slight impression on the trade, was read, we understand, with considerable interest by the authors "and their sisters and their cousins and their aunts." Upon these "A Publisher's Confession" was thought to have made so great an impression that the subject was deemed of sufficient importance to be treated prominently in the leading literary magazine of the country—the Atlantic Monthly—which induced Henry Holt, one of the most astute and successful publishers in the trade, to present the side of the publisher in a more judicial light than it was felt that the author of "A Publisher's Confession" had presented it. Whether Mr. Holt succeeded in this any better than the writer who caused his remarks is probably open to debate; yet, whatever the difference of opinion on this question may be, there can be little doubt that Mr. Holt has written a very interesting and suggestive paper that deserves the careful attention of his confreres.

The last word very likely is yet to be written on the subject of "commercialization of literature," which has as many causes as there were heads and hands that helped to bring about the present conditions. The way out, however, seems to us to be not animadversion upon the symptoms but a deliberate attack at the cause; but this will only be possible when the rank and file of the publishing trade have learned the unchanging principles underlying the business, in short, when the trade knows what it is about, when it is self-dependent and has courage enough to lay its own course and follow it regardless of the divagations of the reckless and the foolish. Or, as Plato briefly puts it, "Follow thy business and know thyself."

The Dial in summing up Mr. Holt's article truly says:

"Publishing and authorship alike may degenerate from professions into trades, if sordid and short-sighted motives are allowed to prevail. The same considerations that apply to journalism apply also to book-making; the promoter of the 'yellow' newspaper has his counterpart in what we may fairly call the 'yellow' publisher, and the journalist who utters for hire opinions that are not his own has his counterpart in the author who deliberately panders to a vulgar popular taste. 'There are some pursuits,' says Mr. Holt, 'in which it is almost as dangerous to make money the main end, as in the general conduct of life it is to make personal happiness the main end; and the higher the pursuit, the greater the danger.' It is one thing to earn a decent living by honorable means; it is quite another to gain a fortune by the abandonment of ideals and the degradation of activities to a lowered level of purpose."

IT is due to the memory of a revered author and to his children, as well as to his publishers and to the trade, that the facts as to Longfellow's "Tales of a Wayside Inn" should be stated, in correction of any misleading impressions caused by an advertisement, in a recent number of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, of an unauthorized edition of that work. "Tales of a Wayside Inn," in its original form, as published November 25, 1863, forty-two years ago, covered only the first of the three parts later comprehended in that title. The second part was published as "The Second Day," in 1872, and the third part was included in the volume entitled "Aftermath," published in 1873. Subsequently the three parts were brought together in a complete work, as given in final form with a history of the book, in pages 204-286 of the Cambridge edition, as well as in the other authorized editions of Longfellow's works, issued by Houghton, Mifflin & Company. In view of the statement that no cheap edition of the work has been issued, attention should be called to the fact that not only is it included in the remarkable Cambridge edition of Houghton, Mifflin & Company, which, at $2 retail, is an exceptional example of large value for little money, but there is a separate edition at $1 retail, an edition in the Riverside School Library at 60 cents, and the three several parts are issued in the Riverside Literature Series at 15 cents each, or for the three bound together in cloth, at 50 cents. The authorized publishers also invite comparison of the text as given in the reprint with the revised text as given in the authorized editions. Of course, when a work is out of copyright it is scarcely practicable to make criticism of a reprint; but such reprint should be frankly what it really is, and should not by statement or implication mislead the trade or the public.

As an instance of the absurdity of government red-tape which the President is seeking, through the Keep commission, to correct, may be cited a bill for a subscription to THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY for the Naval War College at Newport, in connection with which it is necessary to keep in touch with new publications within its field. To pay this trifling amount, four papers are necessary, bearing ten autograph signatures and still other stamped signatures. These are: (1) the original bill, on which is stamped the certificate, signed in autograph by the pay director, that the purchase has been made "after public competition"—which is, of course, a farce in the case of one-price periodicals; (2) the "open-contract requisition," which bears the autograph signature of the paymaster general, the signature by deputy of the chief of the Bureau of Navigation, the autograph signature of Captain Sperry, President of the War College, after initialling by a clerk, and apparently the actual autograph signature of the Secretary of the Navy himself, after initialling by a clerk; and (3-4) the "open-contract voucher" in duplicate, one copy signed in autograph by the Paymaster-General and by Captain Sperry and by the general storekeeper at the War College, the other, the stamped signature of the Paymaster-General and signatures by clerks for Captain Sperry and the general storekeeper—both these last papers requiring duplicate signature by the payee to a receipt in full before the money can be drawn from the department. A good many hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of time and a considerable store of energy on the part of higher officials whose time-value cannot be estimated in money are thus wasted. Such an array of signatures usually means, moreover, that the responsibility is so divided that no one is really responsible. An ordinary business corporation would content itself with a single voucher, certifying that the goods are received, that the prices are correct, and that the bill is approved by the proper auditing officer—anything more being a superfluity. It is to be hoped that the new commission will succeed in removing this wasteful absurdity of method, which is to be found more or less throughout the departments.

THE COPYRIGHT CONFERENCE.

HERBERT PUTNAM, Librarian of Congress, has printed in the Independent a statement as to the recent Copyright Conference, in which, after describing the general plan of the conference and giving the names of the organizations represented and their delegates, already printed in THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, he makes the following observations:

. . . No such congeries of interest, of opinion and of judgment have ever been secured to consider a copyright law for the United States. But they were additionally remarkable for the character of the proceedings themselves. During three days in June last and four days in November the delegates sat practically without interruption, submitting their suggestions and discussing proposed provisions. With the stenographic record of the first session in June and other accumulated data, including additional suggestions in writing from the same sources, various particular suggestions from other sources, its knowledge of existing legislation abroad, and the experience accumulated in its administration of the present laws, the Copyright Office drafted a statement for consideration at the second session of the conference held in November. For convenience in discussion it took the form of a bill, which included no less than 15,000 words. During the four days of the second session this was gone over section by section. A new draft is now being drawn which will in turn be submitted for criticism and suggestion and final discussion at a third session, to be held in Washington after the opening of Congress.

The limitations, as well as the opportunities of the conference, were indicated in the opening remarks of the chairman, (the Librarian of Congress,) at the first session:

"The origin, the occasion, and the purpose of this conference are indicated in the call. The origin is a general agreement that our present copyright laws are defective in definition and imperfect, and perhaps inconsistent in expression. The occasion is an intimation from the Senate Committee on Patents that at the coming session of Congress the committee proposes to submit a bill for a codification of these laws. Such a bill would naturally be drafted in the Copyright Office. If so, it would be the desire of the Copyright Office to have upon it the criticism of the various interests concerned with copyright protection. But the Office sees in it also an opportunity to submit to Congress in a systematic and orderly way various suggestions for the perfection of the laws where it is claimed they are now unjust or defective, and this conference is to give expression to these suggestions. Such of them as survive discussion will be noted for the attention of Congress in connection with such a codification. We invite them. We shall try to secure fair consideration for any of them that seem obviously just or to be supported by a considerable opinion. But we would not have our abilities in the matter nor the abilities of this conference overestimated. The conference, of course, is not a commission appointed by Congress to revise or even to codify the law. It is not in a formal way appointed by Congress at all. It has been invited by the Copyright Office, at the suggestion, to be sure, of the chairman of the Senate Committee on Patents, but without any express direction or mandate of law. It will, of course, be advisory to the Office, and through the Office it may reach Congress with recommendations, but, of course, its expressions can be no more than recommendations, and the recommendations to be effective ought, of course, to be kept within reasonable limits likely to be adopted. The District Attorney of New York has remarked that our statutory laws ought to be in two parts—the first of laws to be followed and the second of "moral yearnings." In our proposals for copyright we had better, I think, leave the moral yearnings to a later generation, or at least a later session of Congress. The conference is composed of organizations concerned with copyright protection, but it is composed of typical organizations only—important ones, but typical ones only. It cannot claim, therefore, to be completely representative of the community. It has not been composed with reference to balancing interests possibly conflicting. A majority vote of its members would not determine a proposal to be just nor would a unanimous vote determine it to be expedient. In fact, any mere vote of the conference would have small significance. Now, these are serious limitations. We think they ought to be clearly before you at the outset, but we do not believe that they should prevent a work here of high service and of profit, and a work of which there is urgent need, and we cannot but believe that unanimity of opinion in a body such as this, so nearly representative and including interests so important, must have great weight with Congress."

The "decisions" of the conference, (i.e., the proposals which appeared to be sustained by the predominant judgment of the representatives, including the Copyright Office itself and its legal advisers,) will take the form of a bill to be presented to Congress. Pending the final draft of that bill, the publication even of the provisions which seem now to be settled would be premature. Certain of the subject matter which has been discussed at the conference has, however, properly enough, been commented upon in journals representing certain of the interests participating, and may without impropriety be indicated here.

One question of general concern was that of the duration of the copyright. The present law, providing for a minimum term with a renewal in case the author or his wife or children be living at its expiration, is admittedly inconvenient in its operation, and imperfect in the benefit which it proposes. The author will probably desire to sell and assign his right. The condition that he or his wife or children must be living at the expiration of the original term raises an uncertainty as to whether he will have a renewal term to dispose of; and thus limits the price which he can secure in a sale of it. Opinion is all in favor of a single term as against one with provision for renewal.

Omitting the provision for renewal, the question still remains as to length of term. There is still, of course, contention for a perpetual term, and those who urge it can point to several countries which recognize it. No proposal, however, for perpetual term came before the conference. In this country it would require not merely an act of Congress but an amendment of the Constitution of the United States; for this provides only for the grant of copyright monopoly during limited periods. There is, however, a widespread feeling that a term which will leave the author without benefit in his old age of work produced and published in his earlier years, or even after his death deprives his minor children of this benefit, is not just and cannot be wholly fair, nor, indeed, within the spirit of our laws. It is certainly inconsistent with the policy of various foreign countries deemed most enlightened. No less than fifteen of these continue the protection through the author's life, and for a period of fifty years after his death.

A characteristic of the United States statutes as against those of foreign countries has been their insistence upon certain formalities as a prerequisite to copyright. In so far as these consist in the registration itself and due notice, they are fundamental to the policy of our laws; but they have gone further than this and made the deposit itself of the two copies of the publication, which inure to the benefit of the Library of Congress, a condition without which the other proceedings will be ineffective; and they have further provided that unless the deposit be made on or before the date of publication, the other proceedings will be void. For failure to perform an act which is not an essential part of the registration itself, they have thus imposed a penalty which is the entire loss of the copyright; and this penalty of forfeiture becomes absolute if the date of publication has passed, for there is no means by which the omission may be made good. A modification of this harsh condition is therefore sought.

The remedies secured to the copyright proprietor in case of infringement seem to require to be enlarged, strengthened and made more clear; and the penalties upon the infringer to require more adjustment. The principle of penalties as against damages has required serious consideration; particularly that involved in a division of the penalty between the State and the copyright proprietor, as is now, in certain cases, provided by law. The general principle of our common law is that in any actions alleging trespass upon such a property right, the damages recovered shall depend upon the injury suffered by the complainant, together with consideration of the profit which has accrued to the trespasser. It is, on the other hand, asserted that there are cases of infringement of a copyright where neither the injury to the proprietor nor the profit to the infringer can be definitely proved in dollars and cents, Whether in this case it be proper for the law to provide a fixed penalty which, as liquidated damages, should go to the copyright proprietor, or a penalty which as a criminal penalty should go solely to the state, is under discussion.

The proof of the infringement itself should, it is claimed, be simplified, and the existing provision which in some cases limits all recovery to a certain sum for every copy of the article "found" in the possession of the infringer is asserted to be insufficient, seeing that it is the copies sold by him and already distributed which have constituted the substantial injury.

Certain subject matter clearly within the intent of the law appears to need additional specification. It is in part the result of modern reproductive processes, which could not be foreseen by the original framers or in connection with the earlier statutes. The dramatization of novels, the novelization of dramas, the inclusion among "authors" of the projectors of collective and encyclopedia works have each required further expression. The fine arts in particular have felt grievances under the existing law. On the other hand, the administrators of the present law have been perplexed to determine as between the Copyright Office and the Patent Office at what point an artistic creation, for instance an artistic design, was an appropriate subject for copyright rather than for patent right. This perplexity arises particularly where the design is applied to certain material and the protection sought is in effect for the resulting product. The design may retain all its artistic qualities; but the resulting product may be a utensil, and the protection sought be really for the design as thus applied, and not for it as a "work of the fine arts." It is the belief of the Commissioner of Patents that such cases should form a group by themselves, to be protected as "design patents." This would cause their registration in the Patent Office, but, he would recommend, under a modification of the conditions and fees exacted in the case of ordinary inventions. Underlying all consideration of subject matter is the suggestion of a subsidiary as against an original creation, the latter being of course the source, but the former introducing new species, each of which may be entitled to recognition and specific protection; and the right of the original creator, whether author or artist on the one hand, and of the reproducer who does not desire to *mis*appropriate but has a right to know what he may lawfully appropriate, require to be fairly adjusted. The reproducers would claim that the notice of a reservation should be adequate, and on the other hand the artist and the playwright claim that mere exhibition or performance, as the case may be, should not of itself be held to presume a dedication to the public.

"Presumptions" indeed were touched in the discussion at several points; particularly in connection with a group of suggestions defining the right of author and publisher respectively in the absence of specific contracts. The purpose of the suggestions was to safeguard authors who through ignorance or inadvertence had failed to define specifically the property privileges which they ceded, or to provide for reservations to themselves which they might reasonably have secured. It was, however, the clear opinion, and of legal counsel the emphatic one, that the copyright law should abstain from matters which may be regulated and customarily are regulated by private contract.

The administration of the copyright office itself requires additional specification, which also has to be considered in the draft. The prodigious accumulation of copyright deposits beyond the needs or the interest of the Library of Congress as a library or the ability of the building as a storehouse requires some provision for elimination that will yet take due account of the requirements of the law of evidence in case of copyright litigation. There are now in the cellars of the library building some 1,400,000 articles received from copyright but not drawn up into the library proper because not necessary to its immediate purposes as a library. Much of this material is worthless. Some specific provision for eliminating this fraction is an urgent necessity.

Such are some of the questions that have come to this conference. They are noted as indicating the practical nature of its deliberations. That absolute agreements should be reached upon all of them was not to be expected. The promise, however, for a copyright law which shall be a great improvement upon the existing law lies in part in the scope and character of the representation, to which I have already adverted, and also in the general spirit of co-operation and of fairness which prevailed at the sessions, and which led an observer* to remark at the close of the first one:

"Results of surprising unanimity were reached in a minimum of time and without waste of talk. . . . It was the unanimous feeling that unhoped for progress toward an excellent, if not ideal, copyright code had been made possible, and that the results would probably be quicker and better than if the plan of a (copyright) commission had been adopted."

SHAKESPEARE'S PORTRAIT.

BERTRAM DOBELL writes to Notes and Queries that he has in his possession a booklet of sixty-seven pages, entitled "Original Prologues, Epilogues and Other Pieces Never Before Printed. . . . London, . . . 1756," containing a number of poems in praise of Shakespeare. At the end of a poem, "On Shakespeare's Monument," is the following note: "There is no genuine picture of Shakespeare. That called his was taken long after his death from a person supposed extremely like him, at the direction of Sir Thomas Clarges."

Mr. Dobell does not think that any of the editors or biographers of the dramatist have taken notice of the above statement. He supposes that the writer meant a painted portrait, and suggests that the matter be looked into.

"THE COMMERCIALIZATION OF LITERATURE"

ABOUT a year ago we printed in these columns extracts from the anonymous "confessions of a publisher," then attracting considerable attention in the Boston Transcript. The recent publication of these letters in book form under the title "A Publisher's Confession" has called forth a further discussion of some of the problems of modern publishing in an article entitled "The Commercialization of Literature," contributed to the current Atlantic Monthly by Mr. Henry Holt. The writer of this article, while viewing the present publishing situation mainly in the same light as the author of the "Confession," believes the latter does not recognize the full gravity of the case, namely, an abnormal status in publishing, produced largely by the coincidence of certain exceptional conditions, such as the chaos of the transition from the old non-copyright license to the new copyright law of 1891, the spread of the advertising mania, and the rocket-like rise of the literary agent.

The article opens with a discussion of the fitness of styling the publisher's vocation a "profession," as the author of the "Confession" did throughout. "A profession," says Mr. Holt, "is generally understood to be conducted only by men whose qualifications have been approved by a body of experts; but anybody who has enough cash or credit to start the business can be a publisher. . . . The services of professional men are paid for by their clients. But publishers (the best of them) generally pay their clients. . . . Men in a profession consider it anything but professional to advertise, but publishers advertise. . . . Men in a profession consider it unprofessional openly to seek clients, and . . . disgraceful to seek each other's clients; but publishers are more and more being drawn into these habits. Yet there certainly are features of publishing which rise to a professional dignity. . . . Our author justly says . . . 'the publisher . . . is the personal friend and sympathetic adviser of authors . . . a publisher who is worthy of his calling regards himself as an educator of the public . . . no publishing house can win and keep a place on the highest level that does not have at least one man who possesses this true publishing personality.'" A few publishers, Mr. Holt says, often give their effort and money to the exploitation of what they believe good, even without expectation of any adequate direct return. There are also other functions of the publishers which are certainly professional.

Following the order of the "Confession," Mr. Holt discusses, first, the relations of author and publisher, second, the relations of publishers with each other, and third, the relation of the publisher to his market, giving the most of his consideration to the first and third topics.

He quotes with approbation the description in the "Confession" of the ideal relations between author and publisher, indicated above, and says: "There are a good many ways of selling books. The best way is to make books that sell; and, given an author of capacity, his chance of doing that thing is vastly increased by conference with a publisher of capacity and keeping his books together in the hands of such a publisher." These ideas are further brought out by extracts from a recent actual correspondence between a publisher (presumably himself) and a young author.

The possibility of such a mutually beneficial relation, however, has been almost destroyed, Mr. Holt declares, by the rise, within the past twenty years, first in England and then in America, of the "literary agent," whose ideal it is "that an author shall never see a publisher and that an author's books shall be scattered among those who will bid highest." The literary agent has his uses, to be sure—he may be of great help to an inexperienced author by finding him a publisher, and he may usefully serve an established author by arranging for foreign publication when his works are sufficiently popular. But the literary agent, in London at least, early overstepped his legitimate functions; he introduced so-called "business methods" into the relations between author and publisher, and authors who had before been attached to their respective publishers were put up to the highest bidder. Many a "publisher" without any of the qualities essential to a publisher's best functions would bid higher than the publisher who had most of these qualities. Young houses felt that they could gain standing by getting authors of standing; old houses would often "see" the bids, even at a loss, rather than let their authors go. Royalties and advance payments rose wildly. The fame of the agents soon "raised the mirage of a new Eldorado" among authors, who flocked confidently to the agents for protection. For the author, even if he be one whose aim is to produce literature rather than to make money, often regards the publisher with the feeling of the poor toward the rich; many feel that the publisher is to be squeezed to the last cent and the agents have not hesitated to encourage this feeling. "Between them," says the writer, "the publisher has lately been treated merely as a corpus vilum to be exploited for money . . . and in many cases the treatment has been richly deserved. Many of them have been tempted into the mean and short-sighted competitions that inevitably recoil; many of them have danced to any tune the agents saw fit to play. . . . So far as I know, but one prominent publisher in England and perhaps two or three in America have kept out of the scramble. . . . How much the recent astounding failures in the American trade were due to the literary agent's and the British branch houses' introduction of British advances and royalties into American conditions, is open to question. They certainly helped on the failures somewhat. There have been three serious failures in the English trade since the agent appeared. . . ."

The result of this literary "boom" was a chaos of advanced bidding for unwritten books. "Popular authors were sold three or four unwritten books deep." Nobody knew just what he was buying or selling, for successful authors never before wrote so many unsuccessful books. In addition to the effect on the author's literary production, the system deprived him of the benefits of the publisher's practical criticism and business enthusiasm. The publisher, in order to give his best advice "must have his heart in the work and must know not only the book, but his man, and be in sympathy with him. This is not an affair of hours or days but of a long intimacy . . . such a relation as this, once started, has no place for the literary agent. . . . There may be . . . a justification for a person so unbusinesslike as the author generally is, supplementing himself with a business adviser to look over contracts and royalties—a sort of 'auditor,' in fact. I don't see how any publisher could reasonably object to his closest client having an agent to go that far—if he would stop there. But . . . in carrying his functions farther the agent has been the parent of most serious abuses. . . .

To illustrate these statements, Mr. Holt tells in delightful parable style the presumably true story of a series of strange transactions between a woman author, two literary agents, and various publishers, in the course of which the author, at first very loyal to her original publisher, was led by the agents to sell her later books "at auction," and the original publisher was confronted with the dilemma of bidding or else throwing away her two later books. He chose the latter course, saying to the agent: "If I can't make a living in this trade without doing that sort of thing I'll go into some trade that's at least honest enough to profess to be what it is. I'd respect myself more if I kept a professed gambling house at once than such a publishing house." In this case, the testimony of author, agents and competing publishers was utterly irreconcilable. "The fact that each party to the muddle tried to put the responsibility on the others shows what they all really think of it." But not all of the blame for this sort of thing belongs to the literary agents, Mr. Holt says. "A pursuit that requires no qualifications for admission cannot always be kept up to professional standards; if a business open to everybody is to have a professional character it requires from such of its members as are capable of appreciating professional standards all the more rigorous . . . observance of them. . . . There never has been as little of that observance among the recognized members of the trade as there is to-day."

Passing to the second part of his discussion, Mr. Holt declares it to be paradoxically true that never were the relations of American publishers to each other so near the professional ideal as just before the passage of the international copyright law of 1891. At first American publishing consisted principally in reprinting such British works as could be had and "it gradually became the custom to leave the first publisher of an English reprint undisturbed, and to respect arrangements with British authors, and then to leave an author's later books to the publisher who had introduced him. This practice extended to relations with American authors, and from about 1870 to 1890 no American publisher among the first dozen, would be more apt to think of approaching an author identified with another publisher than men in other professions would think of approaching each other's clients." The class of "pirates" which arose and defied this custom was pretty generally cleaned out by the international copyright law, but they were succeeded by a class of publishers "who as soon as another's risk on a new author is justified, exert every means, from the dinner-table to the auction block, to get hold of the author. . . . While the pirates, against whom the international copyright law was leveled, were unknown in the society of gentlemen, these successors belong to the 'profession' and the best clubs." This kind of competition, Mr. Holt thinks, must in time destroy itself, because it is suicidal to publishers and harmful to authors. "It's a hard question, this of reconciling the author's right to the benefits of competition with the maintenance of anything like a professional courtesy between publishers."

The discussion of the third topic, the relation of the publisher to his market, turns chiefly upon the present problem of advertising. Mr. Holt agrees with the author of the "Confession" that books fall into three classes: the first do not need advertising; the second cannot be helped by it; the third can be helped by it. Money is wasted if spent in advertising books of the first two classes, and can be profitably spent only on the third class. Yet there is no telling in advance to which class a book by a new and doubtful author will belong: experiments must be tried, and the loss on them faced. There is a strong chance against any one such book responding; "if it appears to respond, there is a strong chance that it's only the book's native strength asserting itself, and that it belongs in class one and does not need much advertising after all. . . . The sales of books that do not need much advertising constitute the bulk of the miscellaneous publishing business, and nearly all of the business done at a profit; while books that will not return dollar for dollar for advertising make up the bulk of the remainder. If this is true my class three, that will return a profit on advertising, cannot be a very large class. The advertiser's art, then, is in recognizing this minor class, but generally he employs that art so little that his greatest expense is wasted on the other classes." On a book by an unknown or doubtful author, "and the vast majority are by such," Mr. Holt thinks little if any money should be expended in advertising before the reviews come out. "If there is not enough favorable reviewing to quote, advertising money would better be saved and the book let go to its predestined death." "But when there is something to go on, either from an author's reputation or from notices, what is a reasonable amount to start the advertisng with?" In answer to this question Mr. Holt indulges in some conservative calculations, as a result of which he concludes that the estimate of $30,000 to $50,000 a year for the advertising "even of a small publishing house," made by the author of "Confession," is unwarranted, or else a house advertising to that extent must fail. This estimate may have included "house organs," circulars, postage, drummers, etc.; but he feels certain that the leading houses of New York do not spend over $25,000 a year on newspaper and periodical advertising.

The recent advertising mania came about, he asserts, from the "booming" methods of a bookseller-publisher some years ago, who is reported to have said that he set apart $50,000 for advertising each book, in successive instalments of $4000! Whether these figures are correct or not, the "booming" methods attracted attention and made imitators, "and while they were making so much noise, nobody else could be heard without making a good deal of noise, too; so publishers generally began increasing their advertising." Competition spread the rage; there were advertising duels in The Times and other papers. The authors, too, went wild, and some wanted more money spent in advertising their books than the entire profits came to. The authors, and in some cases the publishers, had not figured on the situation. "Much observation and not a few figures satisfy me," Mr. Holt says, "that even in a conservative house from three-quarters of the new books more money goes to the advertising mediums, and even to the much-pitied author, than to the publisher, and that from one book out of five money goes to them and merely goes away from him."

The fact is, he declares, books cannot be advertised as widely as other commodities, because the field of book-buyers is limited, while foodstuffs, clothes, etc., are used by everyone. Moreover, books are relatively short-lived. "It takes longer that most books live to advertise into a paying reputation even a shoe or a soap, or any other thing which everybody wants." Again, the competition between individual books is relatively small; intelligent buyers want not a certain kind of book but a certain definite book. Some buyers depend largely on the advice of booksellers, who are comparatively little influenced by advertising; in fact, an advertisement in big type nowadays will arouse the skepticism of the booksellers. As to this style of advertising, Mr. Holt asks, "Is it too much to say that the vulgarest things are most widely advertised, and that wide advertising, while it has its justifications, inevitably has, unless it conveys knowledge that people actually want, a note of vulgarity? Is there anything more alien to its coarser features than books? And yet, of late years, the broadside page, the loudest type, the showiest pictures, the street-car sign, even the circus form of poster, have been dragged into the advertising of books, till now it has got to the point where many discriminating people discriminate against books much advertised." The author of the "Confession" declared that the old practice of inserting a simple announcement of a new book in a literary journal is no longer followed, because such an advertisement is seen by only a very few thousand persons, and those of the literary class, with regard to whom advertising is unnecessary; Mr. Holt, however, believes these are the very persons to whom books can be profitably advertised; they are the persons who recommend a book to friends and really seal its fate before the general public knows what to buy. "No advertising materially influences this general verdict." The advertising mania in publishing is an illogical imitation of the methods in other trades.

In conclusion he quotes the words of the author of the "Confession": "Authorship and publishing . . . has for the moment a decided commercial squint [but] it would be wrong to say . . . that it has been degraded," and declares that this is altogether too mild a view of the case. "My opinion is," he says, "that the remarkable concurrence of the many exceptional conditions I have described—the piracy under the old non-copyright license, the chaos of the transition . . . to the new law, the advertising mania, the mad competition stimulated by the literary agent—have produced a strange and abnormal condition in publishing, and that this condition is destructive and cannot last. It has already wrought great ruin, and how much more ruin it must work before a healthy condition can arise, and how that ruin can be minimized, is matter for anxious consideration. One class of remedies is clear, if the trade has character enough to apply them—more subordination of the present to the future, more avoidance of petty games that two can play at, more faith in the business value of the golden rule, more feeling for the higher possibilities of their 'profession,' and more plain, homely, commonplace self-respect. The publishers probably have their human share of the needed virtues, but they have been strangely and sorely tried. . . ."

BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARIES.

THE following communication from R. G. Thwaites to the Library Journal, for November, tells its own story:

"Librarians should be warned that the two following reference publications are identical save for a fresh introduction and the occasional cutting of the 'Lamb' plates in order to introduce here and there a few additional and usually unimportant biographical sketches, thus making it quite undesirable to purchase both sets:

LAMB'S BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY OF THE UNITED STATES, edited by John Howard Brown. Boston, James H. Lamb Co., 372 Boylston St., 1900; 7 vols.

THE TWENTIETH CENTURY BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY of notable Americans. Brief Biographies of authors, administrators, clergymen, commanders, editors, engineers, jurists, merchants, officials, philanthropists, scientists, statesmen, and others who are making American history. Editor-in-chief, Rossiter Johnson, Ph.D., LL.D.; managing editor, John Howard Brown. Boston: The Biographical Society, 1904; 10 vols.

"It is unnecessary to comment on a performance of this sort—wherein, without essential change of text, the title-page, the introduction, the names of the editors, the number of volumes, and the name of the publishers are all changed, with the effect of leading library order departments astray. There is no hint in Rossiter Johnson's introduction to 'Notable Americans' connecting his work with the previous publication of Lamb."

UNDERSTAMPED AMERICAN MAIL.

FREQUENT complaints are heard from English correspondents regarding understamped mail from America. The annoyance and loss from this practice is so great that Mr. Sidney Appleton, now resident in London, has been impelled to address a letter on the subject to the New York Sun.

"With every mail," writes Mr. Appleton, "come large numbers of letters insufficiently stamped, on which the receiver is charged postage at double rates.

"This would seem a small matter in itself were it not for the large percentage of these insufficiently stamped letters, as much as $15 to $20 being collected on a morning delivery in this street of offices alone, not longer than one block in Fifth Avenue. What must the total be throughout the city?

"In many cases the surcharge is due to unsealed third class matter becoming sealed in transit through moisture, etc., but this could be avoided by a little care on the part of the sender.

"This tax on our American mail is not only annoying, but is the cause of much delay and inconvenience, as these underpaid letters are detained by the authorities and sent out with later deliveries. So great a nuisance has it become that many business houses refuse to accept the underpaid correspondence, and there is a consequent loss of business to both parties.

'The michievous consequences are so obvious that I feel no apology is needed for troubling you on what at first glance seems so trivial a matter."

A little more care in this matter seems desirable on both sides of the Atlantic, because it not unfrequently happens that third-class circulars from English correspondents are also sealed in transit and become subject to postage at double rates, much to the annoyance of their recipients. Such matter should be enclosed in ungummed envelopes, or, better still, in ordinary wrappers.

MARK TWAIN AT "THREE SCORE YEARS AND TEN."

MARK TWAIN, (Samuel Langhorne Clemens,) on November 30 celebrated his seventieth birthday, having been born on that day in 1835, in Florida, Mo. Mr. Clemens at the age of thirteen was apprenticed to a printer, and for some time worked at "the case," travelling from town to town till he reached New York. From there he went to New Orleans and became pilot on one of the Mississippi steamboats. In 1867 he went to Nevada as private secretary to his brother, who had been made Secretary of the Territory. He engaged in mining in Nevada, and in 1862 he became editor of the Virginia City Enterprise. In 1865 he went to San Francisco, where he was engaged as a reporter on the Morning Call. After experimenting again in gold mining he resumed his work for the California press, and in 1866 visited Hawaii as newspaper correspondent.

After his return from Hawaii Mr. Clemens delivered humorous lectures in California and Nevada, and then came East, where in 1867 he published the "Jumping Frog." In the same year he went with a party of tourists to the Holy Land, publishing on his return "The Innocents Abroad," (Hartford, 1869,) of which 125,000 copies were sold in three years. For a time he edited the Buffalo (N. Y.) Express, and after his marriage, in 1870, settled in Hartford, Conn. Since then he has travelled and lectured extensively, his great tour de force being a lecture tour around the world to secure money enough to pay in full the creditors of the firm of C. L. Webster & Co., in which he was a silent partner.

Few humorists in the range of literature have drawn more closely to the popular heart or have played more subtly and powerfully upon the sense of the ludicrous inherent in human nature than has Mark Twain. Yet the finer emotions of pathos and sympathy are no less awakened by the magic influence at Mr. Clemens's command. There is inwrought in his most convulsing extravaganzas always a touch of intensely human experience, to which the most indifferent sensibilities are compelled to respond, and, while scorning to point a moral in the conventional manner, Mark Twain unconsciously reaches the depths of life and character in his philosophy of laughter and the evident feeling he betrays. May he live many years longer to fill the world with laughter and to remind it of its responsibilities, is the sincere wish of his many admirers.

Colonel Harvey, on the 5th inst., will give a dinner to the septuagenarian, at Delmonico's, in New York City. Upwards of one hundred and fifty prominent literary men and the editorial staff of Harper's have signified their intention to be present.

THE CENTENARY OF STEREOTYPING IN ENGLAND.

The Periodical, published by the Oxford University Press, in its October issue, notes that one hundred years ago, in October, Charles Earl Stanhope offered to the Delegates of the Oxford University Press some of his inventions, one being the so-called "secret process" of stereotyping. The University paid £4000 to Lord Stanhope's agent, Andrew Wilson, for the stereotyping rights.

Stereotype printing of a kind had really been invented before this period by several persons, and in several places. For instance, the Dutch claim the credit earlier than 1698. Firmin-Didot second son of François Ambrose, the elder son of François Didot, who founded the house in 1713, invented or revived a process of stereotyping coined its name, and first made use of it in his edition of Callet's "Tables of Logarithms," in 1795. William Ged, a Scotsman, in 1725, developed a form of stereotyping, and some years later entered into a partnership with a London capitalist expecting to employ it on a great scale. The partnership, however, turned out very unsatisfactorily, and the only practical result was the stereotyping of two prayer books for the University of Cambridge and an edition of Sallust.

Lord Stanhope and the Delegates of the Oxford University Press hoped for great things from their "secret process;" but its importance, to the Delegates at least, was overrated, and they considered that they had paid for it more than it was worth. There is some evidence that at one time they partly abandoned it. Instead of lessening the cost of production of Bibles, it naturally at first increased the cost, because it added to the work one process more. The gypsum or plaster mould was eventually succeeded by papier-maché; and only with this last, and consequent on the development of the newspaper press, did the success of the process become assured.

The papier-maché process was the invention of an Italian who in 1854 claimed the large reward offered by the London Times to any one who should invent a quick mode of stereotyping suitable to the wants of a newspaper.

Electrotyping, which did not come into general use until a decade later, was the direct outcome of a number of practical experiments made by Thomas Spencer, of Liverpool, and described by him, in 1839, in a paper read before the Liverpool Polytechnic Society. It is but just to say, however, that at least three others made discoveries and experiments along the identical lines contemporary with Spencer.

OBITUARY NOTES.

William Hutt, the English bookseller, who will be remembered by many of the trade who visit London from year to year, died in London on November 9, aged forty-seven. William Hutt, with his brother, Charles, began business about twenty years ago, in an old house in Clement's Inn Passage, and built up an excellent connection with the trade and collectors in America and England. After a time the brothers parted, and William Hutt took the shop adjoining. Mr. Hutt had a remarkable knowledge of modern early editions and of books on Alpine subjects. Latterly he had been in the employ of Charles Jackson, of Charing Cross Road, who is getting up a subscription for the widow, left entirely destitute.

Alfred Rambaud, who died in Paris on November 10, in the sixty-third year of his age, was a member of the Institute and Ministre de l'Instruction Publique in the Jules Ferry Cabinet, 1879-80, and again in the Méline Cabinet, 1896-8. He succeeded the Duc d'Aumale at the Académie des Sciences Morales et Politiques in 1897. He was a prolific author, and was one of the first French writers to introduce Russian literature to the notice of his compatriots. His "Historie de la Russie" is one of the best books of its kind in France. He also wrote popular histories of French colonial expansion and of "Civilization Française," and in collaboration with M. Lavisse compiled a "Histoire Générale de l'Europe." His last work was a "Histoire de Jules Ferry." He was for several years editor of Revue Bleue.

Nahum Meyer Schaikewitz, a Yiddish novelist and playwright, who was best known by his pen name, "Shomer," and who has been called the Dumas of Yiddish literature, died November 25 in Beth Israel Hospital, New York City, after an illness of six months. Mr. Schaikewitz was born in Nesvizh, Government of Minsk, Russia, in December, 1849. He wrote more than 300 novels and thirty plays. When he began writing in Yiddish it was dawn of a new era in Russia when the "Culture" movement invaded the ghettos of that country. His first efforts met with strong opposition from the fanatical element of the Jews, who were strongly opposed to the new literature and modern ideas, and discouraged secular writing. However, his peculiar style was so strongly marked that he soon gained a strong hold on the public. His novels had a very large sale, and caused many divisions between the old and new generations of Jews. The spirit strongly marked in his novels was the longing for the restoration of Zion. He was unsparing in his criticism of his own people, and their faults were never glossed over by him. After the Jewish theatres were closed by the Russian Government Mr. Schaikewitz came to New York in 1888, where he edited the Friend of the People and the Jewish Puck, two Yiddish weeklies. Later he contributed serial stories to various Yiddish newspapers and magazines.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

"The Call of the Blood" is the title of the new novel by Robert Hichens. Sicily is the scene of the story, which will not appear until late next year.

A cable despatch from Christiania reports that Henryk Ibsen lies in a state of unconsciousness from which it is not expected that he will recover.

The second part of Thomas Hardy's extraordinary Napoleonic drama, "The Dynasts," is nearly ready. It contains six acts and forty-three scenes, making with the first part twelve acts and eighty scenes. The concluding part will contain seven acts and fifty scenes. The present installment breaks off at a birthday fête of the Prince Regent in Carlton House.

Professor Wilhelm Ostwald, the prominent German physicist of the University of Leipzig, who is "exchanging" with Professor Peabody, of Harvard, will deliver this year's Ingersoll lecture at Harvard University on Tuesday, December 12. His subject is "Individuality and Immortality," and his lecture will be published in the early spring by Houghton, Mifflin & Co.

It develops that G. B. Lancaster, whose remarkably virile stories of New Zealand sheepherders just published in "Sons o' Men" caused the author's name to be linked with Kipling, is a woman. Ever since the first appearance of some of the stories in magazine form the identity of the author has been shrouded in mystery. It was the general belief that they were written by a man, because they showed a real masculine strength and vigor.

The news that Dillon Wallace has succeeded in his effort to cross the Labrador wild and, for a good part, if not the worst part, of the way without a native guide and has now been heard from at Ungava Bay, closely follows the receipt of a letter from him written to his publishers, the Fleming H. Revell Company, on the shores of Lake Michikamau, "for a sight of which poor Hubbard lost his life." The story which he has to tell of his adventures will be supplemented by the account of his winter sledge journey to Quebec, on which he will start as soon as the shore ice is sufficiently well frozen. His companion, Mr. Easton, who stayed with him during the last half of his Labrador trip, will accompany him.

BISHOP HENRY CODMAN POTTER has written a volume entitled "Episcopal Reminiscences," which will be published in the spring with the imprint of G. P. Putnam's Sons. This work chiefly concerns ten bishops of the Episcopal Church, with recollections of three English Archbishops. As Secretary of the House of Bishops and during his long episcopate, Bishop Potter has been the associate and friend of a group of singularly interesting men. In his own easy and graceful manner he has recorded illuminating anecdotes and experiences connected with famous bishops. These reminiscences are very human and personal and reveal the men themselves under their vestments. Bishop Potter has done more than write a charming book; he has performed a genuine service in preserving these intimate memories of distinguished prelates, and some of the memoirs which his readers will find most precious concern himself.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, contrary to the prevailing opinion that his youth was spent in poverty and that he starved in his salad days, comes of an old and fairly prosperous Irish family. His paternal grandfather, Bernard Shaw, was high sheriff of County Kilkenny, and his father, though no millionaire, had sufficient income to satisfy the average man. The present head of the family is Major Sir Frederick Shaw, Bart., D. S. O., of Bushey Park, Dublin. George Bernard Shaw went to London with his mother and sister—the latter was a professional singer—in 1876. At that time the future dramatist was twenty years old. Ten years later he was already a familiar character about town, and in ten years more he was famous. In 1898 he inherited the estate of his maternal grandfather, Walter Bagnall Gurley, a fox-hunting Irish squire of the old school. The same year he was married to Miss Charlotte Frances Payne-Townshend.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

THE publication of The Library has been taken over by the De La More Press. The editors hope in the future to make a strong point of illustrations, and the next number will contain a freely illustrated article on Sir Thomas Browne by Professor Osler, who has been for many years a collector of, and keen student of, Browne's works. There will also be an interesting symposium by Lord Avebury, Passmore Edwards, Sidney Lee and others on the proper scope of the public library.

The Gentleman's Magazine, after the December number, will cease to be published by Chatto & Windus, having been transferred to Messrs. Harmsworth, and will be published by them at the office of The Observer. No details are at present to hand concerning its development or other change, but it is to be hoped that a magazine with such a venerable history will retain its few surviving traditions. The Gentleman's Magazine was established by Edward Cave in 1729, and has survived almost all its competitors. Among its earliest editors was Dr. Samuel Johnson.

EM. TERQUEM, 19 Rue Scribe, Paris, calls attention to the Archives Diplomatiques, a monthly review of international law, diplomacy and history, the contributors to which are prominent historians, jurists and statesmen in every country. Among the American contributors are Alvey Adee, Assistant Secretary of State, and Professor John Bassett Moore, of Columbia University, and England is represented by Professor J. Holland, of Oxford. The third series begins with 1901, and contains original documents and texts relating to international law, diplomacy and the history of international relations in the twentieth century. M. Terquem will fill all orders from this country for the new series and those already published.

THE November number of the Burlington Magazine, published by Robert Grier Cooke, New York, contains an interesting account of the Bramantino portraits from San Martino di Guznago, twelve of which Sir C. Purdon Clarke has purchased for the Metropolitan Museum, also, a reproduction of the "St. Engracia," formerly in the Somzée collection, but now owned by Mrs. Gardner, of Boston. Under the department of art in America is an excellent account of the statue of Trebonianus Gallus, recently acquired by the Metropolitan Museum, illustrated by a full-page plate. The frontispiece is an exquisite reproduction, in photogravure, of the portrait of Mrs. Nisbett, by Sir Joshua Reynolds, in the Wallace collection.

THE Christmas number of the International Studio contains an interesting article on some new illustrations just made for Dickens's "Christmas Carol" by the young artist, George Alfred Williams. The reproductions include a full-page plate in color, showing Tiny Tim and his friends. Arthur Hoeber describes the recent International Exhibit at the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh, in which he finds a prevalence of dark pictures marked by an effort at simplicity. A newly-completed marble statue entitled "Endymion," by Mrs. Cadwalader Guild, is shown with some of her other work, including her new head of Lincoln. Drawings in lacquer by Zeshin, the Japanese artist, are reproduced in color and half-tone. Other full-page reproductions include water color drawings and oil paintings by W. Graham Robertson, a crayon sketch by Anton Mauve, a pastel sketch by Sir Peter Lely, an etching by M. A. J. Bauer, and an illumination by E. F. Beckett.

BUSINESS NOTES.

ANN ARBOR MICH.—The Martin Schaller's bookstore, it is reported, has been closed on a chattel mortgage ot $1000 held by George Affel, of Ann Arbor, and George Usius, of Detroit.

ASHEVILLE, N. C.—H. Taylor Rogers, the well-known bookseller here, has been appointed treasurer and manager of the Friends' Book Association at Fifteenth and Race Streets, Philadelphia. The association, as is well known, is conducted by the Friends, of which Mr. Rogers is a member. It manufactures blank books, does printing, lithographing and engraving and handles books and stationery. It is the oldest establishment of the kind in the country. Mr. Rogers will continue his store at Asheville, giving half his time and attention to it and the other half to the Friends' Book Association.

BOSTON, MASS.—Walter W. Donnelly, who was for twenty-four years with the old firm of Roberts Brothers, has taken over the old book and numismatic business of the late Fred S. Collins, who carried on this business at 20 Brattle Street for upwards of twenty years until his death in May, 1904.

CHARLESTON, ILL.—J. W. Wiley has sold his book and stationery store to Henry Hackett. Al. Rosebraugh has taken charge of the store for Mr. Hackett.

NEW YORK CITY.—The creditors of the Cambridge Society have appointed a committee to investigate the affairs of the company and to formulate a plan whereby the business can be preserved and conducted in the interest of the creditors. It appears that Walter Dunne, the manager of the Cambridge Society and also connected with the Vincent Parke Company, transferred his own and the properties of the above companies to the St. Dunstan Society, a New York corporation, receiving in exchange therefor the entire capital stock of the St. Dunstan Society. This stock Mr. Dunne has placed into the hands of a trustee, D. M. MacLellan, for the equal benefit of all his creditors, and with this trustee's consent the business is to be continued by the creditors' committee, consisting of George W. Sieber, representing the Werner Co., of Akron, O.; Charles N. Taintor, representing the Riverside Bank of New York; James Macdonald, the bookbinder of New York; Richard T. Stevens, representing the Japan Paper Co.; and H. M. Plimpton, representing the H. M. Plimpton Co., of Boston. The liabilities of the company are said to amount to $235,725, distributed among 168 creditors. The assets seems to be the stock of a number of high-priced subscription books.

NEW YORK CITY.—Charles T. Dillingham, who for some years, since his withdrawal from the jobbing business, has been engaged in handling expensive subscription editions for Hardy, Pratt & Co. and J. F. Taylor & Co., has opened an agency at 156 Fifth Avenue for the sale of the extensive line of fine subscription books published by Little, Brown & Co.

NEW YORK CITY.—The R. E. Gould Company has been incorporated to do a publishing and bookselling business, by Ruth E. Gould, Laura Skinner and William Barry.

NEW YORK CITY.—A final accounting of the affairs of the Twentieth Century Press was made at the referee's office, 63 Wall Street, by Magrane Cox, on November 29.

SALIDA. CAL.—Charles Crozer, bookseller, whose stock recently was seriously damaged by smoke and water from fire in an adjoining store, will reopen in his old stand as soon as matters can be adjusted.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

"OLD FRANCE IN THE NEW WORLD," by James Douglas, has met with wide public favor. A second edition will appear early in 1906.

INGALLS KIMBALL, of the Cheltenham Press, will publish shortly "Ad Matrem, and Other Poems," by the Rev. Percy Stickney Grant, of New York.

THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY have brought out a collection of Whitcomb Riley's favorite poems of gladness and content under the title of "Songs o' Cheer," with illustrations by Will Vawter.

THE BOBBS-MERRILL CO. call the attention of the trade to the fact that the retail price of "Tales from Dickens," by Hallie Erminie Rives, is $1.50 and not $1.25, as inadvertently stated in their advertising matter recently sent out.

HERBERT B. TURNER COMPANY, Boston, will publish at once a volume of verses entitled "Songs in a Sun Garden," by Coletta Ryan, who has been a contributor for some years to the magazines. The volume sings of the sunny side of life.

THE great Puritan library of some 7000 volumes left by Spurgeon is coming to this country, having been acquired for the William Jewell College of Liberty, Missouri. Nearly all the volumes relate more or less directly to Puritan theology.

JENNINGS & GRAHAM, Cincinnati, O., have just ready a new nature book by William A. Quayle, author of "In God's Out-of-Doors," entitled "The Prairie and the Sea," with numerous illustrations. The book is issued in a specially numbered and signed edition.

JAMES POTT & Co. have just brought out a work entitled "Russia Under the Great Shadow," by Luigi Villari, who gives his readers an interesting and temperate account of existing conditions in Russia, based on his recent visit to that country. The volume is adequately illustrated.

THE A. WESSELS COMPANY have arranged with Cassell & Co. to handle the American editions of Collier's "Art of Portrait Painting," a practical treatise for the student and professional painter, and Mrs. Henry Fawcett's "Five Famous French Women." Both of these books will be issued immediately.

VOLNEY STREAMER, for the past ten years literary adviser to Brentano's, on January 1 will become librarian to the Players' Club, New York. Mr. Streamer is the editor of "Voices of Doubt and Trust," "In Friendship's Name," and other well-known books. His familiarity with dramatic literature will make him particularly useful in his new field.

P. F. COLLIER & SONS are bringing out a new and cheap edition, in four volumes, of the writings of the late Frank Norris, the copyrights of which are held by Doubleday, Page & Co. There are the eight stories—"The Octopus," "The Pit," "Blix," etc.—and the "Essays on Authorship." In the first volume there is a portrait of the author as frontispiece.

HURST & Co. have purchased the copyrights and stock of all the books of Archibald Clavering Gunter from the Home Publishing Company, which is withdrawing from the book publishing business to concentrate all its attention upon its magazine. The sale comprises thirty-six titles and will considerably strengthen the already large line of fiction brought out by Hurst & Co.

JOHN W. LUCE & Co. announce the postponement of Lewis Perry's "Intimate Letters of the Presidents" until after the holidays. It is to be followed by "Intimate Letters" of generals, admirals and other personages. "The Plays of Oscar Wilde," to be issued in two volumes, is nearly ready; and Henry L. Mencken's "George Bernard Shaw: His Plays," is also near publication.

THE AMERICAN SPORTS PUBLISHING CO., 21 Warren Street, New York, have just ready "Spalding's Official Athletic Almanac for 1906," edited by James E. Sullivan, secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union and chairman of the Record Committee of the Amateur Athletic Union, and which will be published on Monday. The almanac this year shows some interesting changes in the records.

THE FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY have just ready a volume of Irish verse, entitled "The Four Winds of Eirinn," by Ethna Carbery, (Anna MacManus.) They have also just ready an illustrated edition of Mrs. Rowson's famous novel, "Charlotte Temple," of which upwards of 100 editions have been published. The present edition gives the correct text, and has an historical and biographical introduction by Francis W. Halsey.

THE RIDGWAY-THAYER COMPANY, Union Square, New York, have just brought out Thomas W. Lawson's long-expected book, "Frenzied Finance, the Crime of Amalgamated." The book of 560 pages includes not only "Frenzied Finance, the Story of Amalgamated" from the beginning to the account of the "Crime of Amalgamated," but also 148 pages of "Lawson and His Critics," which contains his charges of corruption in the three big insurance companies and matters pertaining thereto.

THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS will publish at once "The Plays and Poems of Robert Greene," in two volumes uniform with the Oxford editions of Kyd and Lyly. The editor, Professor J. Churton Collins, has spared no pains to make this edition, so far at least as the text is concerned, the final one of Greene's works. In an appendix to "Orlando Furioso" is given a complete transcript—a section in collotype—of a ms. of great interest and importance. The notes have been made as full as possible to illustrate the characteristics of the early Elizabethan drama.

HENRY HOLT & COMPANY will publish at once a helpful book entitled "Nature and Health," by the well-known New York physician, Dr. Edward Curtis. Although one's health is a serious matter, the author has lightened his popular treatise with humor and anecdote. He covers the hygiene of the person and the home. Among the subjects treated are Breathing, Eating, Drinking, Drugging for Delectation, Seeing, Hearing, Clothing, Bathing, Disposing of Waste, Disinfecting, Exercising the Body, Exercising the Mind, Sleeping and Waking. Working and Playing, Living and Dying.

J. S. OGILVIE PUBLISHING CO., 57 Rose Street, New York, offer to send to any clerk in any bookstore who will agree to read it Florence Warden's new book, "The House by the River," and if he finds it a good story—as the publishers confidently believe he will—recommend it to his customers. They are bringing out a book entitled "Where the Sportsman Loves to Linger," describing three canoe trips made by G. Smith Stanton, a son of Elizabeth Cady Stanton, in Maine, the Allagash, and the east and west branches of the Penobscot. The illustrations comprise seventy-six pictures taken along the route.

THE MUSIC LOVERS COMPANY, 37 St. Botolph Street, Boston, Mass., will publish next month "The Music Lovers' Calendar," a yearly publication for musicians and music lovers. The annual will have a calendar—twelve pages with an interesting musical anniversary for each day of the year; contributions by Lawrence Gilman, Jacques Hartog, H. E. Krehbiel, and others equally well known; a bibliography of recent contributions to musical literature and a critical list of noteworthy compositions for the year 1905, biographical appreciations and portraits of contemporary artists and composers, etc.

"THE ENGLISH DIALECT GRAMMAR," which formed part of the "English Dialect Dictionary," is about to be issued in a convenient crown 8vo form by the Oxford University Press. As Professor Joseph Wright's great work, "The English Dialect Dictionary," is now completed, it is to be offered to the public, through the booksellers on the instalment plan, i.e., the whole six volumes will be delivered on payment of a portion of the published price, the balance to be paid monthly. This offer will only hold good until the end of the year, and until that time the grammar will also be procurable at a reduced price.

A. S. BARNES & Co. have just ready a work entitled "Life in the Eighteenth Century," by George Cary Eggleston, which completes his "Little History of Colonial Life." In addition to this well-known author's graphic and continuous story of colonial life, manners and customs, colonial architecture, begun in the volume entitled "Our First Century," the furniture, costumes, occupations and amusements are depicted in the numerous illustrations accompanying the text. One feature of these books is the presentation of important contemporary historical events in this country and in Europe in parallel columns, preceding a succinct historical summary which has been prepared by Professor Herman V. Ames, of the University of Pennsylvania.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS will publish at once in their Theological Translation Library a work on "St. Paul, the Man and His Work," by Professor H. Weinel, of Jena. The Rev. W. G. Morrison contributes an introduction, and the translation has been prepared by the Rev. G. A. Bienemann, who translated Wernle's "Beginnings of Christianity" in the same series. This biography gives full consideration to the psychological and theological aspects of St. Paul's character, but in addition it presents a strong vital description of the career of a man often dramatic and always interesting. The point of view is largely personal and original, and the author more often refers to other scholars to refute their contentions than to secure support for his own position.

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY announce that the new "Lippincott's Gazetteer" is meeting with general commendation at the hands of the reviewers. What strikes many of these critics is that it is so thoroughly up to date. For example, the cession of the southern half of the Island of Sakhalin is recorded; so, in its proper place, is the fact that the treaty of peace between Russia and Japan was signed at Portsmouth, N. H., on September 5, 1905—less than two months before the book went to press. Greenland and recent discoveries in Africa, Arabia, and political changes in other parts of the world, all are noted in their proper places. Even Zion City is in its place! In no earlier edition of the "Gazetteer" has the historian been so powerful with the geographer as in this new one.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & Co. have just brought out a de luxe edition, in thirty volumes, of Ruskin's complete works. The text of this edition includes not only such well-known titles as "Modern Painters," "Stones of Venice," "Fors Clavigera," etc., but many fugitive essays and letters recently discovered, all the author's notes, a bibliography and indices—in short, two large volumes of material not usually found in current texts. The edition is illustrated with 30 photogravures, 341 half-tones and 10 color plates, containing many of Ruskin's own sketches in pen and colors, as well as reproductions from Turner, whom Ruskin especially admired. This set is a notable addition to the many editions of standard authors already on the list of this firm.

THE Poughkeepsie (N. Y.) Eagle has just brought out a "History of Poughkeepsie," by Edmund Platt. In the chapter on Poughkeepsie in the Revolution, especially, are developed some facts in regard to the position of the Tories in the Hudson Valley, Vaughn's Raid, the Fishkill beacons and in particular in regard to the desperate condition of affairs in the winter of 1779-'80 that have largely escaped the attention of the general historians. It is worth noting that the decline of the town in relative importance is attributed in part to the panic of 1837 and in part to the building of the Hudson River Railroad, which was originally a Poughkeepsie enterprise, promoted by Matthew Vassar and his fellow townsmen as a foil to the Harlem Railroad, which they feared would tend to draw the trade of Dutchess County away from the river towns.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY have just ready "The History of American Painting," by Samuel Isham, in the History of American Art series, edited by Professor John C. Van Dyke; "Rowing and Track Athletics," by S. Crowther, Jr., and Arthur Ruhl, in the American Sportsman's Library, edited by Caspar Whitney; "Young Germany," by Georg Brandes, being the sixth and final volume of "Main Currents in Nineteenth Century Literature;" "Micky," by Evelyn Sharp, illustrated by H. M. Brock; "Henry Esmond," in the Cranford Series, with an introduction by Austin Dobson, beautifully illustrated by Hugh Thomson; "Lectures on the Early History of the Kingship," by J. G. Frazer, author of "The Golden Bough;" Prior's Poems, in the Cambridge English Classics; "Easy Mathematics," by Sir Oliver Lodge; and new editions of the following plays by Henry Arthur Jones—"Michael and His Lost Angel," "The Physician" and "The Crusaders."

L. C. PAGE & Co. have just brought out one of the most interesting and valuable books on their fall list, namely, the volume of reminiscences, observations and conclusions by the late Hon. Charles Denby, entitled "China and Her People." Colonel Denby was one of the diplomats who had marked influence in moulding the attitude of foreign nations towards America. He was minister to China for thirteen years, retaining his position through three administrations and part of a fourth at a time when politics in America was at its bitterest, and during one of the most interesting and important eras in the history of the East. Colonel Denby's chapters on two subjects which deeply concern Americans, namely, the Boxer rebellion and our exclusion of the Chinese laborer, are illuminating, and his entire account of the inmost life and aspirations of the Chinese people, with whom he was in close touch, will be found to be most sympathetic and accurate. The work is published in two volumes and is brought down to the immediate period by Colonel Denby's son, at present a resident of China, and a member of the American legation at Peking.

A. C. ARMSTRONG & SON have a new book by the Rev. John Watson, (Ian Maclaren,) entitled "The Inspiration of Our Faith," a collection of essays dealing largely with the church's problem to-day; "The Song of Ages," by the Rev. R. J. Campbell, pastor of the London City Temple, who has the peculiar faculty of comprehending the troubles and perplexities of all men, young and old, and supplies to each the help he needs; "The Garden of Nuts," a new book on Christian mysticism, by Dr. W. Robertson Nicoll, editor of the London Bookman, etc.; also, a new book by Dr. James Orr, of the Glasgow Free Church College, entitled "God's Image in Man and its Defacement in the Light of Modern Denials." They have made arrangements to bring out in this country a new series entitled Literary Illustrations of the Bible, edited by James Moffat, a collection of volumes in which passages of prose and verse are given in which some text of ahe Bible has been used or applied in a forcible or notable manner, while other passages are selections from English literature that may develop aptly and freshly not the words but the idea of a biblical verse. In size and get up these volumes resemble the Temple Classics.

A. C. McClurg & Co. have just published a "Life of Omar Khayyám," of interest to the student of Omarian literature. The author is a Persian scholar who has had access to certain rare mss. existing in the libraries of private persons in Persia, which are practically inaccessible to Europeans. From these he has gathered many interesting facts; and in his book, which is written in a charming and fascinating manner, he presents the poet-astronomer to us in a particularly attractive way. There are also chapters on Omar's philosophy, his science, and his surroundings. The book is handsomely produced, the cover design, title-page, and chapter headings being illuminated, in color and gold, in the Persian style. They have also just ready Randall Parrish's long-expected work, "Historic Illinois: a Romance of the Early Days." The work is a contribution to the annals of the West, for comparatively few realize that no Western State equals Illinois in the romantic incidents of the early days. These are full of color, action and adventure, for above these peaceful plains and woods once waved the flags of four contending nations, while men of the white race and the red strove continually for mastery. The volume has upwards of fifty illustrations.

John Lane Company issues from the Bodley Head the "Life and Letters of Peter Ilich Tchaikovsky," written by his brother Modeste Tchaikovsky, and edited from the Russian by Rosa Newmarch. The book, which is illustrated from portraits and views of scenes connected with the composer's life, carries as frontispiece a striking portrait of date 1893. An interesting facsimile is a fragment from a letter in which the musician has sketched a theme for "The Enchantress." The original "life," printed in Moscow, was a large book of three volumes and contained in the three thousand letters a large proportion addressed to persons unknown to the American music public, as well as a mass of minute and almost local particulars which would hardly be interesting outside of Russia. So far as possible the editor has aimed to preserve the autobiographical character of the book, letting the composer tell his own story. The most romantic episode in Tchaikovsky's life—his friendship extending over thirteen years with a woman to whom he never addressed a direct personal greeting—is told in a series of intimate letters. The account of his tour in America which takes the form of a diary for the benefit of his near relations cannot fail to interest and amuse all those who remember the favorable impression created by his appearance at the inauguration of Carnegie Hall in May, 1891.

E. P. Dutton & Co. have as usual provided generously for the holiday shopper in the way of booklets, novelties and calendars, which may be had to suit all tastes from five cents up to almost as many dollars. In the shape of turnover calendars they have among other new ones "The Lord's Prayer," "Gems from Longfellow," "Scenes from Venice," "Fables by George Washington Æsop," a modern version of the familiar fables; "Proverbs," a series of comic pictures to which old adages have been applied; "Gems from Shakespeare," with a rich cover design in green and gold; a "Phillips Brooks Calendar," and "A Hunting Calendar," gay with bright-colored hunting scenes in facsimile of famous English water colors. It were impossible to describe the whole line, comprising about 150 new numbers, turn overs, block, purse, pocket and miniature, and cut-outs in a dozen different shapes. They have made large additions to their Gem Series of booklets in board, ooze calf, hand-decorated leather and paste-grain leather bindings, also to their Dainty Series of miscellaneous and devotional books and books for young people. Many new and attractive numbers have been added to their artistic panels and wall cards, each one a fit subject for framing. In the line of toy books, painting books, linen books, movable picture, mechanical and puzzle books the choice is well-nigh unlimited. The color books have all been produced by Ernest Nister, the art printer of Nüremberg, whose imprint is a hall mark of fine work.

The Neale Publishing Co., New York and Washington, D. C., have just ready "The Ku Klux Klan: its origin, growth, and disbandment," by J. C. Lester and D. L. Wilson, with introduction and notes by Walter L. Fleming, professor of history in the West Virginia University and author of "Civil War and Reconstruction in Alabama," illustrated by portraits, reproductions of old prints and of rare documents; "The Mecklenberg Declaration of Independence, May 20, 1775, and the Lives of Its Signers," by Dr. George W. Graham, a history of what has often been designated as the first Declaration of Independence; the following fiction: "The Awakening," a novel of Washington life by C. Wickliffe Yulee; "Her American Daughter," by Annie T. Colcock, a story of the present time in Madrid; "Dick," by Willie Drennen Russell, a story of life in Alabama; "A Maid of the Foothills," by J. W. Daniel, a story of Reconstruction in South Carolina; "Chiefly from Castles in Spain," a volume of short stories by Sophia Chandler; "Rosemary Leigh," by Annie H. Smith, a story of the South of the period just following the Civil War; "A Government Countess," by Martha Lemon Schneider, a novel of departmental life in Washington; "The Blue Cockade," by Flora McDonald Williams, a story of the Southern Confederacy; "Among the Meadows," by Frances Allen Harris, a novel dealing with the every-day farm folk of the blue-grass region of Kentucky; "Beside a Southern Sea," by Elizabeth May Montague, a story of Southern life of to-day.

WILLIAM J. HAY, at John Knox's House, Edinburgh, has continued the excellent series of "Old Houses in Edinburgh," drawn by Bruce J. Home, with seven more parts—from three to nine inclusive. These parts delineate Brown's Court, Canongate, looking north; Advocates' Close, from the lower end; back of Bakehouse Close, lower courtyard; interior of Bakehouse Close, east side; Brown's Close, Canongate, looking south; Bakehouse Close, looking north; two views of Huntly House on Canongate; back of Bakehouse Close, looking north; Brodie's Yard, Cowgate; doorway of the Gordon House, on Castle hill; Dewar's Close, Grassmarket; Hope House and Campbell's Close, Cowgate; back of Bakehouse Close, looking south; Sir Archibald Acheson's house, looking southeast; two views of Balie Fyfe's Close, looking north and south; two views of Bakehouse Close, one from Acheson's House and the other a general view; and Baird's Close from the King's Stables Road. With the ninth part is given a title-page and contents of the first series. For all that have visited or are interested in "auld reekie," these drawings must have the liveliest interest. Mr. Hay will publish shortly "The Hammermen of Edinburgh and Their Altar," extracts from the records of this incorporated trade, from 1494 to 1558, with introductory notes by John Smith, author of "A Handbook and Directory of Old Scottish Clockmakers;" also, "Rob Lindsay and His School," by one of Rob's old pupils, with illustrations by Miss H. C. Prestoun MacGoun, a little simple story of child-life that has been spoken of by competent judges as one of the most charming episodes since the day of "Rab and His Friends." Mr. Hay has in preparation an interesting volume on "The Passing of the Precentor," by Duncan Fraser, Precentor to the United Free Church Assembly.

PICK-UPS.

JOHN B. TABB, poet, sends to the London Academy this quatrain, suggested by the exclusion of Poe from the New York Hall of Fame:

EXCLUDED.

Into the Charnel Hall of Fame
The dead alone should go;
Then write not there the living name
Of Edgar Allan Poe.

METROPOLITAN WAYS.—Visiting Salesman: Pretty slow town, this.

Resident (of Bridgewater).—Oh, not so durn slow; the Carnegie Library is suin' it for non-support.—Puck.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted" book-trade subscribers are given the privilege of a free advertisement for books out of print, of five nonpareil lines, exclusive of address, in any issue except special numbers, to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents a line, and amount should be inclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents a line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents a nonpareil line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents a nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

More Queer Things About Japan

By DOUGLAS SLADEN and NORMA LORIMER. Large 8vo, $2.50 net.

The above two books are the most successful books of travel issued this year. In "More Queer Things About Japan" there are sixteen chapters by Miss Lorimer on "Japan from a woman's point of view," and two remarkable contributions from the Japanese—a life of Napoleon, written and illustrated by the Japanese about 1840, and "The Yoshiwara from Within," an account of the Public Harems of Japan. The famous letters of Will Adams, written from Japan 1611–1617, are also included.

NEW BOOKS

General Sociology — ALBION W. SMALL

Professor Small's main proposition is that the traditional sciences relating to the spiritual sides of life are sterile, unless they are carried out to a point at which they blend in one system of knowledge. The book is an exposition of the development of social theory from Spencer to Ratzenhofer, and a plea for the completion of the general structure of social science. 753 pp.; 8vo, cloth; net $4.00, postpaid $4.23.

A Decade of Civic Development — CHARLES ZUEBLIN

The author gives a concise and spirited account of certain definite measures—political, economic, social, and artistic—for the betterment of American cities. Professor Zueblin was formerly president of the American League for Civic Improvement. He is the author of American Municipal Progress and other volumes. 200 pp.; 12mo, cloth; net $1 25, postpaid $1.39.

Primary Facts in Religious Thought — ALFRED W. WISHART

Seven short essays intended to state, in a simple and practical manner, the essential principles of religion, and to clear them from the confusion arising from theoretical changes and historical criticism. 125 pp.; 12mo, cloth; net 75c., postpaid 85c.

Egoism: A Study in the Social Premises of Religion — LOUIS WALLIS

In this essay the author first sets forth the proposition that "egoism is the only 'force' propelling the social machine." This thesis he then proceeds to demonstrate by evidence drawn from biblical history. Lastly he shows its practical bearing on the present social problem. 137 pp.; 16mo, cloth; net 75c., postpaid 82 cts.

Methods in Plant Histology — CHARLES J. CHAMBERLAIN

An indispensable book for students of Botany. The volume contains directions for collecting and preparing plant material for microscopic investigation. It is the first complete manual to be published on this subject. Second edition, illustrated. 272 pp.; 8vo, cloth; net $2.25, postpaid $2.39.

RECENT BOOKS OF IMPORTANCE

Christian Belief Interpreted by Christian Experience
CHARLES CUTHBERT HALL

This interesting volume contains the "Barrows Lectures" delivered by President Hall in the leading cities of India and Japan, in connection with the lectureship founded by Mrs. Caroline E Haskell.

In these days, when the momentous events in the Far East have quickened an interest in all things oriental, this thoughtful and earnest work should be welcomed by everyone who desires to go below the surface for an explanation of the message from the mysterious East for which all are waiting.

300 pp.; 8vo, cloth; net $1.50, postpaid $1.66.

Prophetic Element in the Old Testament — WILLIAM R. HARPER

A scholarly handbook for advanced students. This volume is the latest in the series of Constructive Bible Studies. 150 pp.; 8vo, cloth; postpaid $1.00.

Russia and Its Crisis
PAUL MILYOUKOV

The New York Times, under date of August 26, says: "It is not often that an author is so forcibly reminded of the truth of his own printed words as Professor Paul Milyoukov has been. His book on Russia, which we review this week, describes the 'attempt at welding autocracy and liberalism,' now under way in his native land. The last few days have given a striking exemplification of both the liberalism and the autocracy. The Czar has issued his rescript instituting a National Assembly, and within a fortnight of it his Government has arrested Professor Milyoukov for his activity in promoting agitation for reform in the empire."

602 pp ; 8vo, cloth; net $3.00; postpaid $3.20.

Place of Industries in Elementary Education — KATHARINE E. DOPP

"The book deals with the basic principles of manual training, and is a distinct contribution to the practical pedagogy of to-day." Third edition. Revised. Illustrated. 278 pp.; cloth; net $1.00; postpaid $1.11.

MANSIONS OF ENGLAND IN THE OLDEN TIME

By JOSEPH NASH. International Studio Supplement. Wrappers, $2.00 net; cloth, $3.00 net

This work is probably the most valuable and interesting work which has ever appeared upon English architecture. Dealing, as it does, with the most perfect form of English domestic architecture in the past, the value of the book as a work of reference is unparalleled. Mr. Joseph Nash, who spent many years in its preparation, was a consummate draughtsman and a true artist. Facsimile reproductions of each of the 104 plates are printed in two printings.

An introductory chapter is contributed by Mr. C. Harrison Townsend.

Two Unusual Books

FOR CHILDREN

By LUCILE LOVELL

"ANDY"

THIS is the greatest book of its kind since "Fauntleroy," and appeals to children and grown-ups alike. No one can resist Andy. He is an unusual boy, and the account of how he won a place for himself is an unusual story, told with delicate pathos and rare humor.

"The WALCOTT TWINS"

THE funniest book about children since "Helen's Babies." The twins look just alike, and when they mischievously change clothes and the girl goes to the house of a bachelor uncle, while the boy visits a maiden aunt, there are side-splitting complications. A wholesome, jolly story, and a universal favorite.

who will agree to read and if he finds, as we believe he will, that our new book, "The House By The River," is one of the best stories he has ever read, recommend it to his customers, we will send a copy of the book absolutely free by mail postpaid. We will send out only 250 copies on this offer, so if you want it, write at once, giving us the name of your firm. We will send only one copy to any one firm.

We know that we have one of the best selling books ever issued and we want you to be convinced of it. Read the following description of it.

Florence Warden's New Book

THE HOUSE BY THE RIVER

12mo, 320 Pages. Cloth Bound, $1.00.

This is the most recent work of Florence Warden, the famous author of "The House on the Marsh," which had such an immense sale. This, her latest effort, excels in every respect her former work. The deep and intense interest in this story does not lag in the least, but is carried out until the close. Every reader will imagine what the end ought to be, but nearly every one will be surprised at the intensely interesting development at the close of the last chapter. The trade supplied by any News Company or wholesale jobber.

One prominent book man of twenty years' experience in selling books said of it: "I want to thank you for the book, The House By The River. I sat up last night until two o'clock in the morning to find out what the finish of the story was."

JUST READY

The Second (or Supplementary Volume) of the American Catalog

1900-1905

The second volume of the new "American Catalog, 1900, '01, '02, '03, 04," is now ready for delivery.

The first volume, issued in June last, is a complete record in itself, being a dictionary-catalog of all books recorded between January 1, 1900, and January 1, 1905. In its one alphabet every book is entered at least three times (by author, title and subject), with information as to size, price, publisher, year of issue, etc. It forms the latest addition to the old series of the "American Catalogue," published in quarto form, while the newest volume is an octavo, which is generally conceded to be a much handier shape. We can reasonably affirm that every dealer needs such a permanent catalog in his business, while every library of importance should have this standard bibliographical work on its shelves, since its usefulness in the world of books is on a par with a time-table in the railroad world.

The second, or supplementary volume, contains the full title entries, with annotations, given in the "Weekly Record" of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY during the five years 1900, '01, '02, '03, '04, cumulated into one alphabet for each year; that is, into five alphabets. This is planned to answer the demands of librarians, booksellers and others who wish this valuable material, in available shape, for classifying and describing and for permanent reference.

For the book dealer the second volume is a very useful record of book valuation. It gives in form for ready reference brief descriptive notices of the important books published during the period mentioned, describing concisely the contents of each work and explaining many titles which, in themselves, mean little or nothing or are misleading. For descriptive cataloging, a bibliographical work of this kind is almost priceless.

The two volumes are uniformly bound in half morocco. The price is $12.00 for both or $7.50 for either separately. The edition is limited, but 240 copies of the first volume and 145 of the second volume remain unsold. We reserve the right to advance the price when the balance of either is reduced to 100 copies.

GORDON HOLMES'

new story of mystery and romance

The Arncliffe Puzzle

now running serially in the Associated Sunday magazines will be published early in January. The success of

A Mysterious Disappearance

and the fact that

The Arncliffe Puzzle

brought a big price for serial use is a pretty good indication that the story is up to the standard of which is admittedly the best detective story of the year.

NOTABLE McCLURE BOOKS

JUST PUBLISHED

REV. WASHINGTON GLADDEN'S

The New Idolatry

¶ This notable book is a protest against the commercializing of government, of education and of religion; against the growing tendency in church and state to worship power and forget the interests of justice and freedom; against the dethronement of God and the enthronement of Mammon. The volume includes the author's famous address on "Tainted Money," which is a splendid appeal for a revival of ethical idealism in our national life.

Cloth, 12mo. Net, $1.20; postpaid, $1.30

GOLDWIN SMITH'S

Irish History and the Irish Question

¶ A brilliant treatment of the Irish question in the light of the lessons afforded by the history of the past relations between England and her neighbor. Notable for its liberal and enlightened sympathy and for the insistence which it places upon natural rather than political causes for Ireland's suffering. The author has done more to throw light upon the actual status of the Irish question than any writer of our time. It should do much towards creating a better understanding of the situation.

Cloth, 12mo. Net, $1.50; postpaid, $1.60

G. LOWES DICKINSON'S

The Greek View of Life

¶ Here is another brilliant contribution to literature by the famous author of "Letters from a Chinese Official." This latest work is a delightful, clever and attractive exposition of the manners and customs of the Greeks as illustrated in their literature.

Cloth, small 12mo. Net, $1.00; postpaid, $1.07

The Gift Book of the Year

The CHRISTY EVANGELINE

The new Christy-Longfellow book is a surpassing achievement in beauty. Mr. Christy has more than risen to the occasion and given to Longfellow's masterpiece—the most familiar and best beloved of all American love poems—a new richness and a new loveliness.

It is the ideal gift book, and this is shown by the fact that whoever buys it selfishly dislikes to give it away.

A Little Comedy of Country Manners

JOHN LUTHER LONG'S

SEFFY

A draught of pure delight is this little comedy of country manners. It is like a summer day,—all sunshine and showers and rainbows,—smiles and tears and smiles again breaking through the tears.

It is an idyl of the Pennsylvania Germans, with two love motives, the love of man for maid and the love of father for son. Both are prettily managed, in the first half of the book, with charming humor,—in the second part, with seriousness, tenderness, dignity.

Illustrated in color by C. D. Williams

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY have just published a new volume on Russia, by Carl Joubert, author of "Russia as It Really Is," entitled "The Truth About the Tsar;" a fourth edition, revised and enlarged, of "A Short Handbook of Oil Analysis," by Augustus H. Gill; also "New Methods of Testing Explosives," by C. E. Bichel.

HENRY HOLT will publish shortly the series of articles on "The Negro and the Nation," contributed originally by George B. Merriam to the Springfield Republican. The work treats of the negro from slave trade days to Tuskegee, and is distinguished by both wit and scholarship. They are also just bringing out "American Trades Unionism," a volume of papers and studies on the subject by post-graduate students of Johns Hopkins University, edited by Professors Hollander and Barnett; also, Stopford Brooke's "Lectures on Shakespeare."

DODD, MEAD & Co. have just brought out "The Minutes of the Committee of the County of Tyron, from the first meeting in the Palatine District, August 27, 1774, to November 24, 1775," a Revolutionary historical narrative relating to Central New York, edited and annotated, and illustrated with portraits, views and facsimiles; also, the tenth edition of "Nedra," by George Barr McCutcheon, which is selling better than ever abroad as well as here. They will publish shortly the concluding volume of their sumptuous definite edition of "The Original Journals of the Lewis and Clark Expedition," edited by Dr. Reuben Gold Thwaites.

THE FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY have ready "Kindergarten Bible Stories," by Laura E. Cragin, who has selected from the Old Testament those stories best adapted for children and has retold them with skill and interest, deftly uncovering the moral lessons each contains. "The Vision at the Savoy," just ready, is an unusual book for diverse reasons. The author, Winifred Graham, has introduced as characters the present Bishop of London, Father Ignatius and even the American revivalists Torrey and Alexander, contrasting them with the usual run of society folk in a story of absorbing interest. Also from this house is "The Witness of Sin," by the New England minister, the Rev. Nathan Robinson Wood, being a study of the world-old problem of the whence and why of evil.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & Co. have been obliged to postpone publication of the authorized edition of Dr. C. G. Schillings's notable work, "Flashlights in the Jungle," until next month. The delay in bringing out this edition is due to the elaborate care taken in making the English translation accurate in its African geography and anthropology. The edition will contain the 320 original photographs and the complete text of 900 pages, embracing the complete narrative of the remarkable expedition. Owing to the difficult presswork, Doubleday, Page & Company have been obliged to postpone also the publication of "The Country House," by Charles Edward Hooper, until next spring. This book will contain over three hundred half-tone illustrations, and is a complete manual of house-building by a widely known architect.

Designed to meet the needs of students beginning to study the forms of writing, needs that have been disclosed year after year by the students entering Cornell University, where Prof. Andrews is instructor in English. This is not a selection from the great writers. The descriptive selections deal largely with scenes in America; the narratives are largely narratives of fact that do not deal with difficult situations or complex emotions; short paragraphs from newspapers are included to show how conciseness and vividness give interest to the little events of every-day life.

The writer was candidate for governor of Nebraska in 1904; during the campaign he expressed himself plainly upon the railroad question, asserting that the railroads owned the legislature through the free pass system. His work continues the discussion urging that the people regulate and control the railways. Mr. Berge is also editor and publisher of the Nebraska Independent, where much of this matter first appeared.

A Dorsetshire story full of the woods and a keeper's life. A rich farmer dying leaves his property to his wife for her life, stipulating that then it shall go intact to the oldest son who is to provide for his brother. The younger man is indignant, falls out with his brother and takes a place as keeper with an eccentric old woman devoted to the Kneipp cure. Romance steps in and the plot develops the young farmer whose wildest doings have stopped short of wild oats and are put down by a friend as "wild wheat."

Evans, T: Wiltberger. Memoirs of Dr. Thomas W. Evans: the second French empire; ed. by E: A. Crane, M.D.; Napoleon the Third, the Empress Eugénie, the Prince Imperial. N. Y., Appleton, 1905. 20+527 p. il. pors. 8°, cl., $3 net.
Dr. Evans was the celebrated American dentist who lived in Paris from 1847 until his death in 1897, and was appointed court dentist by Napoleon III. His personal friendship with Napoleon and the Empress Eugénie brought him in contact with all the great ones of the time, not only of France but of other European countries. This volume is made up of those portions of his memoirs that relate to the Second French Empire, and contains a detailed account of Eugénie's flight from Paris under the care of Dr. Evans and Dr. Crane, the editor of the present work, and her subsequent settling in England. Dr. Evans's relations to the royal family continued up to his death and his record of men and events have the merit of being that of an eye witness and most loyal friend.

Farce (The) of Master Pierre Patelin; composed by an unknown author about 1469 A.D. English ed. by R: Holbrook; il. with facsimiles of the woodcuts in the edition of Pierre Levet, Paris, ca. 1489. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1905. [N.] c. 37+116 p. O. cl., $2 net.
"Patelin" belongs to a series of farces which had come mysteriously into being as early as 1277. It is a piece of literature typical of the times—its author's name, however, being entirely forgotten. Mr. Holbrook in his introduction says: "In every regard it excels all other extant farces. The author of this piece, whoever he may have been and wherever he may have lived, was a genius, and when he wrote he was inspired." Of the characters he says: "They represent in several distinct and ludicrous phases the poverty, the greed, the cynical cunning, the selfishness, and the grinning depravity characteristic of the fifteenth century, at least in France."

For years the author has spent his vacations, in an ideal way, photographing and studying our friends in fur and feathers, in their native haunts. He enters into their lives as much as possible, in order to know their habits and wild ways—how they live and how they care for their young. In the sketches of mammals and birds given he has attempted to make the photographs as far as possible illustrate the facts. The text is a simple narrative of facts taken from his own observations and experiences.

The materials for these volumes are of two kinds. "On the one hand," the editor says, "I have set down passages of verse and prose in which some text of this book of the Bible has been used or applied in what appears to be a forcible or notable manner. Some of these are drawn from history and biography, others from general literature. In the second place, I have admitted passages which develop aptly and freshly not the words but the idea of a Biblical verse. It is hoped that both classes of illustrations may prove interesting to the ordinary reader by enriching the associations and eliciting the significance of the Bible."

A tale of Egypt based on the theory of reincarnation. The daughter of the last of Egypt's shepherd kings and a young Hebrew are taken prisoner by the Theban conqueror and conveyed to Thebes. The princess is later offered by her captors as a sacrifice to the Nile, and thus closes book one. Hundreds of years later when Mohammedans are rulers in Egypt, the souls of the princess, her Hebrew lover, her father, the king, and Hotep, the high priest, take human form again, and the mystery of reincarnation, dimly realized by each one of them, is substantiated by means of a discovered papyrus roll.

Charlotte Temple: a tale of truth; reprinted from the rare first American edition, (1794;) over twelve hundred errors in later editions being corrected and the preface restored; with an historical and biographical introd., bibliography, etc., by Francis W. Halsey. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1905. [N.] c. 48+149 p. il. pors. D. cl., $1.25.

The author of this old-fashioned tale of a deluded girl and her aristocratic lover was born in 1761 and died in 1824. She came to America in 1769. Through life she supported herself as teacher, author and actress. This book is supposed to have sold more copies than any novel excepting "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and chiefly in paper covered, cheap editions. It is thought so widely-read a book should be offered the public in good permanent shape. It is supposed Charlotte really existed. A tablet to her memory is placed in Trinity Churchyard, New York City.

The introductory chapter contains a detailed statement of the doctrines of the French anarchists by Jean Grave, the leading exponent of anarchism in Paris. Then follows a description of the various forms of propaganda whether oral, written by example, or by deed; and an account of socialists and other revolutionists. The students of the Latin Quarter as revolutionists in fact or imagination, their clubs and cabarets are described, and in conclusion the revolutionary spirit in literature, poetry, music and art is traced.

Wilkins, W: H: Mrs. Fitzherbert and George IV. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1905. [N.] c. 20+476 p. pors. O. cl., *$5 net.

One of the romances of the later Georgian era was the marriage of Mrs. Fitzherbert and George, Prince of Wales, afterwards George IV. This marriage was not only never acknowledged, but twice denied in the House of Commons. Before Mrs. Fitzherbert's death, in 1833, she reserved certain papers from destruction, and deposited them in Messrs. Coutts' Bank. No one up to the present time has ever been allowed to see these papers. But through the gracious permission of King Edward, Mr. Wilkins had been allowed to inspect and publish them, or such extracts from them as were necessary to vindicate Mrs. Fitzherbert's character. They establish beyond doubt the fact of a marriage, which, if not legal according to English law, was admitted by the church to be morally binding. These papers and letters with other new material, and many rare portraits, make a volume of unusual value and interest.

Story of the Russian Jews, centering in the experiences of a Jewish girl, forced into marriage with an ignorant student from whom she escapes a few hours after their marriage. She flies to Hamburg, thence to America. Years after she returns to Russia to search for her real parents; becomes involved with the Nihilists and assists in the assassination of Alexander II., dicovered too late to be her father, and is transported to Siberia where she is chain-mate with the man whom she married years before. The story ends satisfactorily after many mysteries. The marriage customs of Russian Jews are described in detail, and Jewish fanaticism towards their own erring brethren is shown.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

DECEMBER 9, 1905.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter for advertising pages should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE BOOKTRADE REFORM MOVEMENT IN 1905.

THE year now drawing to a close has been an unusually satisfactory one so far as the adherence to the reform movement is concerned. While the chief antagonist has not ceased from troubling, the technical decision in his favor this summer has been of but little advantage to him, and his next move is still to be made. In the meantime, the case of Charles Scribner's Sons against Macy's to secure protection for their copyright books is on the calendar, and hopes are entertained of a favorable decision.

The retail trade has been almost a unit in its adherence to the rule, the defections coming from little known, and, as a rule, unimportant persons who enter the ranks of the trade in many instances as mere catspaws for the underseller. While some dissatisfaction is privately expressed by a few at the attitude of the American Publishers' Association in certain matters, even these dissenting booksellers are agreed that the reform movement has been of decided benefit to the trade, and that a reversion to the old conditions would be a calamity that must be resisted with every means available. Indeed, so strong has this feeling become among retail booksellers that it would be to the decided disadvantage of either a publisher or a bookseller to attempt to weaken their present defense against senseless and ruinous underselling.

It is no doubt, true, as some claim, that a bookseller is placed in an equivocal position when he is expected to retail a $1.50 work of fiction at $1.08, instead of being enabled to sell it at a straight bona-fide price, no matter what that price may be. There is even a strong feeling on the subject among the members of the American Publishers' Association; but the majority of the publishers of fiction do not yet see their way clear to yield on this point, and therefore the minority has had so far to content itself with the compromise by which, under the present conditions, the bookseller is nevertheless assured of at least $1.08 on new fiction, instead of being obliged, as he was a few years ago, to meet his competitors in the larger cities, who were selling fiction, as bait, in many cases as low as 79 cents. As to the more important lines carried by the bookseller, there can be no question that the protection secured by the American Publishers' Association has been of enormous advantage.

Considering the deplorable condition in which the booktrade found itself scarcely five years ago, harassed on one hand by reckless competitors and on the other hand by indifferent publishers, the associations formed since that time have done creditable work. Indeed, it is less to be wondered at that some difficult points still remain to be settled, than that so much has already been accomplished. Where so many interests in a country of so vast an extent as ours must be considered, reform must ever work slowly, and its prosecution and defense for some years to come will be expensive. The moral and material support of every one interested in the progress and uplifting of the movement is therefore absolutely necessary. Neither the publisher nor the bookseller can afford to return to the old conditions. The disaster that overtook even some of our larger publishing houses was due in some measure to the disorganization of the channels of distribution. As for those few booksellers who, while looking and hoping for still better things, are unwilling to put their shoulders to the wheel and help to obtain them, we put to them the simple question, Would you care to go back to the old conditions?

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ON COPYRIGHT LEGISLATION.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT in his annual message, transmitted to Congress on December 5, refers to our Copyright laws as follows:

"Our copyright laws urgently need revision. They are imperfect in definition, confused and inconsistent in expression; they omit provision for many articles which, under modern reproductive processes are entitled to protection; they impose hardships upon the copyright proprietor which are not essential to the fair protection of the public; they are difficult for the courts to interpret and impossible for the Copyright Office to administer with satisfaction to the public. Attempts to improve them by amendment have been frequent, no less than twelve acts for the purpose having been passed since the Revised Statutes. To perfect them by further amendment seems impracticable. A complete revision of them is essential. Such a revision, to meet modern conditions, has been found necessary in Germany, Austria, Sweden, and other foreign countries, and bills embodying it are pending in England and the Australian colonies. It has been urged here, and proposals for a commission to undertake it have, from time to time, been pressed upon the Congress. The inconveniences of the present conditions being so great, an attempt to frame appropriate legislation has been made by the Copyright Office, which has called conferences of the various interests especially and practically concerned with the operation of the copyright laws. It has secured from them suggestions as to the changes necessary; it has added from its own experience and investigations, and it has drafted a bill which embodies such of these changes and additions as, after full discussion and expert criticism, appeared to be sound and safe. In form this bill would replace the existing insufficient and inconsistent laws by one general copyright statute. It will be presented to the Congress at the coming session. It deserves prompt consideration."

THE GREEK LAMP BOOK-SHOP.

THE enterprising firm of Baker-Trisler Company have just completed their new Greek Lamp Book-Shop and Art Rooms, at 510 Walnut Street, Des Moines, Iowa. The store is located in the heart of the retail district, conveniently accessible to car lines, railway stations and hotels. It has two alley facings, side and back, which with the complete ventilating devices that have been installed, with numerous art windows opened on the sides, makes it a place that will be comfortable at all times, no matter how large the crowd. With the spacious and inviting rest room, people will recognize at once that their comfort has been considered, making shopping there a pleasure.

The interior has been entirely made over in the form of booths and galleries, giving an old English effect, a happy combination of the artistic and practical. The booths are classified and offer quiet nooks for the book lover to browse in undisturbed. According to the Des Moines Mail and Times, there are books upstairs and books downstairs and books on the main floor—books everywhere and still more books, all kinds and qualities and prices, chosen with the knowledge that comes from twenty-five years of experience in supplying what people want. . . . The solid glass front, with its extensions and its wide entrance, makes the most artistic and best contrived show windows in the city.

Conspicuous in the interior construction is a striking reproduction of a familiar Grecian arch, forming the entrance to the art rooms, where well-lighted separate rooms are constructed to display an extensive line of framed and sheet pictures, paintings, water colors, photogravures, etc. The basement is reserved for popular-priced books, pictures, artists' supplies, games, paper goods, etc. The stationery department, as well as the commercial stationery and office outfitting department, is on the main floor.

The firm is to be commended on its good taste and enterprise, which deserve to be amply rewarded with growing patronage.

A MODERN BOOK-FIRE.

PROVIDED with a temporary order from Judge Landis against Alvin C. Davis, restraining him from sending an alleged pirated song book through the mails, a deputy marshal and Attorneys W. S. Forrest and B. C. Bachrach, representing William W. Delaney, a song book publisher, according to the Chicago Tribune, went to Davis's place, 1634 West Ohio Street, Chicago, in an automobile on November 28 and seized 40,000 song books.

Five young women were busy in the office sending the song books out on orders. Later Davis and Delaney took the books to a nearby prairie and burned them. At the Chicago Newspaper Union Attorney Bachrach found 8000 more copies of the book and the plates. These also were destroyed.

The Harry Von Tilzer Publishing Company filed a suit against the Chicago Newspaper Union for the recovery of $8000—$1 for each copy of the song book printed by them in violation of the copyright. Ten other New York publishers have employed counsel to sue the company for damages aggregating $400,000.

OBITUARY.

JOHN BARTLETT.

JOHN BARTLETT, world renowned as the compiler of "Bartlett's Familiar Quotations," died at Cambridge, Mass., on the evening of December 3. Mr. Bartlett was born in Plymouth, Mass., June 14, 1820. He was of conspicuous New England lineage—the descendant in the eighth generation of Robert Bartlett, who landed at Plymouth from the Ann, in 1623, and married the daughter of Richard Warren, one of the Mayflower Pilgrims. At the age of eighteen, after attending the schools of his native town, young Bartlett became a clerk in the University Bookstore in Cambridge, of which, in 1849, he became manager. In that year he printed and published his first book, "Bothie of Taper-Na-Fuorich," a volume over which Emerson grew profoundly enthusiastic.

Bartlett's bookstore in Cambridge gradually became the headquarters of all the professors and students of Harvard who cared particularly for literature. The store then was on the corner of Holyoke Street, directly opposite the college buildings. Here gathered the literati of Cambridge.

In 1859 he retired from the business, being succeeded by Sever, Allyn & Francis, and in November, 1862 took a position as volunteer paymaster in the South Atlantic squadron of the United States. In July, 1863, he resigned his position as paymaster and associated himself with the firm of Little, Brown & Co., becoming a partner in February, 1865. He continued in the active work of the firm until his retirement in February, 1889. His chief work was personal dealings with authors, and during this period he became intimately acquainted with many writers of distinction. He knew intimately all of the famous Cambridge and Concord group of authors whose names are household words in this country as well as abroad.

"Familiar Quotations," which was later to make Mr. Bartlett's name so widely known, was first issued in 1855 as a small volume of 200 pages. After numerous revisions during subsequent years the ninth edition grew to 1200 pages. The volume has had a sale of nearly a quarter of a million copies. Mr. Bartlett's peculiar talents in this field of literary work induced him to begin a concordance of Shakespeare, the first result of this labor being 'The Shakespeare Phrase Book," published in 1882. This was expanded by constant elaboration into the larger "Shakespeare Concordance," which appeared in 1894. In the preparation of this work he had the constant assistance of his wife, Hannah Staniford Willard, daughter of Professor Sydney Willard and granddaughter of Joseph Willard, a president of Harvard College.

Throughout his life Mr. Bartlett was devoted to the sport of fishing, and on this subject he collected a large and valuable library, which he presented to Harvard University. In the works of his friend, James Russell Lowell, is a poem "To Mr. John Bartlett, who sent me a seven-pound trout." As a disciple of Izaak Walton he prepared the second American edition of "The Complete Angler." In recognition of his services to literature Harvard University, in 1871, conferred upon him the degree of master of arts.

Mr. Bartlett's health had been feeble for several years, and the death a year ago of his wife, who had been his inseparable companion for fifty-four years, was a shock from which he did not fully recover. Since that time he seldom left his home, and a week ago his condition took a serious turn.

Mr. Bartlett's business career covered a period of fifty-two years. His interest in literature ceased only with his life. In 1894 he was made a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He was also a member of the Colonial Society of Boston, and of the Sons of the Revolution. In his earlier years he belonged to many Boston clubs. He was a man of wide reading, had a most retentive memory, and the search for the authorship of quotations always enlisted the keenest interest, although it entailed no less arduous labor. His disposition was a genial one, and he had many warm friends. He loved and honored his profession and was, when in active business, considered an expert upon all matters connected with the making of books. In his death the profession of publishing loses one of its oldest and most valued members.

BOOKTRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

BROTHERHOOD OF COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS will give its twenty-first annual dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria, on Thursday evening, December 28. Elaborate preparations are now entertained by the Committee of Arrangements, of which William J. Kelley is chairman, to make this "coming-of-age" dinner the most successful of the series. A number of prominent men are expected to be present, and Colonel John H. Black will preside, so that the prospects are that the committee will "make good." The price of the tickets for members and guests has been fixed at ten dollars. The price for a member's ticket includes the annual dues for the coming year. Applications for tickets should be addressed to the secretary, John Hovendon, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York.

At the annual meeting of the Brotherhood, held at the Sinclair House on the evening of the 5th inst., the following officers were elected to serve during the year 1906: Victor Cupples, president; Herman Schulz, vice-president, and John Hovendon, secretary and treasurer.

THE STATIONERS' BOARD OF TRADE.

THE annual dinner of the Stationers' Board of Trade will be given on Tuesday evening, February 6, in the Myrtle Room of the Waldorf-Astoria. The annual meeting of the Board will be held at its offices on Tuesday, January 2.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

DODD, MEAD & COMPANY announce that they will publish next fall a sequel to "Pam," the successful novel by the Baroness Von Hutten.

"THE HORSE IN SONG" is now known to be the work of Mr. and Mrs. Groome, who have been collecting these poems on the horse for several years.

DR. WILLIAM OSLER, formerly connected with Johns Hopkins University, has just been appointed a delegate of the Oxford University Press, Oxford, England.

ALFRED BARTLETT, of Boston, has just brought out a volume of poems by Hayden Sands, the poet of Haydensville, Mass., entitled "The Valley of Dreams."

THE OQUAGA PRESS, Deposit, N. Y., has just brought out "The Vagabond Book," by Frank Farrington, a collection of short essays and poems on the joys of outdoor life.

THE JEWISH PUBLICATION SOCIETY OF AMERICA, Philadelphia, Pa., will issue this month "A Renegade, and Other Tales," by Miss Martha Wolfenstein, author of "Idylls of the Gass."

THE C. N. CASPAR COMPANY, Milwaukee, Wis., have published four series of comic mailing cards—the Minerva, Burro, Gay Bathing Girls and Eros series. The cards are printed on a fine quality of cardboard, and are original in design and printed in lively colors.

CLAYTON F. SUMMY CO., 220 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, have published two pieces of music—"Melodrama of Hiawatha," by Saidee Knowland Coe, selections from Longfellow's poems, with musical setting for the piano; also, "The Buccaneer," a song story, with words in English and German, by Charles Noble, and music by Adolf Weidig.

THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY have just published "Hearts and Masks," a new novel by Harold MacGrath, the author of "The Man on the Box," the exhilarating gayety and zestful adventure of which should bring more closely to the author all his admirers. The book has twelve full-page drawings by Harrison Fisher and decorations by Ralph Fletcher Seymour.

PROBABLY most persons, even those acquainted with the intricacies of English pronunciation, have been pronouncing just as it is spelled the name of Mrs. Humphry Ward's latest hero, John Fenwick, in "Fenwick's Career," now running in The Century. But the ears of the true Britisher would be greatly offended by such Philistinism—the artist's name should be pronounced as if there were no "w" in it—Fen'ick.

"Do the College Entrance Requirements in Mathematics Demand a Disproportionate Time in the Secondary School Curriculum?" is the subject of a lecture to be given by Professor David Eugene Smith, the author of the Smith arithmetics, before the Association of Colleges and Preparatory Schools at Annapolis, Md., on December 2. Copies of Professor Smith's monograph, "The Outlook for Arithmetic in America," will be sent postpaid, on request, by Ginn & Company.

EDWARD J. CLODE will publish early in January Louis Tracy's "Karl Grier," the strange story of a man with a sixth sense, which has been a pronounced success serially. "Telegnomy," or Karl Grier's far-knowing sense, strictly speaking, it is claimed, is not a new sense, as one differentiates seeing from hearing, or taste from touch, but a transcendental union of human reason with animal attributes. Its range, its curiously rational limitations, are set forth in this story.

THOMAS WHITTAKER has issued a new edition of "Christian Science, What is New and What is True About It," by the late Rev. Dr. William Short, of St. Louis. The book has an introduction by Dr. Hugh Miller Thompson, late Bishop of Mississippi. He will have ready shortly the "Church Calendar," in scroll form, for vestry and study; the "Girls' Friendly Kalendar," "The Lectionary Calendar," and "Whittaker's Churchman's Almanac," for 1906, now in the fifty-second year of publication.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS will publish early next year a volume of "Letters of Madame de Staël to Benjamin Constant," which has been edited by the Baroness Nolde, a descendant of Madame de Staël and the possessor of these letters which have been handed down through the family. The epistles refer to all the prominent men of France during the period, and this will be the first time they have ever seen the public eye. The book should prove a valuable and important addition to the publications on social post-revolutionary France.

BRENTANO'S have just brought out a reprint of the Preface to "Mrs. Warren's Profession," added to the London edition of the play published by the author. Mr. Shaw calls it "The Author's Apology." In this he makes a scathing arraignment of the conditions in London that made it possible for "The Conquerors," "Iris," and "Zaza" to be produced, while the censor ruled against "Mrs. Warren's Profession." The American issue has an introduction entitled "The Tyranny of Police and Press," written by John Corbin, reprinted in part from the New York Sun. The book is issued in striking form, and comes as a timely document in the case.

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. will publish early in January the first instalment, in two volumes, of a new work by Dr. James MacKinnon, entitled "A History of Modern Liberty." Dr. MacKinnon has imposed on himself the task of tracing the development of political, intellectual and religious liberty from the Middle Ages down to recent times. These two volumes deal respectively with the origins of the subject in the Middle Ages, and with the contribution made to it by the age of the Reformation. Acton, it may be remembered, cherished the idea of writing a history of liberty, which he, unfortunately, did not carry out. Dr. MacKinnon's work promises to realize this idea, as far as modern history is concerned.

THE J. S. OGILVIE PUBLISHING COMPANY will publish shortly a work on "The First Country Park System," by Frederick W. Kelsey, of Essex County, N. J., who was the vice-president of the Board of Commissioners appointed to lay out a system of parks in New Jersey. The work gives much information in reference to parks, from Boston to San Francisco, and contains concise recommendations of value to all who may be interested in park departments, and other boards transacting public business. The book will have ten full-page illustrations. They have also nearly ready "The Right to Love," a novel by Anna Chase Deppen, who is favorably known for short stories and poems contributed to Southern periodicals.

FISCHER'S FOREIGN LETTERS, INC., Bensonhurst, N. Y., announce that the second illustrated edition of "Private Lives of William II. and His Consort," by Henry W. Fischer, is almost exhausted, only 120 sets being left for the holiday trade. This will be the last of the two-volume edition. The succeeding issues will be on lighter paper, in one volume, but not abbreviated like the British edition, published by William Heinemann, of London. Besides the English edition and a proposed Colonial edition, there are also editions in French, Italian, Swedish, Bohemian, Dutch, German, Danish, Polish, Hungarian and Japanese. The book was twice suppressed in Berlin, once in Vienna and once in Prague. The Berlin police burned up nearly a thousand copies of the book last winter.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. have in preparation a Manuscript edition of "The Complete Writings of Henry David Thoreau," handsomely illustrated with 100 photogravures from nature. The edition will consist of 20 volumes, limited to 600 signed and numbered sets, each containing a page of original manuscript. The last 14 volumes will contain "Thoreau's Journal," edited by Bradford Torrey, the larger proportion of which is material that has never before been published. The illustrations are from photographs by Herbert W. Gleason, who has made a careful study of Thoreau's writings, and has explored with equal thoroughness the woods and fields about Thoreau's home. The edition is printed in the best style of the Riverside Press, and a few sets will be bound in handsome leather with water color frontispieces.

MCCLURE, PHILLIPS & Co. are just bringing out a volume entitled "The Greek View of Life," by G. Lowes Dickinson, author of "Letters from a Chinese Official," originally published anonymously, and a number of other books. Mr. Dickinson was for some time librarian of King's College, Cambridge, and then became a lecturer of that institution, a position he now holds. With the appearance of his two books, "The Meaning of Good" and "The Greek View of Life," he took his place as leader of that group of philosophical thinkers who are making the life stuff of modern days the material of their study. Mr. Dickinson lives in Cambridge, but lectures once a week at the School of Economics in London. He has done important work as editor of the Independent Review, a monthly paper published at Edinburgh, representing liberal views, of which he was one of the founders. He visited America a few years ago, and gave lectures on the British constitution at our leading universities.

THE OLIVER DITSON COMPANY has published in their excellent Musicians' Library a volume of "Seventy Scottish Songs," edited, with accompaniments, by Helen Hopekirk. In her interesting prefatory essay on Scottish music the compiler of this collection has endeavored to explain the misconception that has arisen from the association of two racially different peoples, the Celtic Scot and the Saxon Scot, so as to help to a better appreciation of their music. The translations from the Gaelic have been made with great care or selected from sources less calculated to rob either words or music of their haunting beauty. The banal "arrangements" found in most editions are conspicuously absent, for artistic accompaniments for each song have been written by Mme. Hopekirk, with the deep sympathy and understanding of a Scot and with the artistry of an accomplished musician. These "Seventy Songs" have been gathered from the Lowlands, the Highlands, the remote mountainous regions and from the Western Isles.

A VERY ingenious history of its business has been made by Doubleday, Page & Company in the window of Brentano's, in Union Square, New York. It tells by means of concrete objects the story of the firm's expansion, beginning with the first little red book of tales published by the Doubleday & McClure Company up to this week's publications of Doubleday, Page & Co. Among the interesting exhibits are the complete manuscript of Kipling's 'The Light That Failed," part of the manuscript of "The Pit," by Frank Norris; an edition of "Bob, Son of Battle," made for the blind; the first autograph letters from Oliver Wendell Holmes and Phillips Brooks to Helen Keller, the first subscriptions for The World's Work, Country Life in America and The Garden Magazine, and the first firm catalogue of 14 pages—the catalogue now numbers 300 pages. The exhibit includes a great many interesting portraits of the Doubleday, Page & Co. authors, including Kipling, Miss Ellen Glasgow, Mrs. Eleanor Hoyt Brainerd, Ernest Thompson Seton, etc.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY have just ready volume II. of "The Life and Writings of Benjamin Franklin," edited by Professor Albert H. Smyth; "The Girl with the Green Eyes," by Clyde Fitch; "New Canterbury Tales," being volume IV. of the limited large paper edition of the works of Maurice Hewlett; "The Homes of Tennyson," painted by Helen Allingham, described by Arthur Paterson; "Burma," painted and described by R. Talbot Kelly; "A Study in Nursing," by Miss A. L. Pringle; "The Philosophy of Martineau in Relation to the Idealism of the Present Day," by Dr. Henry Jones; "Histological Studies on the Localization of Cerebral Function," by Alfred W. Campbell, M.D.; "Ideals in Art: Papers, Theoretical, Practical, Critical," by Walter Crane; a third edition of "A General View of the History of the English Bible," by Brooke Foss Westcott, revised by William Aldis Wright; "The Prevention of Senility, and a Sanitary Outlook," two lectures by Sir James Crichton-Browne;" and "Emerson's Essays," edited by Eugene D. Holmes, in Macmillan's Pocket Classics Series. They will publish at once "Vikings of the Pacific," by Miss Agnes C. Laut, stories of the adventurers who came from the West Eastward—Bering, Drake, Cook, Benyousky, Gray, Vancouver, Ledyard and other soldiers of fortune; also, in the Globe Library a one-volume edition of "The Diary of Samuel Pepys," with a preface, introduction and notes by G. Gregory Smith.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted" book-trade subscribers are given the privilege of a free advertisement for books out of print, of five nonpareil lines, exclusive of address, in any issue except special numbers, to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents a line, and amount should be inclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents a line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents a nonpareil line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents a nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

BOOKS WANTED.

☞ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

☞ Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly" does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

Reviewers Unite in Praising

Shakespeare's Sweetheart

By SARA HAWKS STERLING

8vo, cloth, 5 full-page illustrations in color, and marginal decorations on every page, $2.00

Read these extracts from the first five reviews received:

"It is an ideal love story, told with infinite sympathy and fascination. It is all naive, poetic and ingenious. The book itself is a delight to the eye. Rarely has the publisher so artistically adorned a tale. Cover, type, decorations and illustrations are not only attractive, but they reflect so sympathetically the spirit of the work that one is convinced that there may be such a thing as the art of publishing."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

"A real surprise is this, and one to be enjoyed hugely. It is sweetly written. To the lover of ordinary romance it will present an irresistible power of interest."—Book News.

"For a person of literary tastes, there is nothing so promising for a Christmas present in the book line as 'Shakespeare's Sweetheart.'"—The Sunday Oregonian.

"'Tis a pretty tale indeed, and told in the manner of the time. It makes an attractive book, with many handsome illustrations, square in form, and boxed for Christmas."
—Philadelphia Evening Telegraph.

"It is one of the striking gift-books of the season."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Bright Ideas for Entertaining

By Mrs. HERBERT B. LINSCOTT

Published in August

Fourth Printing

16mo, cloth, 50c.

GEORGE W. JACOBS & CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

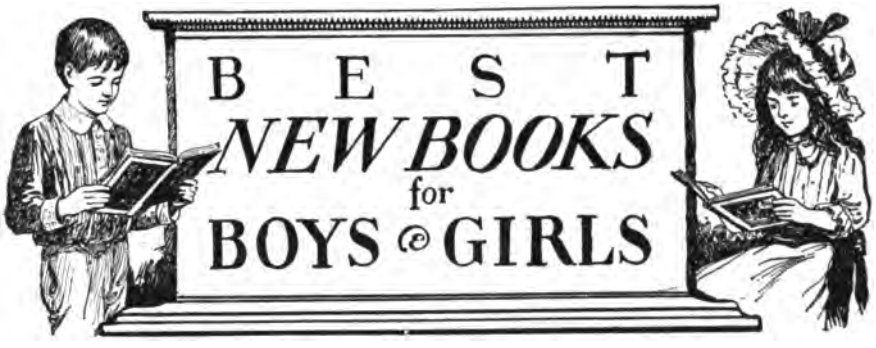
JUST READY

The Second (or Supplementary Volume) of the

American Catalog 1900-1905

The second volume of the new "American Catalog, 1900, '01, '02, '03, 04," is now ready for delivery.

The first volume, issued in June last, is a complete record in itself, being a dictionary-catalog of all books recorded between January 1, 1900, and January 1, 1905. In its one alphabet every book is entered at least three times (by author, title and subject), with information as to size, price, publisher, year of issue, etc. It forms the latest addition to the old series of the "American Catalogue," published in quarto form, while the newest volume is an octavo, which is generally conceded to be a much handier shape. We can reasonably affirm that every dealer needs such a permanent catalog in his business, while every library of importance should have this standard bibliographical work on its shelves, since its usefulness in the world of books is on a par with a time-table in the railroad world.



The second, or supplementary volume, contains the full title entries, with annotations, given in the "Weekly Record" of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY during the five years 1900, '01, '02, '03, '04, cumulated into one alphabet for each year; that is, into five alphabets. This is planned to answer the demands of librarians, booksellers and others who wish this valuable material, in available shape, for classifying and describing and for permanent reference.

For the book dealer the second volume is a very useful record of book valuation. It gives in form for ready reference brief descriptive notices of the important books published during the period mentioned, describing concisely the contents of each work and explaining many titles which, in themselves, mean little or nothing or are misleading. For descriptive cataloging, a bibliographical work of this kind is almost priceless.

The two volumes are uniformly bound in half morocco. The price is $12.00 for both or $7.50 for either separately. The edition is limited, but 240 copies of the first volume and 145 of the second volume remain unsold. We reserve the right to advance the price when the balance of either is reduced to 100 copies.

STORIES FOR GIRLS

Betty Wales, Freshman

By MARGARET WARDE. Betty and her friends are typical American college girls, clever, jolly, high-spirited and lovable. They get all the fun and good possible out of their freshman year. Any one who meets them will wish to know them well. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

Betty Wales, Sophomore

By MARGARET WARDE. Those who knew Betty as a Freshman will be eager to follow her into Sophomore year. She and her friends are more interesting than ever. There is in every chapter the delightful atmosphere of the American College for girls. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

Polly the Gringo

By EVELYN RAYMOND. "Gringo" was a term applied by the Spanish natives of California to "Americanos" before California was in the Union. Polly Pancoast's father and brother went to California, and Polly followed them alone. Her experiences form a story of unusual charm in character and incident. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

An American Girl in Korea

By ANNIE M. BARNES. This very timely book offers a fascinating glimpse of the strange "Hermit Country." Margaret, although imprisoned in the underground dungeon of a monastery by Buddhist priests, whose mysterious rites she has witnessed, escapes and also frees a young artist. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

STORIES FOR BOYS

Winning His Way to West Point

By CAPT. PAUL B. MALONE, U. S. A. A thrilling story of a young recruit in the Philippines after the transfer to the United States. The scenes are those of camp, skirmish and battle. As a result of his bravery the hero wins an appointment to West Point. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

A Plebe at West Point

By CAPT. PAUL B. MALONE, U. S. A. Douglas Atwell won his cadetship by his bravery in the Philippines, and now appears at West Point. Capt Malone knows the cadet life at first hand, and his story will stir the blood of every reader. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

Fighting King George

By JOHN T. McINTYRE. Tom Deering was one of "Marion's Men," those fleet and daring riders who so baffled Tarleton and Clinton in the Carolinas. Tom sees lots of fighting and has the good fortune to be at Yorktown when Cornwallis gives up his sword. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

The Lost Expedition

By W. BERT FOSTER. This story, of how a professor and two young companions were lost on an Alaskan glacier, and how they escaped death in a dozen forms, has all the fascination of the old Arctic exploration narratives, with the zest of a stirring plot as well. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

STORIES FOR YOUNGER CHILDREN

Marjorie's Way

By ALICE TURNER CURTIS. Marjorie had two aims—to be like her aunt, and to help Luke Saunders. Luke turned out well and Marjorie did become like her aunt in a surprising way. A very wholesome and charming story. Cloth, illustrated, $1.00.

The Boynton Pluck

By HELEN WARD BANKS. Bob and Billy by mistake get into the hands of a mean old farmer, who overworks and half starves them. It takes pluck to stand it, but they pull through it, and are all the better for their experience. Cloth, illustrated, $1.00.

For Younger Readers

The Wonderful Wishes of Jacky and Jean

By MARY A. DICKERSON

Six full-page illustrations in colors by C. B. FALLS.
Quarto, cloth decorative, $1.00.

Miss Dickerson's modern version of Aladdin and his lamp and the mysterious sparrow will delight children. The stories are told with quaint humor, delightfully contrasting Jack's love of the supernatural and Jean's matter of fact point of view.

The Pied Piper of Hamelin

By ROBERT BROWNING

With full-page and text illustrations in color by VAN DYCK. Quarto, boards, $1.25

The Lewis Carroll Birthday Book

Edited by CHRISTINE TERHUNE HERRICK

16mo, cloth decorative. Illustrated, 75 cents.

A selection from the best of Lewis Carroll, with illustrations by Tenniel, printed on bond paper, with decorative border, making an altogether unique and amusing year book for children.

KARL GRIER

By LOUIS TRACY

Author of "The Wings of the Morning," "The Great Mogul," etc.

Karl Grier has a sixth sense—and Louis Tracy tells about it. These two statements mean a great story—mystic, dramatic and romantic. It is a splendid dream made real.

The Arncliffe Puzzle

By GORDON HOLMES

Author of "A Mysterious Disappearance."

"THE ARNCLIFFE PUZZLE" is Gordon Holmes's latest great story of mystery and romance.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & Co. have prepared for this holiday season a series of Thin Paper Classics, printed in readable type on a thin, but opaque paper, and attractively bound in flexible leather that has proved an instant success. The series includes the best works of the most popular writers, such as "Adam Bede," "Ivanhoe," "Jane Eyre," "Lorna Doone," "Marble Faun," "Notre Dame," and a dozen others. The publishers request orders by telegraph at their own expense from booksellers who may be in immediate need of this series.

JOHN LANE COMPANY publish a new book by Vernon Lee, entitled "The Spirit of Rome," in which she writes in her characteristic style of the many treasures and points of interest in the Holy City; "The Story of the Princess des Ursins in Spain," by Constance Hill, a romantic story of the mistress of the Queen's Household in the new Bourbon Court of Madrid, to which the Princess des Ursins was appointed by Louis XIV., with illustrations from old paintings; also, "Last Poems—translations from the Book of Indian Love," a posthumous volume of verse by "Laurence Hope," the wife of Lieutenant-General Malcolm Nicolson, who died a year ago.

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY have just brought out "The Memories of Rose Eytinge," who was for years connected with Wallack's, the Union Square and Daly's theatres in New York, and who knew and played with nearly all the greater lights in this country and in England. She travelled much and lived in various parts of America, Europe and Africa —the latter in Alexandria and Cairo, as the wife of the U. S. Consul-General to that country—and her book, besides her recollections of the stage, is also full of interesting reminiscences of countries and people. They have also just ready "The Heart of Lady Anne," a new novel by Agnes and Egerton Castle, full of the spirit of old-time English comedy and beautifully illustrated in color by Ethel Franklin Betts and decorations by Frederick Garrison Hall.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have just brought out "The Life of Froude," by Herbert Paul, one of the most important biographies of the year. Warned, perhaps, by the unfortunate experience of Froude himself in publishing the biography of his old friend Carlyle, his family at first opposed all attempts to write a biography of their father, and actually destroyed a large number of Froude's letters after his death. Mr. Paul, however, overcame the obstacles and obtained permission from Miss Margaret Froude to use such written material as existed, besides obtaining from her such facts, dates and papers as were essential to the accuracy of his narrative. Besides this valuable material, Mr. Paul also was permitted to use the letters of Froude to the late Countess of Derby, and obtained assistance from Sir Thomas Sanderson, Lord Derby's executor; from Cardinal Newman's literary representative, Edward Bellaisis; Arthur Clough, son of Froude's early friend; from James Rye, of Balliol, who made a careful examination into the charges made against Froude by Professor Freeman, and others of equal importance. The result has been an octavo volume of upwards of 450 pages, covering the subject authoritatively from Froude's childhood till his death in a style that holds the attention of the reader from cover to cover.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.

☞ The prices of net books published under the rules of the American Publishers' Association are preceded in this list by a double asterisk , and the word net follows the price. The prices of fiction (not net) published under the rules are preceded by a dagger †. Another of the author's love tales of the time of the Georges, picturing the gay life of London, its gaming, its routs, its intrigues, its artificialities. Lady Anne, "French Nan," as she is called, is married in haste to an English country squire, with whom she finds life a very dull affair. Yet after her various tantrums, she is surprised by her husband's willing consent to her visiting in London her friend Kitty Bellairs, now the Lady Kilcroney. How the rebellious wife disports herself in society, how she and Kitty fall out, how the country husband resorts to subterfuge to win back his errant wife, is told in true comedy style.

Cicero, Marcus Tullius. Cicero De senectute and De amicitia; with explanatory notes and a vocabulary by E. P. Crowell; rev. by B: W. Mitchell. N. Y., Hinds, Noble & Eldredge, [1905.] c. 5-231+71 p. 12°, (Chase and Stuart's new classical ser.) cl., 95 c.

The first volume follows the history of Venice through the 15th century; the second brings it up to the present time. This is neither a guide book nor a dry history; but Mr. Crawford has given us "a novelist's treatment of a novelistic place," exercising his powers of imagination while not departing from the lines of truth. Such subjects as The last magistrates, The last great ladies, The last Doges, Manners and customs of the Venetians, etc., are separately treated. Appended are lists of the Doges, a table of dates, list of eminent men and women connected with Venice, and a three-page list of books consulted.

Crockett, S: Rutherford. Sir Toady Crusoe; il. by Gordon Browne. N. Y., F: A. Stokes Co., [1905.] 10+356 p. O. cl., †$1.50.

The adventures of two boys and a girl in a picturesque spot on the Scottish coast Sir Toady Crusoe, the irrepressible, incorrigible, lovable youngster who figured in "Sir Toady Lion," again leads others into mischief and resourcefully extricates them. He and Dinky go off on an expedition to rescue the girl who has run away from home. They have amazing experiences on a light-house island, and at length return home so that Toady may act as go-between and matchmaker for his older brother who is grievously in love.

Crosby, Ernest. Garrison, the non-resistant. Chic., Public Publishing Co., [1905.] c. 141 p. por. S. cl., *50 c. net.

A sympathetic sketch of the career of William Lloyd Garrison, the great abolitionist, whose centenary of birth occurred Dec. 10, 1905. Discussions are included regarding the propriety of overcoming slavery by war and of the promotion of reform by peaceful methods, and a consideration, from an entirely original point of view, of the results of the Civil War in the South and in the North.

Danziger, Gustave Adolphe. Children of fate: a story of passion. N. Y., Brentano's, 1905. c. 8+340 p. D. cl., †$1.25.

A story of the suffering of the Jews in Poland before it was annexed by Russia in the time of Napoleon I. Joseph Rosen studied under a Jewish rabbi, later under a Christian priest; and devoted himself wholly to the good of his suffering countrymen. He was supposed to look like the Christ and he lived a life of total self-abnegation.

Ibsen has often expressed his intention of writing his autobiography, but has been stricken by illness before accomplishing it. This collection of letters, it is thought, will in many respects take the place of the contemplated arts biography. Extending over a period of more than fifty years, the letters provide us with a direct presentment of the man during the changing conditions of his life and his friendships, and contain much of both biographical and literary interest that has never before been made public.

Different parts of the house are considered in turn—the hall, "den," library, living room, dining room, kitchen, etc., and appropriate furnishings and decorations suggested for each. Pt. 2 is made up of chapters on furniture, wall hangings, pictures, mantels, the pottery shelf, the afternoon tea, book shelves and other special features. The author's desire is to help one to attain "harmony, simplicity and refinement" in furnishing a home.

Keith, J: Alex. Hull. Elementary education, its problems and processes. Chic., Scott, Foresman & Co., 1905. 325 p. D. cl., $1.25.
By the Professor of Pedagogy and Assistant in Psychology, Northern Illinois State Normal School. He believes that "efficiency in teaching is the outcome of persistent effort based on progressive insight into the nature of the processes involved." The book, therefore, deals with the concrete processes and problems with which every teacher is familiar, working from this material by analysis, description and argument to educational principles, and introducing in simple form the fundamental psychological truths on which knowledge is based. Emphasis is also laid upon education as a concrete social process.

Camden, S. C., is one of the oldest towns in this country, having been laid out according to an act of the Council of George II. in 1734 as the township of Fredericksburg, later known as Camden. This history, prepared from local records and documents in the state archives at Columbia and Charleston, traces the development of Camden and its vicinity from earliest days. The first volume is devoted to the Colonial and Revolutionary periods, and shows the important part this community played in national affairs. It has been the home of men who have figured largely in the political life of state and nation. Vol. 2 will continue the record through the 19th century.

Tells the story of the first great heroic period of the West. At the same time that the early explorers of New France were pressing from the east, westward, a tide of adventure had set across Siberia and the Pacific, eastward. Eventually these two tides met and coalesced in the great fur trade that won the West. The first part of the book deals with the Russians on the Pacific coast; next the American and English adventurers are considered, while the concluding chapters treat of the Russian-American Fur Company. For obvious reasons the Spaniards of the Southwest have not been included.

Seffy, slow-witted, unassertive, is the son of a Pennsylvania German whose love for his son is almost equalled by his longing for a certain piece of meadow land. Seffy's timid wooing of Sally, who owns the meadow, goes awry. Sally marries the wrong man from pique; and the old father drives his son from home in a moment of madness. Five years later the son returns, self-confident and successful, to find his father and the girl he loves comforting each other while awaiting his return.

Also a list of the names of continental, English, Scotch and such American makers as could be found, to facilitate classification. The second half of the book takes up the household utensils in copper and brass in use about the same time as the pewter, with special attention given to the Russian articles brought to this country by immigrants, and imitated by East Side makers. Old plated ware, known indiscriminately as Sheffield plate, is also considered, its manufacture explained, means of identifying pointed out, and best known makers listed.

THE POSTMASTER-GENERAL'S REPORT.

IT may seem disappointing to many friends of postal progress that the new Postmaster-General has presented a report which gives more emphasis perhaps to reform within the service than to improvements that would be more directly felt by the public. But it is to be remembered that housecleaning is a first necessity in the Department, and that the new Postmaster-General is a business executive who means to have old things right before he ventures on new things. It is, therefore, scarcely to be regretted that he postpones for further consideration a number of questions, such especially as a Postal Telegraph and Postal Savings Bank, which, though much discussed, are not of immediate necessity.

The Postmaster-General, in fact, states that he is less concerned with a seeming deficit than in getting and giving value in the postal service. He points out that the deficit, though increasingly large, is proportionately less than the amount of matter carried free, and he recommends that the Government departments be charged with their own postal expenses, as is the case in England, and that the use of penalty envelopes and the franking privilege be curtailed, if not abolished. It cannot be assumed that the deficit would be entirely overcome by charging postage on free matter, for not so much free matter would be sent; but some such provision would be an important step in reform and should be heartily supported by the press and the public.

In regard to second-class matter the Postmaster-General and Third Assistant Postmaster-General point out that considerable saving has been effected by excluding books published as periodicals from second-class bulk rates, and urge strongly that there be new legislation entirely revising classification on the simplest possible method, which would do away with the present difficult and ridiculous definitions and limitations connected with the bulk rate. It is probably a fallacy to assume that second-class matter costs the Government five cents a pound, or anything like the average rate, because the conditions of handling are so much simpler—but bold reform in this direction is none the less needed. The recommendations of the reports are for a simple division into first-class, covering letters, postal cards, postcards and sealed material, second-class, covering newspapers and periodicals, and third-class, covering merchandise and other material—the last at a rate of one cent for two ounces instead of the present rate of one cent for each ounce.

The Postmaster-General refers to the new money order system which will go into effect with the new year, but this is also rather an improvement in method of administration than in public convenience. The question of a postal note or its equivalent is discussed at length by the First Assistant Postmaster-General, and the suggestion of a commission to make recommendations to Congress should be heartily seconded. In respect to rural free delivery, which is the great postal advance of the past decade, the Postmaster-General suggests curtailment on one side to make possible development on the other, but he makes no suggestions as to recent methods which will bring about "the full wagon" and thus reduce proportionately the cost of rural routes while increasing their facilities.

The Postmaster-General may be trusted to give during the ensuing year careful study to possible improvements as well as needed reform, and his second Annual Report will doubtless be more positively an advance than his first could possibly be made.

BOOKS IN DEMAND IN ENGLAND.

ACCORDING to the London Book Monthly the following books have sold best in England during November:

The Lake, by George Moore.
The Irrational Knot, by G. Bernard Shaw.
The Princess Priscilla's Fortnight, by the author of "Elizabeth and her German Garden."
The Man from America, by Mrs. Henry de la Pasture.
The Cherry Riband, by S. R. Crockett.
Baby Bullet, by Lloyd Osbourne.
Mrs. Brookfield and Her Circle.

THE WORK OF THE POST-OFFICE.

POSTMASTER-GENERAL GEORGE B. CORTELYOU in introducing his report for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1905, points out that he has restricted himself strictly to a consideration of those having the most immediate and practical interest.

Beginning with the financial condition of the department, the Postmaster-General points out that the total receipts from all sources in 1905 were $152,826,585.10 and the total expenditures $167,399,169.23, leaving a deficit of $14,572,584.13, that is, an increase in the deficit of $5,793,094.77.

The Postmaster-General, however, states that the deficit, though increasingly large, is proportionately less than the amount of matter carried free.

PARCELS POST.

The establishing of a domestic parcels post in this country where distances are so great and a uniform rate of postage is so firmly established as a sound principle of postal administration, he thought would probably involve either a high rate of postage or a temporary deficit in the effort to compete with the several express companies organized for handling parcels under the zone system, charging in proportion to distance carried. He does not therefore deem it wise to ask authority of Congress for the establishment of a separate parcels post in the domestic service, but makes an earnest recommendation that third and fourth class mail matter be merged at the rate of 1 cent for 2 ounces.

As to foreign parcels post, twenty-eight conventions were in operation at the close of the fiscal year 1905, between this and other countries, six of them being in the Eastern Hemisphere. Parcels exchanged with countries in the Western Hemisphere may weigh up to 11 pounds (5 kilograms) and are not limited as to value; but parcels exchanged with countries in the Eastern Hemisphere must not weigh more than 4 pounds 6 ounces each (2 kilograms) nor exceed $50 in value.

NEW FORM OF MONEY ORDER.

On January 28, 1905, the Postmaster-General appointed a commission to devise a new money-order blank that would prevent, as far as possible, the altering or raising of money orders. After a thorough investigation of the subject, the commission, which was composed of the purchasing agent, the superintendent of the divison of money orders, and the chief inspector, on August 8, 1905, submitted a report recommending a form of order which it is believed will do away with many of the objections that have been urged against the old form. The principal features of the new order are the "safety paper" upon which it is printed, the use of the marginal check, and the insertion in the body of the order of the name of the remitter and the address of the payee. Changes have been made in the form of money-order advice to correspond with those in the order. The new blanks are being issued to postmasters as fast as their supplies of the old blanks are exhausted.

A communication from First Assistant Postmaster-General F. H. Hitchcock is quoted regarding a postal note as a convenient means of transmitting small sums through the mails. Mr. Hitchcock reviews the history of the postal-note business and suggests the appointment of a competent committee to consider and report upon the advisabiiity of recommending to Congress the enactment of legislation on this subject.

FRANKING AND SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

As to "Government free" matter, now carried under the franks of members of Congress, and the handling of second-class mail matter, the Postmaster-General concurs with the recommendation of the Third Assistant Postmaster-General, whose report is given below. In closing his remarks on second-class matter Mr. Cortelyou says: "I do not venture to suggest the rate of postage to be charged upon printed matter as a class, or upon any divisions thereof which may be decided upon, but it is hoped that there be no delay in bringing about less complicated conditions of classification. In connection with this subject I am prompted to say that, aside from the first class of mail matter (letters, postal cards, and post cards), the whole scheme of mail classification is sorely in need of revision in order to place the mail service of the country on a businesslike basis."

In summing up his report the Postmaster-General says: "There are two prime requisites to a successful administration of the postal service. First. Merit as a controlling factor in appointment and promotion. Second. Business efficiency in the broadest sense, and this, of course, includes proper economy. With these requisites in view there can be far-reaching improvement in the following directions: A stricter adherence to the rule that postmasters shall be appointed primarily on a basis of fitness; a more precise method of determining the compensation to be paid to railroads and other agencies for the transportation of the mails; a more thorough organization of the rural free delivery service and a closer inspection of it, which, while insuring every needed extension, shall prevent the giving of these facilities where they are not warranted; a simpler classification of mail matter, as follows: First, letters; second, printed matter; third, merchandise; and a more stringent restriction of the franking privilege."

REPORT OF THIRD ASSISTANT POSTMASTER-GENERAL.

Third Assistant Postmaster-General Edwin C. Madden, referring to order 875, dated July 26, 1900, with regard to postage rates on newspapers and periodicals, reports that great confusion resulted from that order. There was also much loss of revenue due to the interpretation and effect of it. Conditions are the same and complications are increasing, but I anticipate that before long the whole matter will be adjusted.

THE FRANKING AND PENALTY PRIVILEGES.

The franking and penalty privileges are, by reason of their nature, subject to abuses, a precise and accurate description of which is not possible at the present time; but in view of experience already had I feel impelled to say that the interests of the Government and of this Department would be best subserved if those two privileges were abolished altogether, and if it were required, as was formerly the case, that all mail matter be prepaid at the regular postage rates. The effect of this would be that the various departments of the Government would be required to place postage stamps upon their mail matter, or to purchase stamped envelopes. This change alone would have created additional revenue enough within the past year to have obliterated the deficit in the postal revenue and left a surplus over expenditures of several millions.

SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

In the book abuse alone reports from the post-offices at New York and Chicago, which are the only ones so far received, show that the reform has resulted in the elimination from the second class of approximately 4,000,000 pounds a year at those two offices. As the cost of handling this matter is estimated at between 5 and 8 cents a pound, as against the 1 cent a pound formerly received as postage, the saving upon so much of this matter as is no longer sent in the mails is itself not inconsiderable. Upon that portion which may now be sent in the mails the third-class rate is required, which is 1 cent for each 2 ounces or fraction thereof, or not less than 8 cents a pound where the package is of even weight. This is 7 cents a pound more than was formerly required. In other respects the reform of the abuses of this privilege at New York alone has resulted in the elimination from the second class of approximately 16,000,000 pounds of matter. Data will be secured later to show more fully what has been accomplished generally and the effect. It is too early yet for such an inquiry.

The point has been reached, however, in the administration of this subject and the conduct of this reform where I feel it my duty to say that the interests of all concerned—the public, the publishers, and the Government—will be best served by a repeal of the act of March 3, 1879, and the enactment in lieu thereof of a law which will establish this class of mail matter upon simpler and less ideal distinctions. The present statute requires altogether too much interpretation, too much regulation, and the exercise of too much executive discretion. The rate of postage for mere mail service should not depend upon such complicated questions as to require experts to determine what comes within and what does not come within the law. Indeed, a new law is sorely needed. The present act is woefully out of date. A uniformly correct administration of it is a matter of exceeding difficulty.

A great number of collateral questions arising in almost every case are necessary to be decided before the mere question of rates can be settled; and even after the admission of a newspaper or periodical to the second class, proper conditions having been established, it is possible within the shortest space of time for a publisher to so change the character of his publication that it becomes an abuse. Once in, it cannot be reached and rejected promptly enough to save the Government from serious loss because of carrying at a cent a pound, or free, matter subject, when the facts are ascertained, to at least 8 cents a pound.

MAIL CLASSIFICATION.

As to mail classification laws, Mr. Madden urges for submission to Congress the question of a thorough revision of all laws in relation to the classification of mail matter except that of the first class.

The matter of classifying the mails Mr. Madden claims should be so simple that any postmaster, or any other person, ought to be able to determine the rate accurately and beyond doubt. There should be no necessity for a postmaster, when matter is presented for mailing, to submit the question to the Department for the consideration of experts in order to determine what rate should be charged, as is now so often necessary under our complicated classification system.

SUMMARY OF RECOMMENDATIONS.

In concluding his report Mr. Madden summarizes his recommendations as follows:

I. That Congress be asked to enact a provision making an exception of the purchase of stamped paper from the prohibition against expending money in excess of appropriations for supplies. (Deficiency act, Mar. 3, 1905.)

II. That existing law which provides a penalty for the making of false returns of business by postmasters be so amended as to penalize such acts of postmasters and others as implicate them in the willful diversion of mail matter from one post-office to another for the purpose of improperly increasing the compensation of any postmaster or securing allowances for any post-office, or both. (Act of June 17, 1878; see sec. 1578, P. L. and R.)

III. That Congress be asked to enact a provision prohibiting the use upon matter distributed from house to house by private persons, outside the mails, of the distinguishing marks required by the Postal Laws and Regulations upon matter which is mailed without stamps affixed, under the provisions of the act of April 28, 1904.

IV. That Congress be asked to enact a provision which will permit postmasters, under the direction of the Postmaster-General, to deposit Government moneys at their own risk and in their official capacity in any bank in the town, city, or county in which their post-offices are located, or in any adjacent county within reasonable radii of their post-offices, even though in another State, if in said town, city, or county, or within said reasonable radii, there is no designated depository of the United States.

V. That Congress be asked to enact that the penalty and franking privileges, or at least the latter, be abolished, and that appropriations be made for the postage expenses of the members of Congress and of the several Departments, or at least the latter.

VI. That Congress be asked to enact similar provisions for the classification of all mail matter and to subdivide all mail matter into three classes, the first class to consist of letters, postal cards and post cards, and all matter sealed against inspection; the second class to consist of all printed matter, with special provision for the treatment of, and a special rate for, newspapers and periodicals; the third class to consist of all matter not included in the first two; the rate of postage for each class and the subdivisions of the second class to be determined after a consideration of the cost of the service rendered and the necessities for revenue.

VII. That Congress be asked to enact, in the event of the failure of the next preceding recommendation, that the third and fourth classes of mail be consolidated.

THE WINSTON CO. SUCCEEDS TO WILLIAM COLLINS CO'S AMERICAN BRANCH.

THE JOHN C. WINSTON COMPANY has purchased the entire stock and goodwill of The William Collins Company's American business, which was opened in New York last year and which at once gained an important and strong foothold in the American trade. The line of clear-type Bibles of The William Collins Son & Company, Ltd., of London, contains many exclusive editions, among them being Red Letter Bibles, with the words of Christ printed in red, and some fine Bibles on India paper. All of these numbers have been added to the International Series of Bibles published by the Winston Company, and makes this one of the largest line of Bibles in the world. It contains Bibles in all styles of binding, and from pearl to pica type, a full series of India paper Bibles in all sizes of type from pearl to long primer, and Text, Reference, Workers' and Teachers' Bibles, with fullest and most authoritative helps to Bible study, together with all styles of Testaments and Testaments with Psalms.

Among the books published by the Collins Company which will now be included in Winston's list are the Forward Series for boys and girls, containing eight color plates; the Young People's Library, with eight to sixteen full-page color plates: the new Standard Library with eight to sixteen full-page colored plates and pictorial covers; the Herriot Library of standard titles, printed from new heavy faced type, with numerous full-page illustrations; and the Handy Illustrated Pocket Novels, consisting of standard novels printed on very thin paper from a new large type. The Collins line also contains a one-volume edition of Shakespeare, printed on thin paper in clear type, with numerous illustrations, and in a superb India paper edition which is less than one inch in thickness. In the same list appears also the Illustrated Stage Shakespeare, in forty volumes, and the Gem Shakespeare, in six volumes, on India paper. A particularly good series of illustrated poets is offered in several bindings, and there is also included in the catalogue "The Graphic Dictionary of the English Language," printed compactly in especially large type. A large number of children's toy books, elaborately made in colors, and little folks' picture books will be added to the Winston line and carried by their salesmen during the coming year.

IN HONOR OF FRANKLIN'S 200TH BIRTHDAY.

THE PENNSYLVANIA SOCIETY, on the evening of December 12, gave a dinner to commemorate the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin, although the actual date is January 17, 1906. J. Hampden Robb, president of the society, presided at the dinner. The speakers were Postmaster-General Cortelyou, who spoke on "Franklin, the Postmaster-General;" General Horace Porter, on "Franklin, the Diplomat;" Frederick P. Fish, of Boston, on "Franklin, the Scientist," and Professor Albert H. Smyth, of Central High School, of Philadelphia, and editor of a new edition of Franklin's writings, on "Franklin, the Man of Letters," and George A. Post, on "Franklin, the American."

Exercises began with a procession of flags into the Astor Gallery, which was used as a place of assembly. The dinner having a colonial character, the flags were preceded by a fifer and a drummer in colonial costume. The first flag was a provincial flag of Pennsylvania, designed by Benjamin Franklin. The flags were employed again in a procession of guests of honor as they moved into the dinner hall.

Souvenirs of the dinner consisted of a Franklin plate, decorated with a portrait of the philosopher, the border containing the seal of the society, the arms of Franklin and arms of the States of New York and Pennsylvania. A portrait of Franklin, engraved in steel for the society by Samuel Collyer, was a feature of the menu.

Mr. Cortelyou, in his address, told how in 1737 Franklin had been appointed Postmaster of Philadelphia, his wife assisting him in his duties. In 1753 he became Deputy Postmaster-General of the Colonies, he and his associates having a salary between them of £600, "if they could get it," as Franklin expressed it. When Postmaster-General he made his brother John postmaster in Boston and his brother Peter postmaster in Philadelphia. When the brothers died he assisted the two widows, establishing one in the printing business and continuing the other as postmistress, thus making her, so far as is known, the first woman to hold public office in America. He was removed from his position in 1774 because of his active sympathies with the colonists.

OBITUARY NOTES.

PAUL MEURICE, the French author and dramatist, died in Paris, December 11, aged eighty-five. Meurice is chiefly noted for his literary connection with Victor Hugo's family, having helped to edit L'Evénement in 1848, and at the end of the Second Empire in editing Hugo's organ, Le Rappel. He was appointed literary executor of Victor Hugo, with Auguste Vacquerie, and brought out the forty-six volume edition of Hugo's works. His chief literary merit was his effort to introduce Shakespeare, as seen through romantic glasses, to the French. He was the adapter of the version of "Hamlet" which the Comédie Française presents, as well as of other plays, and also brought out an "Antigone," after Sophocles, that still holds the stage.

COLONEL SAMUEL ADAMS DRAKE, the historian, died at Kennebunkport, Me., December 4. Colonel Drake was born in Boston, in December, 1833, the son of Samuel G. Drake, a well-known author and publisher. He served in the war between the States with the First Regiment of Kansas Infantry, and was engaged in military operations in Kansas and Missouri. He wrote twenty-three books mostly relating to historic events in New England and the Middle West, among which are "Old Landmarks of Boston," "The Making of the Great West," "The Making of Virginia," "Our Colonial Homes," "On Plymouth Rock," "The Myths and Fables of To-day," etc. For twenty years he had labored on, but not completed, a history of the United States which his father began.

SIR RICHARD CLAVERHOUSE JEBB, Regius professor of Greek at Cambridge University, died on December 9. Professor Jebb was born at Dundee, August 27, 1841, and was graduated from Trinity College, Cambridge, in 1862. He became a fellow and lecturer in his alma mater in 1863. In 1871 he became governor of the Charterhouse school, and the next year became a classical examiner in the University of London, and was also appointed tutor in Trinity College. These posts he resigned in 1875 to accept the chair of Greek in the University of Glasgow. This place he held with increasing distinction until 1889, when he was elected Regius professor of Greek at Cambridge University, a post he held until his death. He was an authority in Greek, and wrote and edited many volumes on his favorite subject, among them being a complete edition of Sophocles, with notes, in eight volumes; "The Characters of Theophrastus," "Attic Orators," "Richard Bentley," "Homer," "Modern Greece," "Lectures on Greek Poetry" and "Humanism in Education." His Johns Hopkins lectures, delivered in 1892, were published under the title "The Growth and Influence of Classical Greek Poetry." He was knighted in 1900.

EDWARD ATKINSON, the social and political reformer and publicist, died suddenly on way to his office, on December 11, in Boston, aged seventy-eight. Mr. Atkinson was born in Brookline, Mass., February 10, 1827. He was brought up in the commission business, and from 1848 to 1877 was connected as clerk and manager with several manufacturing concerns. He was subsequently made president of the Boston Manufacturers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company, which he helped to establish. But long before that time he had gained public recognition as an effective speaker upon economic questions, especially in connection with financial and transportation matters, and as a most industrious pamphleteer. The matters treated in his voluminous writings include banking, cotton manufacture, free trade and protection, and the mechanical arts. His published works include "Cheap Cotton by Free Labor," "The Collection of Revenue," "Argument for the Conditional Reform of the Legal Tender Act," "Our National Domain," "Labor and Capital —Allies, Not Enemies," "The Fire Engineer, the Architect, and the Underwriter," "The Railroads of the United States," "Cotton Manufacturers of the United States," "What is a Bank?" "Right Methods of Preventing Fires in Mills," "The Railway and the Farmer," "The Influence of Boston Capital Upon Manufacturers," "The Distribution of Products," etc. He also published a series of monographs on economic questions in various periodicals and numerous addresses on different subjects.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

Moody's Magazine is the title of a new monthly review for investors, bankers and men of affairs, the first issue of which has just been published by the Moody Corporation, 35 Nassau Street, New York. The issue contains critical comments on current events by the editor, Byron W. Holt; a symposium on the increasing supply of gold, by Horace White, Professors John B. Clark and Irving Fisher, John De Witt Warner and others; original articles, correspondence and book reviews.

New Shakespeareana for January, 1906, will contain verbatim the complaint, answer and decree in the chancery suit brought by Shakespeare and others, April 26, 1615, recently discovered by Professor Charles William Wallace, of the University of Nebraska, while searching in the public records office in London, where they had lain unsuspected for almost three hundred years. There is also an interesting paper, "What Actors Have Done for Shakespearean Biograph," besides the usual features. Three more portraits of Shakespeare, the Dugdale, Roubilliac and Fournier, are printed and described, together with five newly discovered documents proving that Shakespeare never visited Scotland.

The Gentleman's Magazine was started in 1731, not 1729, as inadvertently stated in our issue for December 2. Edward Cave, the founder of the magazine, was succeeded by David Henry and Richard Cave, who were in turn succeeded by Newberry, whose name first appears on the magazine in 1767, John Nichols and others. New series followed new series, the antiquarian matter growing ever more and more in bulk, until a change came in the early sixties of the nineteenth century, when Chapman & Hall became its publishers, and popular writers like Dutton Cook appeared in its columns, and Henry Kingsley contributed, as a serial story, "Maiden Mathilde." In 1868 it came under the editorship of Gowing, who was followed in time by Joseph Hatton and Joseph Knight.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

THE "Catalogo Generale della Libreria Italiana dall' Anno 1847 a tutto il 1899," compiled by Professor Attilio Pagliaini, librarian of the Genoa University, has just been completed. The first part appeared in October, 1900, and the last part was published last month. The work forms three large octavo volumes of 2595 pages, and records about a quarter of a million titles or editions. Each entry gives, in exceedingly small but clear type, and in a severely condensed form, the name of author, title of work, size, number of pages and price. The editor of the work did not confine himself to Italian books issued in Italy, but has also included all books of which he could find trace that were printed in Italian in other countries. The book fills a decided gap in bibliographical reference works and deserves

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.

☞ The prices of net books published under the rules of the American Publishers' Association are preceded in this list by a double asterisk , and the word net follows the price. The prices of fiction (not net) published under the rules are preceded by a dagger †. The prices of net books not covered by the rules, whether published by members of the American Publishers' Association or not, are preceded by a single asterisk, and the word net follows the price. ☜

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.: translations, c. tr.: n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); sq. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fe. 48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

Castle, Mrs. Agnes Sweetman and Egerton. The heart of Lady Anne; il. in color by Ethel Franklin Betts and numerous decorations by Frederick Garrison Hall. N. Y., F: A. Stokes Co., 1905. 10+260 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

Another of the author's love tales of the time of the Georges, picturing the gay life of London, its gaming, its routs, its intrigues, its artificialities. Lady Anne, "French Nan," as she is called, is married in haste to an English country squire, with whom she finds life a very dull affair. Yet after her various tantrums, she is surprised by her husband's willing consent to her visiting in London her friend Kitty Bellairs, now the Lady Kilcroney. How the rebellious wife disports herself in society, how she and Kitty fall out, how the country husband resorts to subterfuge to win back his errant wife, is told in true comedy style.

Cicero, Marcus Tullius. Cicero De senectute and De amicitia; with explanatory notes and a vocabulary by E. P. Crowell; rev. by B: W. Mitchell. N. Y., Hinds, Noble & Eldredge, [1905.] c. 5-231+71 p. 12°, (Chase and Stuart's new classical ser.) cl., 95 c.

Cornes, Ja. Modern housing in town and country; il. by numerous examples of municipal and other schemes of block dwellings, tenement houses, model cottages, and villages. N. Y., Scribner, [imported,] 1905. 4°, cl., *$3 net.

Crawford, Francis Marion. Salve Venetia: gleanings from Venetian history; il. by Jos. Pennell. N. Y., Macmillan, 1905. [D.] c. 2 v., 11+517; 10+441 p. O. cl., $5 net.

The first volume follows the history of Venice through the 15th century; the second brings it up to the present time. This is neither a guide book nor a dry history; but Mr. Crawford has given us "a novelist's treatment of a novelistic place," exercising his powers of imagination while not departing from the lines of truth. Such subjects as The last magistrates, The last great ladies, The last Doges, Manners and customs of the Venetians, etc., are separately treated. Appended are lists of the Doges, a table of dates, list of eminent men and women connected with Venice, and a three-page list of books consulted.

Crockett, S: Rutherford. Sir Toady Crusoe; il. by Gordon Browne. N. Y., F: A. Stokes Co., [1905.] 10+356 p. O. cl., †$1.50.

The adventures of two boys and a girl in a picturesque spot on the Scottish coast. Sir Toady Crusoe, the irrepressible, incorrigible, lovable youngster who figured in "Sir Toady Lion," again leads others into mischief and resourcefully extricates them. He and Dinky go off on an expedition to rescue the girl who has run away from home. They have amazing experiences on a light-house island, and at length return home so that Toady may act as go-between and matchmaker for his older brother who is grievously in love.

Crosby, Ernest. Garrison, the non-resistant. Chic., Public Publishing Co., [1905.] c. 141 p. por. S. cl., *50 c. net.

A sympathetic sketch of the career of William Lloyd Garrison, the great abolitionist, whose centenary of birth occurred Dec. 10, 1905. Discussions are included regarding the propriety of overcoming slavery by war and of the promotion of reform by peaceful methods, and a consideration, from an entirely original point of view, of the results of the Civil War in the South and in the North.

Queer Things About Japan

By DOUGLAS SLADEN. Large 8vo, $2.50 net.

More Queer Things About Japan

By DOUGLAS SLADEN and NORMA LORIMER. Large 8vo, $2.50 net.

The above two books are the most successful books of travel issued this year. In "More Queer Things About Japan" there are sixteen chapters by Miss Lorimer on "Japan from a woman's point of view," and two remarkable contributions from the Japanese—a life of Napoleon, written and illustrated by the Japanese about 1840, and "The Yoshiwara from Within," an account of the Public Harems of Japan. The famous letters of Will Adams, written from Japan 1611–1617, are also included.

JUST READY

The Second (or Supplementary Volume) of the American Catalog

1900-1905

The second volume of the new "American Catalog, 1900, '01, '02, '03, 04," is now ready for delivery.

The first volume, issued in June last, is a complete record in itself, being a dictionary-catalog of all books recorded between January 1, 1900, and January 1, 1905. In its one alphabet every book is entered at least three times (by author, title and subject), with information as to size, price, publisher, year of issue, etc. It forms the latest addition to the old series of the "American Catalogue," published in quarto form, while the newest volume is an octavo, which is generally conceded to be a much handier shape. We can reasonably affirm that every dealer needs such a permanent catalog in his business, while every library of importance should have this standard bibliographical work on its shelves, since its usefulness in the world of books is on a par with a time-table in the railroad world.

The second, or supplementary volume, contains the full title entries, with annotations, given in the "Weekly Record" of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY during the five years 1900, '01, '02, '03, '04, cumulated into one alphabet for each year; that is, into five alphabets. This is planned to answer the demands of librarians, booksellers and others who wish this valuable material, in available shape, for classifying and describing and for permanent reference.

For the book dealer the second volume is a very useful record of book valuation. It gives in form for ready reference brief descriptive notices of the important books published during the period mentioned, describing concisely the contents of each work and explaining many titles which, in themselves, mean little or nothing or are misleading. For descriptive cataloging, a bibliographical work of this kind is almost priceless.

The two volumes are uniformly bound in half morocco. The price is $12.00 for both or $7.50 for either separately. The edition is limited, only 230 copies of the first volume and 110 of the second volume remaining unsold. We reserve the right to advance the price when the balance of either is reduced to 100 copies.

CROWELL'S THIN PAPER CLASSICS

Do Not Let Your Stock Run Short

The "thin paper" book is emphatically the book of the present and of the future

THE NEW YORK TIMES REVIEW says:—

"Thin paper, if it has not revolutionized the book trade, has certainly given it a 'boost.' From the old-time English three-volume novel, to the modern single volume edition of the greatest classic, is a long step, made possible by the use of thin paper.

"A recent issue of good books in cheap and convenient form due to this excellent thin paper is Crowell's Thin Paper Classics. The series is well selected, and contains several of the books that the world is willing to call 'the best,' all well printed—more than well printed; excellently printed—in large type on thin but opaque paper, so that though there may be from five to eight hundred pages in a volume, it is never too large to slip easily into one's overcoat pocket or muff. The books are bound in flexible leather, red, blue or dark green; and certainly there can be no more grateful present to a person who has to travel than one or more of the dainty volumes of this very attractive series."

And THE OUTLOOK says similarly:—

"All bookbuyers regard with pleasure the new edition of famous books in this now popular and extremely attractive form. It is a triumph of modern bookmaking. The books are well printed, with perfectly legible type and bound in flexible leather. Some or all would decidedly make an acceptable holiday present."

STORIES FOR GIRLS

Betty Wales, Freshman

By MARGARET WARDE. Betty and her friends are typical American college girls, clever, jolly, high-spirited and lovable. They get all the fun and good possible out of their freshman year. Any one who meets them will wish to know them well. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

Betty Wales, Sophomore

By MARGARET WARDE. Those who knew Betty as a Freshman will be eager to follow her into Sophomore year. She and her friends are more interesting than ever. There is in every chapter the delightful atmosphere of the American College for girls. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

Polly the Gringo

By EVELYN RAYMOND. "Gringo" was a term applied by the Spanish natives of California to "Americanos" before California was in the Union. Polly Pancoast's father and brother went to California, and Polly followed them alone. Her experiences form a story of unusual charm in character and incident. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

An American Girl in Korea

By ANNIE M. BARNES. This very timely book offers a fascinating glimpse of the strange "Hermit Country." Margaret, although imprisoned in the underground dungeon of a monastery by Buddhist priests, whose mysterious rites she has witnessed, escapes and also frees a young artist. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

STORIES FOR BOYS

Winning His Way to West Point

By CAPT. PAUL B. MALONE, U. S. A. A thrilling story of a young recruit in the Philippines after the transfer to the United States. The scenes are those of camp, skirmish and battle. As a result of his bravery the hero wins an appointment to West Point. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

A Plebe at West Point

By CAPT. PAUL B. MALONE, U. S. A. Douglas Atwell won his cadetship by his bravery in the Philippines, and now appears at West Point. Capt Malone knows the cadet life at first hand, and his story will stir the blood of every reader. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

Fighting King George

By JOHN T. McINTYRE. Tom Deering was one of "Marion's Men," those fleet and daring riders who so baffled Tarleton and Clinton in the Carolinas. Tom sees lots of fighting and has the good fortune to be at Yorktown when Cornwallis gives up his sword. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

The Lost Expedition

By W. BERT FOSTER. This story, of how a professor and two young companions were lost on an Alaskan glacier, and how they escaped death in a dozen forms, has all the fascination of the old Arctic exploration narratives, with the zest of a stirring plot as well. Cloth, illustrated, $1.25.

STORIES FOR YOUNGER CHILDREN

Marjorie's Way

By ALICE TURNER CURTIS. Marjorie had two aims—to be like her aunt, and to help Luke Saunders. Luke turned out well and Marjorie did become like her aunt in a surprising way. A very wholesome and charming story. Cloth, illustrated, $1.00.

The Boynton Pluck

By HELEN WARD BANKS. Bob and Billy by mistake get into the hands of a mean old farmer, who overworks and half starves them. It takes pluck to stand it, but they pull through it, and are all the better for their experience. Cloth, illustrated, $1.00.

ISSUED FROM

THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY OFFICE

The Publishers' Weekly

Recognized as the representative of the publishing and bookselling interests in the United States. Contains full weekly record of American publications, with monthly indexes, cumulated quarterly, news of interest concerning the book trade, lists of "Books Wanted," (an advertising feature which each subscriber can use without cost to the extent of 100 lines per year,) etc., etc. Subscription, $3.00 a year; to foreign countries, $4.00 a year.

The American Catalog (New Series) 1900-1905

Five-year cumulation, Jan. 1, 1900-Jan. 1, 1905, giving in one alphabet, by author, title and subject, information of the books issued during the years covered by this period. It also contains a directory of over 3000 publishers, with street addresses. 8vo, half morocco, $7.50.

A second or Supplementary volume will be published in October, giving the full-title entries with annotations printed in the Weekly Record of The Publishers' Weekly, cumulated into an alphabet for each year, i.e., into five alphabets. This is planned to answer the demand of such libraries, bookdealers, and others who want the full material of The Publishers' Weekly bibliographical system in available shape. 8vo, uniform, half morocco, $7.50. The set of two, $12.

Of the previous series of THE AMERICAN CATALOGUE, quarto size, the earlier volumes are out of print. We have remaining a few copies of the volumes 1890-95 and 1895-1900, bound in half morocco, $15.00 each.

The Publishers' Trade List Annual

Contains the latest catalogues of upward of 200 American publishers, contributed by themselves and arranged alphabetically by the firm-names, with smaller lists at the end of the volume. Indispensable to every one who has any interest in the sale or purchase of books. Large 8vo, cloth, $2.00.

Indexes to the Publishers' Trade List Annual

The volume for 1902 contains an index, by author, title and subject catchword to the lists of the 246 publishers represented in the Catalogues included in the volume of THE TRADE LIST ANNUAL for 1902, furnishing by means of 140,000 entries, ready reference to the books of the leading publishers in print July 1, 1902. This volume, with The Supplementary Indexes for 1903-1904, in two alphabets (1589 8vo pages, double column, nonpareil type), bound in cloth, with thumb indexes, $7.00. (Only 27 copies remain.)

The Supplementary Index, 1903-1904, 500 pages, 8vo, cloth, with thumb index, $3.00. The alphabet in this volume is supplementary to the original Index of 1902.

NOTES IN SEASON.

McCLURE, PHILLIPS & Co. have postponed until January the publication of "Foster's Complete Bridge," by R. F. Foster; also, "The Cost of Competition," by Sidney A. Reeve.

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. will publish shortly "A Fishing Catechism," by Colonel R. F. Meysey-Thompson, author of "A Shooting Catechism," etc., who answers many questions or doubts that arise in the angler's mind on the subject of fishing "etiquette," salmon and trout fishing, dry-fly and wet-fly trout fishing, etc.

THE JOHN LANE COMPANY have just brought out in their Living Masters of Music Series, a biography of Professor Edward A. MacDowell, by Lawrence Gilman. Mr. MacDowell is only forty-three years old, but has to his credit over 130 pieces of music, the best known including concertos in A and D minor, the "Sonata Tragica" and "Sonata Civica" and the "Woodland Suite," besides a number of songs. For over eight years he held the chair of Professor of Music at Columbia University and is now rated high among the composers of the day. He is of Scotch descent, and was born in New York City.

THE FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY have in press a book of considerable attraction to all who are interested in United States history and the makeup of our complex population, entitled "The French Blood in America," by Lucian I. Fosdick. This book gathers up information which is often referred to but which is not available in any one volume. The author has collected a great deal of fascinating information of the French families that came to the colonies and the part they played in our development. He shows how names that are household words in American history—Revere, Faneuil, Bowdoin and Dana in New England; Jay, Desbrosses, Hamilton and a host of others in New York; Girard and Bayard in Pennsylvania—came from among the French refugees who sought asylum in our colonies at the time of the persecution of the Huguenots in France.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY have just ready the first volume of the new edition of Allbutt's "A System of Medicine;" "The Work of Preaching," by Professor Arthur S. Hoyt; a new edition of "The Conquest of Arid America," by Wm. E. Smythe; "A Text-Book on the Diseases of the Ear, Nose and Pharynx," by D. B. St. John Roosa, M.D., and Beaman Douglass, M.D.; Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," edited by Professor Hugh Moffatt, in Macmillan's Pocket Classics Series; a new edition of "The Tempters," by Henry Arthur Jones; "Physical Optics," by Professor Robert W. Wood; and "The Life and Death of Mr. Badman and The Holy War," by John Bunyan, in the series of Cambridge English Classics. They have also just ready a work on "The Modern Trust Company, its functions and organization," by F. B. Kirkbride and J. E. Sterrett, which gives a full description of the various lines of work in which a modern trust company engages, the duties of its officers, the relation of a trust company to the banking community and the public, etc., with facsimiles of many thoroughly up-to-date bookkeeping forms; also, the 1906 edition of "Who's Who," with several thousand additional biographies.

"The present investigation was begun while the author was a graduate student, at Cornell University, during the first three months of 1903. During that time the absorption spectra of 38 compounds were explored to 14 μ. It then became evident that in order to gain a better knowledge of infra-red spectra than obtained at that time, a very extended and systematic investigation would be necessary. This was made possible under an appointment as Research Assistant by the Carnegie Institution of Washington during the year following, June, 1903."

Little, Arthur Wilde, D.D. The times and the teaching of John Wesley. 2d ed. Milwaukee, Wis., Young Churchman Co., 1905. 14+68 p. por. D. cl., *40 c. net.
"I shall first give a picture of the sad religious state of England under the Georges. Next: I shall sketch briefly the life of the Founder of Methodism. . . . This I shall do in order to make a background on which to show the teaching of Wesley, the basic principles of his belief, the object of his 'Societies,' and his living and dying injunctions to his followers."—The Preface. The author, who is a clergyman of the Episcopal church, contends that Wesley's aim was avowedly to supplement, not to supplant, the English church; that he was loyally Anglo-Catholic; and that he strove to awaken the church to the work of saving souls, not to found a separate denomination.

Smith, Goldwin. Irish history and the Irish question. N. Y., McClure, Phillips & Co., 1905. [N.] 8+270 p. O. cl., $1.50 net.

Prof. Smith traces the general course of the history of Ireland and leads up to the present political situation. His interest and sympathy have been with Ireland throughout his life, as so many of his historical writings attest. In this survey of the Irish question, past and present, the author has tried to show what mistakes have been made both by the English and the Irish, and how a gradual improvement has been attained. He believes that a concession of larger self-government should be granted to Ireland rather than independence, for which the Nationalists clamor, or federation. The book is of special timeliness in view of the recent return to power of the Liberal party. Appendix contains an essay by Hugh J. McCann on "The Irish Land Code."

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

DECEMBER 23, 1905.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter for advertising pages should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

PUBLISHERS' TRADE-LISTS IN NEED OF REFORM.

A CORRESPONDENT makes the sensible suggestion that, "as the new year approaches and mankind feels like turning over a new leaf," publishers should consider abolishing that long-standing abomination of carrying on their trade-lists, year after year, the titles of books that have long been out of print, and as to which there is no intention of ever printing new issues. The evil, our correspondent thinks, is growing to such an extent that it will soon be as necessary for the bookseller to have periodical lists of books out-of-print as it is now to have regular lists of the new books.

The complaint of our correspondent, we regret to say, is only too well founded. The practice followed by many publishers of persistently carrying on their trade-lists the titles of books long out of print causes much annoyance and confusion, not to mention loss of valuable time in corresponding and messenger service, at all times of the year; but it causes particular vexation during the busy season when the bookseller is already tried—often to the verge of desperation—by the importunities and demands of unreasonable and impatient customers. A book is called for. It is not in stock. Reference to the latest trade bibliographies proves fruitless. Finally the bookseller turns to his customer with "Sorry, but I can't trace the book just now. I will look again and send you word. Possibly the book is out of print." "Oh, no," loftily comes from the customer, "the book is still published by Messrs. Blank. I saw it in their latest fall catalogue, published a month ago." A reference to the publishers' list in the latest volume of the "Publishers' Trade List Annual" proves that the customer is correct. "I see you are right, madam; I will have a copy in the store this afternoon and send it to you." With an I-told-you-so look the customer sweeps out of the store. The boy is sent breathless—as breathless as a boy can be—to the publishers. "The book is o. p.," comes back the word. Now, though the bookseller makes the proper explanation, the customer, having detected the bookseller in ignorance in the first instance, will no doubt remain unconvinced, and begin a crusade that will very likely keep all the booksellers in town "on the jump" until the customer convinces herself by writing to the publisher direct. Then the ghost will be laid, but not until, in the aggregate, a day's time has been wasted by the different booksellers applied to and after much bad feeling has been engendered. Does the publisher think this an exaggeration? Let him try "clerking" in a bookstore for a few days next week, and convince himself.

As we have time and again pointed out, the construction of trade catalogues is sadly in need of reform in more directions than one. An arrangement in one alphabet, by author and title, with a classified index, would perhaps answer a booksellers' purpose best. The titles should be as brief as possible; wordy advertising comment and illustrations are superfluous and confusing and have no value to the booksellers. Such matter may properly be inserted in special catalogues for the public. Recent titles, but for one season only, might be distinguished by special type, to assist the bookseller in making up his orders. Defunct books should be eliminated as the edition is exhausted, and the titles of books out of print, but that may be reprinted at some future time, should be carried in an appendix. Publishers are now spending large sums of money in preparing and printing for the trade lists that are of but small service in an emergency. We hold that for less money better and more serviceable catalogues could be gotten up for the trade and the public, through which, because their contents are readily accessible, many sales could be made that are now lost because the titles cannot be got at when wanted, especially by the non-professional who, as a rule, is unused to handling catalogues.

Two decisions on copyright, one pro and one contra to the true principles, or perhaps the desirable features, of copyright, are recorded in this week's issue. Judge Holt, reiterating the opinion of Judge Townsend, of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, handed down in November, 1904, in the important Werckmeister case holds, at least under the circumstances of this case, that notice of copyright on the original of work of art is not requisite as a sine qua non of copyright privilege and protection, and has granted an injunction. Judge Kohlsaat in the Merriam vs. Ogilvie case, regarding the reprint of two of the Webster smaller dictionaries, on which copyright undoubtedly exists in this country, holds that the omission of the United States notice of copyright on an edition printed in England from plates made in this country vitiated the copyright to that extent, and permitted the defendant, within the law, to reprint these particular dictionaries. Judge Kohlsaat, in rendering his decision, took the unusual course of expressing judicial regret that the law compelled him to this judgment. The decision is something of a surprise to copyright authorities, and has already been appealed from. Happily, it is proposed in the copyright revision to make clear that the United States copyright notice need not be required on copies printed for sale elsewhere than in the United States.

OMISSION OF NOTICE IN BOOKS PRINTED ABROAD INVALIDATES COPYRIGHT.

FOLLOWING is the decision rendered by Judge Kohlsaat in the suit brought by the G. & C. Merriam Company in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, (Eastern Division,) to restrain the United Dictionary Company, of Chicago, from publishing and offering for sale copies of "Webster's High School Dictionary" and "Webster's International Dictionary," which the Merriam Company published in England jointly with George Bell & Sons, with the omission of the American copyright notice:

The question in this case is whether one who publishes in this country a copyrighted book, containing due notice of copyright, and who subsequently takes the plates which are made from type set within the United States, and which were used in printing said copyrighted book, to England, and there in conjunction with another publisher publishes another edition of the book from said plates, intentially omitting therefrom the notice of the American copyright, can maintain a suit for infringement against another who imports a copy of the English book and proceeds to reproduce the same.

The only limit for the purposes of this hearing placed upon the right of the English publisher is contained in a written contract with him to the effect that he should not import the book or sell it for the purpose of importation into the United States. No breach of this condition is asserted. Defendant imported a copy of the English publication "for use" as he states and "not for sale" for the purpose of reproducing it in the United States. So far as the record shows, this and another subsequently imported by defendant were the only volumes of the English edition in the country. Defendant thereupon proceeded to photograph the book and make plates therefrom in this country, and to reproduce said imported book. The bill herein was filed to restrain defendant from such act. The case is now before the court on final hearing.

The copyright act prohibits the importation of a book not made from plates from type set in the United States, during the life of the copyright, but contains no prohibition as to a book made from type set in this country as was the case here. In the latter case there is no restriction placed upon importation, except that imposed by the revenue act, which it is not necessary here to consider. So far as disclosed in the agreed statement of facts, the two books in question were rightfully in the possession of defendant—as much so as though complainant had in person delivered the same to it without condition. If such an act constituted a publication within the terms of Section 4962 of the statute, which provides that no person shall maintain an action for the infringement of his copyright unless he shall give notice of his copyright by inserting in the several copies of every edition published the words prescribed by the section, then complainant falls within the prohibition, and cannot maintain this suit. I can see no distinction in legal effect between the status of the imported book under the above circumstances and that of a book published in this country from plates made here, which omits the requirements of notice prescribed in said Section 4962.

Any person desiring to take advantage of the copyright law must follow its provisions strictly. Wheaton v. Peters, 6 Peters, 593; Thompson v. Hubbard, 131 U. S. 123; Osgood v. Aloe Instrument Co., 83 Fed. 470.

It was held in Gottsberger v. Aldine Pub. Co., 33 Fed. Rep. 381, that a sale of one volume constituted a publication and came within the prohibition of the copyright statute. In the case of Larrows-Loisette v. O'Loughlin et al., 88 Fed. Rep. 896, the court decided that one claiming copyright could not free himself from the strict terms of the statute by disposing of or printing books in which copyright is claimed, to be used by others under a contract which bound them not to disclose the contents.

The volumes in question amounted in my opinion to such a publication as will bar the complainant from maintaining this suit. What might have been the effect if the English edition had retained the notice of copyright appearing in the American edition need not be discussed. Such a notice was of no moment in England, and might, conceivably, have been deemed detrimental to the sale of the book. The equities of the situation are with complainant, and it is with regret that I find myself driven to a legal conclusion which ignores them. The remedy rests with Congress and not with the courts. The bill is dismissed for want of equity.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S CANADIAN BRANCH.

It has been the policy of the parent house of Macmillan & Co., in London, to establish independent houses in the various English-speaking countries just as soon as it has been practicable to do so. Thus, some ten years ago, what had been the American branch in New York was incorporated as an independent house, with American money represented. Early in this year in the same manner a company was formed in Melbourne for the purpose of properly handling the Australian business of the Macmillan houses. There are also at present branches of the London house at Calcutta and Bombay.

"In Canada," according to the Montreal Bookseller and Stationer, "both the English and American houses have been doing each year an increasing business, until now it has been decided to establish in Toronto a company with a Canadian charter, having the whole Dominion for its field of operation. It is expected that the premises at 25-27 Richmont Street, West, will be ready for the commencement of business January 1.

"Frank Wise will be the first president, and will act in the capacity of general manager. He was associated for a number of years with the New York house in various departments, and comes well equipped to look after the interests of the Canadian trade. Although born in Boston, Lincolnshire, Mr. Wise has been a resident of the United States for a number of years, being interested in banking and newspaper work in the West prior to his connection with the Macmillans.

"It is the intention to keep in stock a full supply of Macmillan titles, English and American, and also those published by Adam & Charles Black, London. This will enable the Canadian bookseller to replenish his stock in the shortest time possible, and save unpleasant waits both for himself and his customer.

"Although the Toronto house will not carry them in stock, arrangements have been made by them with the New York house to supply on order the publications of the various firms for which the New York Macmillans act as American agents, for instance: Dent, Bell, Bohn Libraries, Cambridge University Press, Whittaker and several others. This arrangement will also be of immense accommodation to the bookselling trade of Canada."

REPORT OF THE LIBRARIAN OF CONGRESS.

The annual report of Herbert Putnam, Librarian of Congress, for the fiscal year 1905 shows that the library now contains 1,344,618 books, 82,744 maps and charts (pieces), 183,724 prints (artist) and 410,352 pieces of music. The manuscripts have not been enumerated, pending grouping into volumes. The law library contains 110,978 volumes.

The important collections acquired by purchase during the year were the Keller collection of Year Books, the papers of John J. Crittenden, the papers of Duncan McArthur and of William Allen, manuscript records of Barbados, papers of Franklin Pierce and a collection of Burmese sacred writings, being examples of the purest Buddhistic texts. They are Ola manuscripts (on palm leaves).

The map collection was enriched by the purchase of seventy-two manuscript maps, which belonged to Richard, first Earl Howe, commander of the English fleet in America, 1776-'77. The more important gifts to the library were received by the manuscript division.

Among gifts, the first to be mentioned in the report were the Breckinridge papers, the gift of Miss Sophonisba Preston Breckinridge and Desha Breckinridge, comprising letters, etc., of John Breckinridge (1760-1806), his son John (1797-1841), Robert Jefferson Breckinridge (1800-'71), and W. C. P. Breckinridge (1837-1905). Mrs. Smith Thompson Van Buren gave 860 letters, received by Martin Van Buren while Secretary of State, Vice-President and President. The library now possesses papers of nine of the Presidents of the United States, namely, Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Van Buren, Polk, Pierce and Johnson. The collection of Andrew Johnson papers received an addition of fifteen letters written by Johnson. The print division received a collection of facsimile reproductions of engravings by the old masters as a gift from the government of Germany.

The librarian directs attention to the financial advantages to the libraries of the country resulting from the distribution of printed catalogue cards. He estimates the saving to subscribing libraries in the current year to be not less than $88,000. The library was visited during the year by 923,116 persons. The librarian says of the copyright laws:

> There have been many endeavors to perfect our copyright laws, but they have been sporadic, as a rule directed to one particular defect, and generally undertaken by the single interest having a grievance, or, perhaps, even less fortunately, by advocates of an abstract justice which ran counter to a particular interest. The proposed legislation recognizes certain definite defects which entail certain substantial hardships.

AN EXHIBIT OF PRINTING.

The Society of Printers, Boston, which is devoted to the study and development of the art of printing, is to hold an exhibition of printing in the Boston Public Library, January 1 to January 29, 1906. As a guide to this exhibition the society has compiled and will shortly publish a handbook of about forty-eight pages, giving a general outline of the story of the printing art. It has been proposed that a small permanent printing exhibition be formed from the material displayed, to be lent to such public libraries as may desire to present it, and a committee has been appointed to consider this proposition. Librarians who are interested could probably have this exhibition for little more than cost of transportation by addressing Henry L. Johnson, Secretary, Society of Printers, 4 Joy Street, Boston, Mass.

THE NOBEL PRIZES.

THE Nobel literary prize has been awarded to Sienkiewicz, the Polish author. The Nobel peace prize, valued at $40,000, went to Baroness Bertha von Suttner, an Austrian writer, author of "Die Waffen Nieder," ("Down with Arms,") a novel which was designed to spread the idea of peace existing at the time of its publication (1889) in England and the United States throughout Germany and Austria.

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

ALLEGED INFRINGEMENT OF COPYRIGHT IN "THE MASQUERADER."

HARPER & BROTHERS have filed a bill against M. A. Donahue & Co. and George W. Ogilvie & Co., in the U. S. Circuit Court of Illinois, at Chicago, charging them with infringement of their copyright in "The Masquerader." Judge Kohlsaat, on the 18th inst., set the case for hearing, ordering that defendants be restrained under the bill until the hearing.

COPYRIGHT IN PAINTING UPHELD.

FOR the second time a decision was handed down on December 18 in the federal courts concerning the copyright of the painting "The Chorus," owned by the artist, W. Dendy Sadler, and exhibited in the London Royal Academy in 1894. Judge Holt, of the U. S. District Court, in New York, reiterating the opinion of Judge Townsend, of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, rendered in November, 1904, (a substantial part of which was given in THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, May 13, 1905,) sustains the contention of the plaintiff, that under the circumstances of the case, a painting or sculpture need not be marked "copyright" to protect them from piracy, and granted an injunction. Emil Werckmeister brought the action against the American Lithograph Company and the American Tobacco Company, charging them with having violated his copyright on the painting which he obtained rights from the artist for a photographic reproduction.

COMMUNICATIONS.

FOR ELIMINATING "O. P." BOOKS FROM PUBLISHERS' LISTS.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

SIR: As the new year approaches, and mankind in general feels like turning over a new leaf, I wish you might suggest some means that would induce publishers in general to reduce that standing abomination of keeping year after year title of books on their catalogues that are out of print, and of which there is little hope that they will ever be in print.

This evil is growing to such an extent that a monthly cumulation of books out of print will be as much a necessity to a bookseller as an index to new books. As it now stands the new catalogues of some of our big publishers are of little real use to a bookseller who sells books. I for one would be willing to pay for a journal or monthly list that would supply information about out-of-print books, whether temporary or for any cause. Each publisher could do this by revising his own lists, but will he do it? H. H. TIMBY.

DECEMBER 18, 1905.

OBITUARY NOTES.

WILLIAM SHARP, poet, essayist and novelist, died in Sicily, December 14. Mr. Sharp was born September 12, 1856, at Garthland Place, near Paisley, Scotland. After graduating he travelled extensively and, in 1879, settled down in London as an essayist and magazine writer. Through Philip Bourke Marston he came to know Rossetti, whose biographer he was later. In the same year that the life of Rossetti appeared, 1882, Sharp published "The Human Inheritance, Transcripts from Nature and Other Poems." This was followed two years later by "Earth's Voices," with the same explanatory sub-title. In 1884 he married a Highland relative, Elizabeth Amelia Sharp, with whom he collaborated in much literary work. They were joint authors of "Lyra Celtica," an anthology of English poems by Celtic writers, and Mrs. Sharp also was editor of "Women's Voices," and edited "Sea Music" and "Women Poets of the Victorian Era," etc. He collaborated with Blanche Willis Howard in the novel "A Fellowe and His Wife," a story told in letters. Mr. Sharp lived much in Italy and France and he visited this country three times, the fruit of one visit being an anthology of "American Sonnets." He compiled an anthology of sonnets entitled "Sonnets of This Country," which has had a score of editions; an anthology of "Great Odes," and wrote two plays for the stage. He was also the editor of "The Canterbury Poets." Concurrently with the announcement of Mr. Sharp's death, his friend, Richard Whiteing, reveals the fact that Sharp was the author of the Celtic romances published under the pseudonym of "Miss Fiona Macleod." The works issued under this name include "Pharais: a Romance of the Isles," "The Mountain Lovers," "The Sin-Eater," "The Washer of the Ford," "Green Fire," "The Dominion of Dreams," "The Divine Adventure," and also several volumes of poetry.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

MANY reports to the contrary notwithstanding, Mrs. Humphry Ward's present plans will not bring her to this country before the fall or early winter of next year.

LUCAS MALET, (Mrs. St. Leger Harrison,) has finished another novel, to the construction of which she has devoted the better part of four years. She has published nothing since her fascinating, though repelling, book, "Sir Richard Calmady," excited the world of novel readers. The new work as yet has not been christened.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

In commemoration of the two-hundredth anniversary of the birth of Franklin the January Century will publish an estimate of "Franklin in France," from the pen of the late John Hay—a study prepared some years ago for delivery in Chicago, then laid aside because of ill-health. This witty and scholarly review of Franklin's service abroad will be illustrated with the Cochin portrait, made in France in 1777.

The University of Chicago Press will add to its list of publications two new journals to be devoted to the interests of the ancient classics, namely, Classical Philology, a quarterly, edited by Professor Edward Capps, of the University of Chicago, and the Classical Journal, to be published eight times a year and edited by Professors Arthur Fairbanks, of the University of Iowa, and J. Laing, of the University of Chicago.

The International Studio for January contains an article on "The Tonal School of America," by Mrs. Clara Ruge, fully illustrated from the paintings of Henry Ranger, Louis Paul Dessar, F. Ballard Williams, Paul Dougherty and others. Under the title "Nature's Aid to Design" appears an introductory article to a series of photographic reproductions of flowers adapted for the use of decorators, designers and art students. The paintings of Elizabeth Nourse, an American artist, are described with illustrations in an article by Anna Seaton Schmidt. Franz Von Lenbach is the subject of an appreciation by Professor Hubert von Herkomer. Among the color inserts are reproductions of the paintings by Franz Von Lenbach, John Hassall, Carolus Duran and Watteau.

Sherwin Cody, author of "The Art of Short Story Writing," will begin next month a small humorous monthly entitled The Touchstone, described as "a human, sensible, amusing, critical review of the great world of women, literature, and the arts." Among the January contributors will be Leston Taylor, who has written some verses about "The Critics on Bernard Shaw," and Clyde Newman's caricature portrait of Robert Herrick "in the act of demonstrating his latest novel, 'Brain works of an American.'" The regular features will be some hitherto unpublished epigrams, satirical comments, etc., by the late Walter Blackburn Harte, under the heading "Bubble and Squeak" and "Behind the Veil," a short paper on the world of woman. The cover has been designed by Fred. Goudy.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

The Church Library Association, Cambridge, Mass., has published a useful "List of Books for the Advent Season of 1905," recommended for Sunday-school and Parish Libraries, giving upwards of 170 titles of new books and new editions, most of them with annotations. No charge is made for the catalogue, but contributions of ten cents and upwards would ensure the continuance of the work by meeting the expense of printing and mailing. (20 p. 16°.)

Longmans, Green & Co. have nearly ready a "Catalogue of Fifteenth Century Books in the Library of Trinity College and Marsh's Library, Dublin," with several books from a few other collections, compiled by T. K. Abbott, librarian of Trinity College, Dublin, Ireland. The catalogue is believed to be fairly complete. The volume will include several colored reproductions of illuminated initial letters from some Plutarch volumes, and texts and other illustrations in half-tone from Horace, Psalterium and the "Purgatory of St. Patrick."

The Grolier Club, New York, has just completed its "Catalogue of Original and Early Editions of Some of the Poetical and Prose Work of English Writers from Wither to Prior, with Collations, Notes and more than 200 facsimiles of title-pages and frontispieces." The work, in three octavo volumes, is the second in a series of bibliographies of English writers, the first, issued in 1893, covering the period from Langland to Wither. Like the first series, this one has been prepared for the use and guidance of collectors, and will be welcomed by all lovers of old English books. The edition consists of 400 copies on paper, and three on Roman vellum. The price has been fixed at $30 the set.

Catalogues of New and Second-Hand Books.—Ellis's, 29 New Bond St., London, A choice collection of bookbindings and a series of works on bibliography and kindred subjects. (No. 190, 673 titles, 6*d*.)—Joseph McDonough, Albany, N. Y., Scarce Americana, art, music, and general literature. (No. 213, 570 titles.)—T. de Marinis & Co., Florence, Italy, Rare books, manuscripts and autographs. (No. 3, 721 titles.)—Shepard Book Co., Salt Lake City, Utah, Americana, Lincolniana, Indians, autographs, legal miscellany, etc. (No. 16, 24 p. 12°.)—H. H. Timby, Conneaut, O., Miscellaneous. (No. 35, 36 p. 8°.)—Adolf Weigel, Leipzig, Rare books on literature, art and science. (No. 84, 740 titles.)—Edgar A. Werner, Albany, N. Y., Curious, interesting and out-of-the-way books. (No. 23, 866 titles.)

BUSINESS NOTES.

Auburn, Neb.—L. N. Smith has opened a bookstore here.

Bessemer, Ala.—The book and stationery store of O. E. Randall was destroyed by fire recently, causing the destruction of most of the stock before it could be extinguished. Most of the Christmas goods had been received, and the loss on this account is very heavy. The loss is estimated at about $5000, with insurance of $3000.

Chicago, Ill.—The Farquhar & Albrecht Company has been incorporated to do a wholesale business in new and second-hand school and college text books. They have also acquired the publications of the Oliver Adams Publishing Company, including the Union Series of registers, records and school blanks. J. D. Farquhar has retired, and G. A. Albrecht, for many years with the C. M.

Barnes Company, is president of the new company.

GRAND-VIEW-ON-HUDSON, N. Y.—W. W. Hinton & Co., has been incorporated to deal in books, periodicals, etc., by A. Chalmers Hinton, James N. Taylor and Warren A. Shenkowitz.

MARIONVILLE, Mo.—E. L. Adams, bookseller, has sold out.

NEW YORK CITY.—Carlton's Book Supply has been incorporated to print and publish literary publications, by Edward Stratton, Frederick Steinbuhler and Stanley A. Ulbig.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Lossing History Company has been incorporated to publish books, magazines, etc., by James D. Thomas, John Hovendon, Henry S. Haskell, Henry W. Knight and James C. Bailey.

ONTARIO, CAL.—G. R. Holbrook, bookseller, has sold out to E. D. Abrams.

ST. JOHN, WASH.—Rowe Bros., booksellers, have sold out to P. L. Taylor.

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN.—Rolf & Son have opened a book and stationery store here.

WAYNE, NEB.—C. A. Berry has opened a book, stationery and toy store here.

WILLIAMSPORT, PA.—The Updegraff Company, (S. G. and N. S. Updegraff,) have taken over the old established Dean Bookstore, opposite the post-office, and will continue it with John M. Dean as manager.

WINSTED, CONN.—William L. Canty, bookseller, has discontinued business.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

"THE WORLD ALMANAC," for 1906, will be ready January 1. This almanac from the start has stood at the head of its class, and year by year has held its place as an up-to-date encyclopedia in condensed and handy shape.

FOX, DUFFIELD & Co. will publish early next year "The Eternal Spring," a novel of Italian life by Neith Boyce, with illustrations by Blendon Campbell, whose covers on some of the Christmas magazines this season have attracted attention.

THE FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY are bringing out a limited edition of Dr. Alfred T. Schofield's "The Knowledge of God: Its Meaning and Power." The author here departs from his usual subjects of philosophical psychology and health, and writes on a purely religious topic.

THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY have just ready "The Storm Signal," the first novel of a new Southern writer, Gustave H. Mertins. "The Storm Signal" is a frank treatment of the negro question by a Southerner well able to reveal the Southern view of the problem. The pictures are by Arthur I. Keller.

JOHN A. MCQUILLAN, well known through his long connection with George Routledge & Sons, and who is passing his days in darkness —having lost his sight some years ago—has removed from Guymon, Okla., to 630 North Emporia Avenue, Wichita, Kan. He would be pleased to hear from his old friends in the trade.

L. C. PAGE & Co. have in preparation, for publication next spring, a new volume by Nathan Gallizier, author of "Castel del Monte." The new book, entitled "The Sorceress of Rome," deals largely with psychological problems, and is a romance of Rome in the 11th century, a field hitherto unworked.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS, as already announced, will give its twenty-first annual dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria, on Thursday evening, December 28. The committee desires to remind those who wish to be present that the exercises will begin promptly at 7:30 P.M. Those who have not yet bespoken tickets may obtain them from John Hovenden at 156 Fifth Avenue. Tickets are $10 each; tickets for members include the dues for the ensuing year.

EDWIN BORMANN, of Leipzig, claims to have discovered indubitable evidence that Bacon wrote Shakespeare's plays. The evidence is said to cover the reason for Bacon's secrecy, an explanation of the word Shakespeare, the relations of Bacon to the actor who served as his shield, and other matters throwing light on the subject, written in verse in English, Latin and French, and signed by Francis Bacon. The results of Mr. Bormann's investigations will be published early next year.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have just brought out in their Music Story Series "The Story of the Harp," by W. H. Grattan Flood. The book traces the earliest form of the harp in Egypt, Assyria, Babylonia and Persia, its associations and use in the temples of the Jews, its introduction into the service of the Christian Church, its use in Ireland in the sixth century, with the stories of noted Irish saints and harpists, and the revivals of the popularity of the instruments are described in the activity of Handel, Adam, Mozart, Hugh Kelly and others. The book is illustrated.

THE centenary of the famous battle of Austerlitz, which was celebrated in France on December 2, has been commemorated in a sumptuous volume entitled "Austerlitz, 1805-1905." The text, printed in French, on vellum, by Lahure, is taken from the well-known memoirs of General Baron de Marbot, illustrated with water-colors by Alexandre Lunois, engraved by Leon Boisson and printed in colors by Wittmann, of Paris. Subscriptions will be received by the Librairie Conquet, (L. Carteret & Co.,) or may be placed through any dealer in foreign books.

METHUEN & Co., London, have published the "Howard Letters and Memories," by William Tallack. The volume, which is of interest to all classes of social workers, contains more than one hundred letters from well-known writers, statesmen and philanthropists, among them a number of Americans, such as Whittier, Rutherford B. Hayes, Dr. E. C. Wines and others, addressed to the secretary of the Howard Association, a society founded, under the patronage of Lord Brougham and others, for promoting the best methods of dealing with crime and pauperism.

A READER of Trine's "In Tune with the Infinite" is at present distributing upwards of 2000 copies of this book to his friends and business associates. The Life Books, of which this is one, have reached a combined circulation of over 300,000 copies. There is always an especially great demand for them during the holiday season. A Japanese and a Russian edition of the above mentioned book, in addition to the eight editions and translations already published, are now being negotiated for. Of the foreign editions so far published the largest demand has been for the German.

DODD, MEAD & Co. have in preparation a new book by George Barr McCutcheon, entitled "Cowardice Court," which will be published next spring in an attractive form, similar to his "The Day of the Dog," with illustrations in color by Harrison Fisher; "My Sword for Lafayette," the first historical novel ever written by Max Pemberton, which attracted much favorable attention as a serial; a new novel, yet to be named, by Beatrice Harraden; also, "A Lame Dog's Diary," by S. MacNaughton, author of "The Fortune of Christina McNab," a charming love story having its scenes in a quaint little English village.

THOMAS WHITTAKER, New York, has just published a contribution to the science of railroading, entitled "The Ways of Our Railways," by Charles H. Grinling, who goes into the subject extensively, yet in a popular and interesting form. The book is profusely illustrated. Among the timely books just issued by Mr. Whittaker for the holiday season are "The Holy Christ Child," a devotional study of the "Incarnation of the Son of God," by Rev. Archibald Campbell Knowles; and "The Bible for the Sick," compiled by the Rev. Henry King Hannah, intended as suitable selections of sacred Scripture for personal reading by the "shut-ins."

JOHN MURRAY, London, has been entrusted with the publication of the life of the late Duke of Argyll, which has been edited by the Dowager Duchess. The first part consists of a full and carefully prepared autobiography. In this are recorded the Duke's early years, his parentage and childhood, his surroundings and studies, especially in science and natural history. Succeeding to the title in 1847, he at once began to take an active part in politics, and in 1853 was admitted to Lord Aberdeen's Cabinet as Lord Privy Seal. The record of what passed in the cabinet both before and during the Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny will afford much new light on these events. With the mutiny the autobiography, which was written from 1897 to 1900, ends, and the remainder of the "Life" is derived from the Duke's diaries and correspondence.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. have made arrangements to publish in this country what may be regarded as an introduction to a contemplated comprehensive work on the expedition into the Central Tian-Shan Mountains carried out during 1902 and 1903 under the leadership of Dr. Gottfried Merzbacher, namely, his report published under the authority of the Royal Geographical Society of Great Britain. The expedition was undertaken to get more thorough information of the orographical and geological structure and of the flora and fauna and glaciers of the Tian-Shan region. The present report was written in Tashkend, immediately after the return of the expedition from the mountains. Its purpose is to "give particulars of the itinerary of the expedition and a general narrative of its experiences, specially those new or hitherto unknown." The volume is illustrated with half-tones, mainly from photographs, and these pictures have been selected from a collection numbering over 2000.

RAPHAEL TUCK, SONS & Co have again brought out for the holiday season a large and varied line of Art Calendars in colors and photogravure, and Christmas and New Year cards and booklets and post-cards. Among the more striking of the calendars—and they are all beautiful in their way—are "Turner's Venice," beautiful reproductions, in colors, of Turner's paintings; "In the Netherlands," photogravure reproductions of well-known Dutch paintings; "Way Down the Suwanee River," a tambourine-shaped calendar with pictures of negroes in colors; and the "Little Geisha" calendar, a fan-shaped design with pictures of Japanese girls. Two Dickens calendars—"In Dickens's Land" and "Charles Dickens"—will appeal to lovers of the great novelist. The productions of the house have attained so high a reputation for consistent excellence, both in artistic conception and in material execution, that it is quite superfluous to repeat the warm commendations we have so often expressed in previous years.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY will publish early next month Winston Spencer Churchill's biography of his father, the late Lord Randolph Churchill. Lord Randolph was not simply a clever man; he was one of the ablest men of his age—a pre-eminent party leader, and a power both in and out of Parliament. Among other distinctions he was the founder of the Tory Democracy. It is curious to note that his son, who has carried the Tory Democracy to its logical conclusion, brings out the biography of his father just as he becomes Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in a Liberal Government. They will also bring out early in the new year a volume entitled "The Arbiter," concerning which there seems to be more or less mystery. The author's name is not given, and the volume, which is more or less in the form of Walton's "Compleat Angler," consists in a dialogue of which the chief part is carried on by the personage known as "The Arbiter." The horrors and the needlessness of war, the advantages of arbitration, and the blessings of peace are his main themes.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & Co. will publish on January 17 Miss Ellen Glasgow's new novel, "The Wheel of Life." Miss Glasgow, after winning brilliant success as an interpreter of Virginia life, shifts the scene of her new novel to New York City. The hero is a literary man. It is the largest and most ambitious novel so far by the author of "The Deliverance." In February they will bring out "The Dog Book," by James Watson, complete in two volumes. Later will follow a posthumous work by the late Henry Demarest Lloyd, entitled "Man, the Social Creator." For the several years before his death Mr. Lloyd planned to write a book on religion, which should embody his conception of man as a creator and potential god, and wherein the manifestations of this creative ability which are to be seen in many parts of the world should be described. This desire of Mr. Lloyd's led him to visit Europe and Australasia to investigate the various governmental and co-operative experiments which he thought expressive of what he called social love. These experiments he depicted in books already published, but the manuscript which he prepared for publication under the name of "Man, the Social Creator," contains his matured and deepest thought on the significance of those endeavors.

THE GRAFTON PRESS, New York, will publish early next month a new book by Henry Wallace Phillips, whose "Red Saunders" has made him known the country over. The new book is entitled "Mr. Scraggs," and is the personal account of incidents in the strenuous life of one of Red Saunders's pals. Mr. Scraggs, although at times a mournful individual, has added considerably to the hilarity of such parts of the country as have had the good fortune to make his acquaintance. These various adventures of his have appeared from time to time in the Saturday Evening Post and McClure's Magazine. They also announce an interesting book for immediate publication. It is a reprint of Edward Hall's famous "Chronicle of Henry the Eighth," in two volumes, the edition being limited to 100 sets for sale in America. Charles Whibley, the well-known English writer, has contributed a striking introduction. This book was completed by Richard Grafton in 1550, but as its destruction was ordered by Queen Mary in 1555, it is to-day excessively rare, and it is probable that no complete copy is in existence. It is an authentic, contemporary record. The chronicler had a keen eye for the pomp and show which were at once Henry's delight and policy. This reprint has been made from the edition of 1550.

AUCTION SALES.

JANUARY 2, 3, 10 A.M. and 2 P.M.—Library of H. M. Rice, of Providence, together with books from two other private libraries in Providence, including a large collection of books relating to the history of, and printed in, Providence, the rare original manuscript map of Rhode Island of the survey of 1720, etc. (1533 lots.)—Libbie.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted" book-trade subscribers are given the privilege of a free advertisement for books out of print, of five nonpareil lines, exclusive of address, in any issue except special numbers, to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents a line, and amount should be inclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents a line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents a nonpareil line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents a nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

BOOKS WANTED.

☞ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

☞ Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly" does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

For the Bookseller and Librarian

The Second (or Supplementary Volume) of the American Catalog

1900-1905

The second volume of the new "American Catalog, 1900, '01, '02, '03, 04," is now ready for delivery.

The first volume, issued in June last, is a complete record in itself, being a dictionary-catalog of all books recorded between January 1, 1900, and January 1, 1905. In its one alphabet every book is entered at least three times (by author, title and subject), with information as to size, price, publisher, year of issue, etc. It forms the latest addition to the old series of the "American Catalogue," published in quarto form, while the newest volume is an octavo, which is generally conceded to be a much handier shape. We can reasonably affirm that every dealer needs such a permanent catalog in his business, while every library of importance should have this standard bibliographical work on its shelves, since its usefulness in the world of books is on a par with a time-table in the railroad world.

The second, or supplementary volume, contains the full title entries, with annotations, given in the "Weekly Record" of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY during the five years 1900, '01, '02, '03, '04, cumulated into one alphabet for each year; that is, into five alphabets. This is planned to answer the demands of librarians, booksellers and others who wish this valuable material, in available shape, for classifying and describing and for permanent reference.

For the book dealer the second volume is a very useful record of book valuation. It gives in form for ready reference brief descriptive notices of the important books published during the period mentioned, describing concisely the contents of each work and explaining many titles which, in themselves, mean little or nothing or are misleading. For descriptive cataloging, a bibliographical work of this kind is almost priceless.

The two volumes are uniformly bound in half morocco. The price is $12.00 for both or $7.50 for either separately. The edition is limited, only 230 copies of the first volume and 110 of the second volume remaining unsold. We reserve the right to advance the price when the balance of either is reduced to 100 copies.

THE Centenary of the famous battle of Austerlitz, which was celebrated on December 2d, has been commemorated on the same day by a wonderful French publication:

AUSTERLITZ

the text of which was taken from the well-known relations of General BARON DE MARBOT. It is illustrated with splendid water-colors by ALEXANDRE LUNOIS, and engraved, in color, by LEON BOISSON, the prominent French artists.

Only 300 copies were issued, on vellum paper, the text printed by LAHURE, and engravings by WITTMANN, in Paris, at the uniform price of Frcs. 300. Subscriptions will be received at the well-known
